Mr. Spaulding said, it was not to force Walcott upon the town, but to show he is the choice of the people of West Peabody, that he had come to advocate him. (Here he read a petition signed by fifty or sixty inhabitants of West Peabody asking for the appointment of Mr. Walcott.) These signers are the residents and property holders of that part of the town and represent 19-20 of the wealth of West Peabody, and are the men who most use the roads. You know all these men, they are men of intelligence and honor. They are the "conservative power, the balance wheel of the town as it were." We come to you now with this petition from these people, touching on their own highways and ask you for the reappointment of one they know. They know his good qualities and his bad qualities and they ask for his appointment because they believe him to be the best man for West Peabody. The vote as passed placing this matter in the hands of the Selectmen makes them virtually the surveyors. He was willing their work should be assigned them, but did not believe the roads should be under their supervision. If that is to be the case, make it general, why single out the Rocks and West Peabody. Don't you think we are as competent as the residents of this part of the village? The Selectmen have already had something to do with our roads; one across my meadow was very narrow, and I estimated the cost of widening it at $800. Mr. Walcott said $600, and the town voted that amount and left it in the hands of the Selectmen to spend. They advertised for proposals, the road was built higher where it was the highest and nothing was done where it was the lowest. Only $300 was spent or thrown away, as the Selectmen have made a "botch" of it and thrown away the town's money. Another road in front of my house, a few posts were set and he pushed them over with his hands. Since then he got a wall put up by trading. We had one year's experience under the village superintendent of the roads and there was $1400 spent and $13 out of $14 was thrown away. It made him seasick to ride over the roads of the village superintendent in that part of the town; they were all cradled out. In regard to the Rocks, the gravel was taken from a cemetery and the streets were macadamized with the bones of a graveyard; that is the management of the board of Selectmen, they desecrated those graves and now you want to put the roads under the charge of the same Selectmen who would sell the bones of the pauper dead at ten cents a load. He would excuse no man's crime, but would throw the mantle of charity over him and he only wanted now to plead for a fair chance for Mr. Walcott and asked for his appointment for his faithful service and on the ground of merit. He would speak of money afterwards.

Mr. Osborn said you see what a disadvantage I labor under. I can't give you a long sensational, high-fallutin oration which signifies nothing after all. I was not born with the gift of "gab" nor have I been a life long public speaker or pulpit orator. You know the circumstances in this case. It isn't pleasant for me to stand here and give the particulars. You know the money should not pass through Mr. Walcott's hands, that is the whole thing. The roads must have been in first class condition at West Peabody or these men must have signed the paper to get rid of the party soliciting them. These are disagreeable things for me to say and to get rid of this difficulty it was recommended to put the matter in the hands of the Selectmen. Can't you see how this committee is situated, could they under the circumstances recommend him? Suppose he went back on the town this year? To get out of such a position we put it in the hands of the Selectmen. Look at So. Peabody; we hear complaints from all hands, the roads are in a fearful condition. If South and West Peabody could agree we should like to have them. The committee want to do the best thing possible. What better way could they do? Mr. Bancroft said the people of South Peabody had met and agreed to support J. B. Newhall for surveyor from that part of the town. He had always voted to keep Mr. Walcott in his position, but if he wanted both parts of the town this year he could not support him, as his neighbors and friends had recommended someone else. He believed in home rule for both South and West Peabody, and he was in favor of the motion to reconsider.

The speaker thought Mr. Walcott's financial condition was not sufficient grounds for the opposition to him. Mr. Walcott had handled thousands of dollars and not like some, become rich, but had become poor. He did not think because a trustee process had been served on the town, it was any excuse for not recommending Mr. Walcott. If the town had lost anything he would make it good to them. He did not agree with the attack of Mr. Spaulding on the Selectmen, and didn't believe they should be charged with desecrating grave yards. The people want a surveyor, they can see and grumble to. This was no new subject; it had come up annually for the past twenty years, and with one exception the town had always disagreed with the finance committee. Mr. Blaney was in favor of re-consideration. He knew Mr. Walcott's faults and as a workman he was a good one and with ordinary supervision would make a good surveyor. And he would say to the Selectmen that a little supervision of the man in this part of the town would do no harm. W. P. Clark thought perhaps the Selectmen would appoint Mr. Walcott. S. A. Southwick said that if Mr. Spaulding was willing to make reckless statements as well as untrue he would not reply to them. As to Mr. Walcott he said before the Legislative committee he had had plenty of money to do his work with, and now he said he did not. In his opinion if a prudent man did the work there was money enough. The surveyor in this part of the town would make $75 go farther than $100 up there. The motion to reconsider was then put and carried by a vote of 92 Yes, 77 No. Mr. Bancroft then moved the names of John G. Walcott for Surveyor of West Peabody and J. B. Newhall for So. Peabody, and it was carried. Mr. Osborn said the finance committee neglected to recommend $50 for the use of hose companies outside of the brick house and made a motion to that effect and it was carried.

Mr. Spaulding moved that the surveyors be placed on equal pay, that those at South and West Peabody should receive the same pay per day that they worked as Mr. Besse. Mr. Osborn said Mr. Besse's time is wholly devoted to his work; he gives his whole attention to it and can do no other work, and he has a large territory to look after. The others must have other business, they simply take their own time for the roads, and will have plenty of time to attend to their farm and ice business. These are the reasons governing the report of the committee. Mr. Spaulding said West Peabody was represented on the school committee, on the Board of Selectmen and they both drew the same pay as the village members. Now the surveyors of the the town should be put on an equal footing. Why should the surveyor of this part of the town who is paid the year round receive more pay than the others who work only a portion of the year. There are reasons why they should receive more per day because they must work on the roads in the longest days and when they must neglect their other work. Mr. Besse draws a good pay for all the year round and if he is unable to work his pay goes on just the same. If we pay Mr. Besse too much let us reduce his pay and if we don't let us make the others equal with him.

Mr. Bancroft thought the custom was established last year and he didn't want to go back to the custom of former years. Last year they drew equal pay for the amount of work. If he is a competent man he didn't see why he should not be as well paid for his labor. Mr. Osborn replied that it was a different case from what Mr. Bancroft represented. It required but a short time o the year for the roads, and would not interfere with any other business a man had to carry on. If they were dependent on their daily labor it would be another thing. The motion was then carried.

The report of the finance committee as amended was accepted; 144 Yes, 0 No.

The article relating to scales at West Peabody led to a little discussion. The Selectmen recommended an appropriation not to exceed $200 and that they be located near the residence of B. Harrison Taylor. Jas. P. King thought $150 was enough, and moved to substitute that amount. Messrs. Southwick, Linehan, Marsh and others spoke on it and Mr. King's motion was lost, and the recommendations of the Selectmen adopted by a vote of 93 to 0.

The report of the committee to whom was referred Article 36 relating to a culvert on Central street was read. They recommended an appropriation of $1300 for the building of it. They also put on a "rider" giving their opinion about the sewerage question.

Jonathan King moved as an amendment that the abuttors be assessed 1-10 of the expense. Jas. P. King did not sign the report because of the resolution attached and he didn't believe that a system of drainage would be needed for twenty years. Mr. Marsh said he did not ask the abuttors to pay part of the expense because he thought it was dangerous to let the water flow over the streets as it does there, and the town would be liable for any damage. The matter was further discussed by Mr. King and Mr. Bancroft. Mr. Blaney moved to recommit the report to the committee that they might see the abuttors and it was carried.

The Selectmen reported on Article 41 that it would be expedient to recover a part of the bridge at "Poole's Hollow," and it was voted to appropriate $350 for the same. The meeting then adjourned for one week.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

The Legislative Committee on town will visit this town to-morrow. They will take the 10 a. m. train from Boston arriving in Salem at 10.42, thence proceeding to the Lowell depot they will proceed at once to West Peabody. There they will be met by barges and committees from West Peabody and the remonstrants to the petition. They will arrive in this part of the town at 1 o'clock and will take the 2.01 train to Boston. The matter of visiting a town in this manner in reference to a division after the arguments have been made is a very unusual proceeding. It was understood prior to the arguments, that there would be no visit. It was requested by the attorney for the respondents that if there was to be a visit it should be before the arguments were made, and although we think it a matter of little moment, yet in courtesy to him, it should have been so arranged.

The entertainment at the Institute under the auspices of Union Post 50 G. A. R. last Wednesday evening, was attended by about 200 people. Rev. V. M. Simons gave his interesting lecture on "Cross Wives" and was attentively listened to. This was followed by Prof. Maynard and Hill. The former sang several catching pieces and gave a piece of his own composition in which he imitated a large number of birds by simply placing the fingers in his mouth. The best thing of the evening was his fife and drum imitations on which he was encored. This was played on the piano and had a person been out of the room they would have thought from the music that there really was a fife and drum on the stage. Mr. Hill gave several fine violin selections which were well received. The entertainment concluded with a comic song from Prof. Maynard.

The Spiritualists masquerade party at their hall last Thursday evening was very successful. Among the characters taken were. Goddess of Liberty, Mrs. Holt; Salvation Army, Miss Curtis; flower girl, Mrs. Dodge; Morning, Miss Southwick, Salem; antiquarian, Miss Southwick, Salem; fancy, Maggie Moreland; Salem News, Mrs. Wilkinson; Sister of Charity, Mrs. W. P. Flannagan; fancy, Miss Buxton; Drum Major, Louis McKean; fancy burlesque R. Hardy; clown, Andrews, Salem; sailor, H. Holt; group of five Chinese; Sam Sluce Quartette, in negro costume, W. B. Flannagan, C. H. Stanton, A. Peabody and John Andrews; pack of cards, J. B. Lemmons; Belle of Lowell Mr. Hart, of Salem, and other costumes too numerous to mention.

Nathaniel H. Poor, Horace A. Poor, George H. Poor and James M. Willey of Danvers were arraigned before the court at Wakefield on Wednesday, charged by the Fish Wardens of North Reading, with illegal fishing in Swan's pond, North Reading. The court was crowded by citizens who claim the right to fish there, as the lease of the pond, which had been stocked, had run out. Judge Pettengill fined Nathaniel H. and Horace A. Poor $5 and costs each. He discharged George H. Poor and James M. Willey. Poaching laws are a modern importation from Europe, and it does not agree with the Yankee stomach.

Friday afternoon, the boys Ernest E. Roswell, John W. Lynch and William Green appeared before Judge Merrill in the Police Court on several charges, among them the breaking and entering of the house of John Tapley. George Hull, agent of the State Board of Health, Lunacy and Charity appeared in behalf of Lynch and Green, they being under the head of youthful criminals. Eugene T. McCarty also appeared for Lynch. The case of Lynch and Green was continued until May 4; Roswell was put under $600 bonds for the higher court. The bonds of Lynch was fixed at $300 and Green's at $50.

The case of Vaughn vs. the Town of Peabody came up before Judge Allen of the Court of Equity in Boston last Wednesday. The hearing was to compel the Water Board to let water on Vaughn's factory without the payment of the cost of shutting off and letting on. John M. Raymond, Esq, appeared for Vaughn, and Henry Wardwell, Esq. for the town. The hearing continued several hours and brought out the facts which are already familiar to our readers. Judge Allen dismissed the case and fully sustained the Water Board.

The Second Corps of Cadets is making a rapid increase in membership, having recruited nineteen new men the past month. Company B., Capt. E. W. Abbott, now has seventy men in the ranks. Capt. Geo. D. Putnam is drilling the corps in the bayonet exercise. The time of drill of the corps has been changed, and will hereafter be as follows: Co. A. will drill on Friday evening of each week, and Co. B. on Tuesday evening of each week.

FROM REV. E. W. WHITNEY,

Formerly Pastor of the Universalist Church, Peabody, Mass.

For several years I have been troubled with Catarrh, which seriously interfered with my public speaking, and which baffled all my attempts to get permanent relief. Experienced surgeons operated upon me, and I was under the care of a Boston physician for two years, but obtained no lasting benefit. I applied various medicines, but failed to get relief. I was lead, by the advice of friends, to consult Dr. Lighthill. My faith was at the lowest ebb, but I am happy to say that after a few months' treatment no trace of my old trouble appears, and I have every reason to believe that the cure is permanent. I cordially recommend Dr. Lighthill to all who may be afflicted in a similar manner.

E W. WHITNEY,

Peabody, Mass., June 27. 1879.

AN INTERESTING CASE.

A statement of Mr. Clement A. Thorndike, of the firm of L. A. May & Co., 127 Union street, Lynn, Mass.

To the Public:—Having been raised almost like one from the dead by the skillful treatment of Dr. Lighthill, and to benefit similar sufferers, I make this public statement of my case. For years I was troubled with Catarrh in my head, seriously affecting and almost destroying my nasal bone; the discharge was very profuse, requiring constant blowing and hawking for relief; gradually the irritation passed into my throat, producing hoarseness and a hacking cough, and finally it affected my bronchial tubes and lungs, leaving me a victim to consumption. The cough now became distressing and almost constant, and debilitating night sweats made their appearance. I lost flesh and became greatly emaciated. I consulted medical men and used various remedies, but all efforts for relief utterly failed. In that condition, and greatly disheartened and discouraged, I applied to Dr. Lighthill, whose able and thorough examination of my case proved to me that I was in the right hands. Convinced that he fully understood my condition, and, inspired with new hope, I placed myself under his care, and very soon experienced the benefit of his treatment. One after another of the symptoms of Catarrh left me. I gained in strength and weight, my cough and night sweats disappeared, and now I am only too thankful and delighted to be able to call myself well again. Hoping that this statement may give new courage and confidence to such as may suffer as I have,

I remain, respectfully,

CLEMENT A. THORNDIKE.

Lynn, June 18, 1881

CATARRH CURED.

FROM REV. E. C. BUTLER,

Beverly, Mass.

I most heartily recommend any one afflicted with that troublesome disease, Catarrh, to Dr. Lighthill. I have full confidence in him. His treatment has had the most gratifying results in my own case, which was severe and of long standing.

E. C. BUTLER,

Beverly, Mass., Oct. 29, 1879.

CURE OF DEAFNESS.

FROM RT. REV. T. F. HENDRIKEN,

Bishop of Providence. R. I.

My Dear Dr. Lighthill: Permit me to thank you most heartily for your kindness to the Sisters of our Convent. I had no idea when I consulted you on Sister Demonica's deafness that you could so quickly restore her back to hearing, but she tells me that she hears now better than she did before. For this, and your kind and successful treatment of my own deafness, I thank you. Now I would be glad to have you refer your patients to me. You know I can recommend you as a physician and surgeon, thoroughly accomplished in those departments of medicine in which you practice. I owe you a debt of gratitude, and would be glad to pay it.

Very truly and sincerely yours

Rt. Rev. T. F. HENDRIKEN.

ASTHMA.

REPORT FROM MR. C. F. BOYNTON, 31 MILK STREET, BOSTON, ROOM 35.

TO THE PUBLIC.

After having spent large sums of money, and found no relief, I was induced to apply to Dr. Lighthill, at 115 Boylston street, for treatment, having suffered from asthma in the worst form for six years, and I wish to say, for the benefit of others suffering as I did that DR. LIGHTHILL'S TREATMENT HAS MADE ME A WELL MAN, and I now can enjoy life, when before it was a dread to me. This cure was performed on me over a year ago, and I can confidently pronounce it a permanent one. I hope all afflicted with that dreadful disease will avail themselves of Dr. Lighthill's skilful services, for I feel morally sure he can cure them

Monotony of American Men.

A visitor from the new world can not but be struck with the absolute independence with which Englishmen live up to their own ideas, whether they coincide with the general current of opinion or not. On the other side of the Atlantic public sentiment rules with almost irresistible force; no erratic departures from the general law are tolerated; every man must conform to the rules of the majority. If you know one young man in the United States you know them all. They resemble each other with curious fidelity in dress, manner, and appearance. Their very thoughts, racy and original as they are, run in the same groove, and they give expression to them in the same crystallized forms of speech. This iron rule does not prevail to nearly so great an extent in Canada, but it exists with sufficient force to make the independence of the individual Englishman marked even to a Canadian. The old Indian generals who affect eastern modes of life in misty England, the retired sea captains whose talk is ever in nautical phrases of nautical matters, and other riders of hobbies innumerable, who have furnished materials to many authors, and amusement to many generations of readers, abound in England and help to render the land picturesque and attractive.

All these harmless and amusing eccentricities are almost ruled down into a dead level of monotonous uniformity in the new world. Perhaps I should except New York from this general statement. This, the greatest city in America, is the most cosmopolitan in its character. Men of all nationalities go to make up its vast population; it is less distinctly American than Philadelphia or Boston. Its young men, whether intentionally or not, closely resemble young Englishmen; indeed, all classes exhibit their own peculiarities uninfluenced by the repressing tyranny of general habits or opinions.—Cassel's Family Magazine.

Washington Streets.

An excellent judge of such matters asserts that this city has gained more in outward appearance during the last half dozen years than it had before in half a century. It now has forty miles of better pavement than can be found in any other American town, and which compares favorably with any in Europe. This has made thorough street-sweeping practicable at small cost, and it results that, although the city is poorly supplied with water, it is little afflicted with dust, and is beginning to have a refreshingly clean aspect. Bordering these streets there now stands upward of one hundred thousand well-formed, nursery grown trees. Maples of several species are the more common, but there are representations (by the hundred) of at least six different genera. They are at present but club-headed saplings, hardly recovered from the shock of transplantation, or fairly settled in their new homes, and show none of the characteristic mature beauty of their several families. They have as yet, therefore, but little value except as promissory notes, their growth to be discounted. Nevertheless, seen as they constantly are in long perspectives of uniform mass and color, their effect on the city is absolutely transforming, and if all goes well with them Washington will in a few years be a new and glorified city—a capital that Americans may be proud of.

Burdette's Fish Story.

I remember once, myself fishing in the eddying waters of the Mississippi, about four miles above Burlington, striking a catfish. I was using a lancewood rod and set reel, and the fish ran out about twenty-five yards of line, then turning suddenly made straight for me as I stood in the water. I struck at it with the rod, which broke in my hand. The infuriated fish chased me ashore, ran me through a lumber-yard, pursued me across a wide stubble field, and some distance into the woods, when, being unarmed, I climbed a large cottonwood tree. The relentless fish followed me up the tree, where it was shot by some hunters just as it was "cooning" out upon a big limb to get at me. It fell to the ground dead, shot through the heart. It was nine inches long and weighed a pound and a half with its clothes on. Which by interpretation is dressed.

THE BEAUTY OF YOUTH:—No matter how handsome or stalwart a young man may be otherwise, nothing can make up for a partially bald head. Shining talents are attrcative but a shining poll is not. The cause may be sickness or anything else, yet Parker's Hair Balsam will stop the loss of the hair and start a new growth of glossy soft hair so quickly as to surprise you—restoring the original color at the same time. Not a dye, not oily, delicately perfumed. Only standard 50 cent dressing.

MAYO'S

Compound Vegetable Anæsthetic.

A safe and pleasant substitute for gas and ether.

Discovered by Dr. N. K. Mayo of Boston, April 1883, subsequently administered by him in nearly two thousand cases, producing perfect slumber, being applicable to the child, the delicate sensitive woman as well as the hardy man. No ill effects have followed its use in any case, it acting rather as a vegetable tonic.

It controls the patient one-fourth longer than gas giving us time to remove from three to twenty teeth. It is with great confidence we have introduced it into our practice, giving very successful results.

ON THE ENGINE.

Running a Locomotive While Deathly Sick—Something the Passengers Did Not Know a Physician Saves an Engineer.

Taunton, Mass.

Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.

Dear Sir—I am an engineer on the Old Colony Railroad, and run the Fall River boat train between Fall River and Lowell, residing in Taunton. For ten years I suffered everything but death from dyspepsia. Often I had such blinding sick headaches that I could scarcely see. I think this was due partly to irregular habits of eating, and partly to the jar of the engine. Sometimes my head would snap like neuralgia, and again the pain would settle in my eyes, which would feel as big as a man's fist. My breath was very offensive, and my food soured as it entered my stomach. In fact my stomach felt as though it were a great raw and sore surface, and what agony it gave perhaps you can imagine.

In the summer and fall of 1876 when we had the heavy centennial travel, the constant jar brought on acute attacks nearly every week and I thought I should have to leave the road. But I kept at work until the next spring, when I grew so much worse that I could virtually eat nothing, and concluded that my labor, and my life too, were about over.

Remember that I had tried every medicine I heard of, and had been treated by some of the best physicians in Taunton and Lowell. At this critical time DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY was recommended to me. It was new to me, and with my experience of medicines you can easily forgive me for saying that I had not a particle of faith in it.

I had taken it but a few days when I began to get better. The raw and sore feeling left my stomach, and the snapping pains left my head, and soon I was all right, and have been ever since. It is the only thing that ever did me the least good, and it drove every ache, pain and discomfort completely out of my body. Now I keep KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY with me on my engine, and it goes wherever I go.

Why, I believe FAVORITE REMEDY will cure anything. One night, a while ago, John Layton, an engineer who runs the main line boat train from Boston, came on my engine sick as death. He was worn out with work, had a high fever, and was so nervous he almost broke down crying. "Nonsense, John," I said, "cheer up, I've got something on my engine that will set you up in a jiffy." I took out my bottle of FAVORITE REMEDY, lifted his head and gave him a good dose. He went to bed. Two days after I saw him looking healthy as a butcher. "Dan," he said, "what was that stuff you gave me the other night?" "It was DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, Rondout, N. Y." said I. "Well, I don't care whose Remedy it is, it's the thing for a man on the railroad." So say we all.

Yours etc., DANIEL FITTS.

This preparation goes to the root of disease by purifying the blood and rousing every organ into healthy action. It is useful at home, shops, in office—everywhere.

As an anti-malarial medicine

DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S

FAVORITE REMEDY

has won golden opinions. No traveler should consider his outfit complete unless it includes a bottle of this medicine. If you are exposed to frequent changes of climate, food and water, Favorite Remedy should always be within your reach. It expels malarial poisons, and is the best preventative of chills and malarial fever in the world. It is especially offered as a trustworthy specific for the cure of Kidney and Liver complaints, Constipation and all disorders arising from an impure state of the blood. To women who suffer from any of the ills peculiar to their sex Favorite Remedy is constantly proving itself an unfailing friend—a real blessing. Address the proprietor, Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y. $1 bottle, 6 for $5. by all druggists.

Book Notices.

We have received from the well known house of Oliver Ditson & Co. a copy of "Fresh Flowers," a song book for the infant classes of Sunday Schools, by Mrs. Emma Pitt, published by Oliver Ditson & Co. So the little Sunday Scholars have their own book at last, and provided for them by a lady who well understands their wants, being herself a teacher of just such classes. Mrs. Pitt is a prominent and highly accomplished writer of Sunday School hymns and Sunday School music, and is perhaps the best fitted of any one for her pleasing task. Fresh Flowers is a very nice little book of 64 pages, and with its pretty picture cover and the pictures inside, has very much the appearance of a picture book. About 20 composers are represented in the music.

Ballou's Magazine for April is as good as usual. It leads off with an illustrated article on India, an important production at the present time, when Russia and England are glaring at each other in Afghanistan. The continued story by W. H. Thomes is very interesting. Remember this narrative is of California life during the early days of the Mexican War, and is historically correct in all its dates and incidents so must prove of interest to thousands of people, besides the boys and girls of the country. Ballou's is only $1.50 per year, or 15 cents single number, and is the best magazine in the country at the price. Address, Thomes & Talbot, 23 Hawley St., Boston, Mass.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for April will certainly please many different classes of readers. The lovers of the water will turn at once to the opening article, "Yachts and Yachting in America," by W. P. Stephens, with its illustrations of famous yachts. We have a naval officer's story entitled "Behind the Dahlgren Howitzers in Corea," with ten illustrations, especially interesting and timely just now. M. F. Vallette's article on "Tombs and Catatombs," with its curious pictures, is exceedingly entertaining. The story element is well sustained. There are several short stories of merit, besides some beautiful poems. The miscellany is, as usual, well up to the mark, and the frontispiece illustration in colors, "Carmen," a thing of beauty. Published by Mrs. Frank Leslie, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

With all her other troubles—in Egypt, and Ireland, and Asia—Old England has also been passing through a serious agricultural crisis, in which the ancient proverbial expression, "as good as wheat," lost its force, for the price of that commodity touched the lowest point it has reached in the life of this generation. What brought on the crisis, what were its effects, and what remedies have been proposed, are questions that concern the American almost as much as the Englishman, whether he be a producer or a consumer of wheat; and they are very ably and clearly discussed in an article by William E. Bear, editor of the Mark Lane Express, in the North American Review for April. In the same number, Charles Dudley Warner presents an interesting "Study of Prison Management." What will probably attract the most immediate attention in this number is the new department of "Comments," consisting of brief criticisms of articles that have appeared in the Review. Murat Halstead's political article in the March number is here discussed by three writers.

The Atlantic Monthly for April is a remarkably good number. Its serials by Craddock, Mrs. Oliphant, and Miss Jewett progress admirably, and Dr. Holmes adds the attraction of a poem called "The Old Song" to his installment of "The New Portfolio." The papers on Madame Mohl are also continued, and an essay on "Time in Shakespeare's Plays," by Henry A. Clapp, forms a pendant to a former article on "Time in Shakespeare's Comedies." "Political Economy and the Civil War," a study by J. Laurence Laughlin; a story called "Fate Dominant," by F. R. Stockton; and a paper on the sparrow, by Olive Thorne Miller, are the other attractions of the number. There are also reviews of recent poetry by Browning, Tennyson, and Swinburne, and of Gosse's edition of Gray's Works, together with the usual Contributors' Club and Books of the Month. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston.

The Bay State Monthly for March contains sketches of the lives of William Lee and Charles A. B. Shepard of the firm of Lee & Shepard with fine steel portraits of each; a sketch of the life of Hon. Rodney Wallace, with steel portrait; Major General Lew Wallace at Shiloh, with map; Fitchburg in 1855, an illustrated historical sketch; The past and future of gold; Reuben Tracy's trips; gems from the easy chair and other interesting matter. Published by John M. McClintock & Co., 31 Milk street, Boston; 3.00 a year. Single numbers, 25 cents.

Our Little ones and the Nursery for March is beautifully illustrated and is just the magazine to please the young children. It is received from the Russell Publishing Company of Boston.

A hitherto unpublished portrait of Mr. Lincoln, taken just before he became President, is the frontispiece feature of the April Harper's. It is accompanied by a poem, written by W. P. Garrison, Esq., a son of Wm. Lloyd Garrison and namesake of Wendell Phillips, on "The Vision of Abraham Lincoln, April 14, 1865."

The devotee of the rod and line will be doubly interested in the April Harper's, which contains a charming full-page illustration by Alfred Parsons of Wordsworth's sonnet written on a blank leaf of a copy of "The Complete Angler," and an interesting copy on "Fly-fishing," by Mr. H. P. Wells, an authority on the subject, with a fine illustration of an eight-pound brook trout and a number of diagrams showing how to hold the rod and to cast. A book on the same subject by this writer is in press by Messrs. Harper & Brothers.

An article of much interest to Southern readers is in the April Harper's, on "Some Richmond Portraits." It has a number of Portraits of Virginia belles, beaux, and wits of old times as well as in later days, and the paper itself is from the pen of Mr. Eugene L. Didier.

It is stated that the new Secretary of War, Judge Endicott, of our neighboring city, considers it a matter of much pride that the first official act of his administration was the signing of the Commission of Gen. Grant, placing him on the retired list of the army. It will be so considered, also, by his fellow citizen in his own city and State, without reference to party.

It is to the credit of the last Congress that they did not leave this bill among the many others which they omitted to pass. It is also to their credit that the Southern members, equally with those from the North, voted for it. And in this matter, also, they represented their constituents. The hostile feeling against Gen. Grant, except among the most bitter of the old secession leaders, is passing away, and surely the country can never repay Gen. Grant for his services during the war. Whatever of political opposition may have been engendered against him since, the nation can never forget that to him, of all others, belongs the credit of putting down the Rebellion. It would have been a sorry spectacle to have seen this old veteran, sick nigh unto death, in trouble and poverty, a victim of the ingratitude of a nation for which he had endured so much. Yet this was the spectacle which Congress came very near presenting to the world. We especially in this vicinity, as well as the entire Nation, may well congratulate Secretary Endicott that he was the instrument in carrying the active operation of the bill into effect.

The country editor is a man who reads newspapers, writes on most any subject, sticks type, folds papers, makes up mails, runs errands, saws wood, wipes on stiff towels, is ever ink-besmeared, is always hard up, is blamed for a thousand things he never thought of, works hard all day, helps people into office, who forget all about it afterwards, and frequently gets cheated out of half he earns. He puffs and does more to build up the town than anyone else, and the miser and the fogy are benefited, yet they will not take his paper, but will borrow it, read it and cuss the fool of an editor.

"The new method of a man dressmaker, and one of the most fashionable in town, is based, I suspect," says Clara Belle in a letter to the Cincinnati Enquirer, "on that of the hatter who forces an apparatus down on his customer's head, thus pricking a reduced outline into a card, or that of the shoemaker, who traces the exact shape of the foot on paper. This artist makes his fair patron divest herself of all falsity. I don't mean sham teeth or glass eyes or painted complexion, but of what may be called upholstery. Then, by means of an apparatus like a camera he draws the lines of the real figure—side view and front view—on a page in a very, very private book. Thus he can see at a glance where the imperfections of form are, and whether artificial improvement is possible; also, just what garments will be most becoming. Of course, the subject retains an enveloping amount of clothing when thus pictured, so that there is no impropriety in it; and besides, as the faces are not included in the portraiture, recognition is not probably—in some cases, alack! quite impossible."

Wilmot's trade is constantly increasing notwithstanding the dull times, and we candidly pronounce his success well deserved, for he not only sells reliable goods at lowest prices, but spares no pains to secure latest styles. Read his advertisement on first page.

The date on the blackboard at the central Station was changed Monday morning by a lively fire in the tannery of Joseph E. Harris in the rear of Jacobs' factory on Main street. The fire was seen by E. H. Davis, watchman at T. E. Proctor's, who was pegging the clock in the upper lofts of Proctor's currying shop, and was then just coming through the roof. He made further examinations and then had the whistle blown. It was just 4.15 o'clock, and in a few moments a general alarm was given, the firemen turning out promptly and getting at work as quick as circumstances would allow. Hose 1 took the hydrant at Thorndike street and ran 2 lines to the side next to Jacobs' morocco shop and by their efforts the big factory was saved, although at one time it looked as though it would go in spite of all the efforts. Hose 4 attached to the hydrant in front of Lee's drug store and ran their lines direct to the tannery building, and quickly put their streams where they were most needed. Hose 3 laid their line from the hydrant near the old residence of E. W. Jacobs and it is needless to say that their work told. The steamers had bad luck all through the fire, and a steamer stream was not put on until the fire was nearly out. No. 1 set first at the hydrant in front of Lee's, No 2 going to Sutton's wool shop where they made connection. In the meantime No. 1 was not able to attach to the hydrant at Lee's and ran down to the one where No. 2 was, when it was found that the hydrant was frozen. No. 2 endeavored to thaw it out with steam and No.1 stationed at the hydrant at the corner of Grove and Main streets, which was also found frozen. Both steamers were now engaged in thawing out the hydrants without success. The lines of hose were laid and the pipemen waiting in the heat for the water, which did not come. The steamers were then sent, No. 1 to the reservoir on Washington street and No. 2 to the hydrant where Hose 3 was located, and the lines shifted to those positions but as the fire was under complete control No. 2. was sent home and No. 1 began playing on the ruins, but after working a short time the water in the reservoir got too low to be reached and it was found that the supply pipe from the main was frozen up solid. The fire was confined to the tannery buildings and the fire room of the Jacobs factory. The bark mill was under the same roof with the other machinery and was totally destroyed, but the beam house, and the four story currying shop of John Frost were saved. The morocco shop of W. P. Clark, stables of George J. Winchester and the store of W. O. Batchelder were on fire a number of times from the flying cinders which rained down on all the buildings to the south of the fire, as a pretty sharp breeze was blowing at the time, and the water froze wherever it struck, covering the firemen with coats of ice. Mr. Harris purchased the tannery from John Frost a short time ago, and was running about two-thirds the capacity of the yard. The damage to stocks will not be very large, Lowd and Buxton and John Frost losing about $1000 each on stock in the yard. The loss will be principally on building, machinery and engine, and will amount to about $5000, on which there is an insurance of $8000, placed through the agency of George P. Daniels, as follows: $4800 on buildings, $2000 on machinery, $1200 on engine and boiler in the following offices: Neptune, $1500; North America and Exchange, $500 each; Prescott, $1000, all of Boston; Rochester German of New York, $1000; Niagara of New York Firemen's Fund of New York, $1000; People's of Pennsylvania, $500; National of Connecticut, $1000. In addition to the above there is one policy of $1000, placed by F. E. Farnham. The fire was well handled and reflects great credit on Cheif Littlefield and assistants, working as they did under disadvantages. The fire was in a good place to sweep through to Main street and had it got so far there is no knowing where it would have stopped. Assistant Foreman John H. Moreland of Hose 4, while laying a line of hose, over the hill in the rear of Oliver Batchelder's house, fell and cut his right arm nearly the whole length of it, either on a broken bottle or on the ragged edge of a tomato can which projected from the ground. He was taken to Dr. Frost's office and several stiches taken in the wound, which was found to have just escaped cutting an artery. It will lay him up several weeks. He is a member of the Relief Association.

The City of London insurance company had a risk of $1000 on the property burned, but on the 12th of this month the special agent was in town and viewing the property and its surroundings, he ordered it cancelled which was done.

Both steamers received slight accidents, No. 1 colliding with a tree in front of Sutton's wool shop, and No. 2 in turning drove a whiffletree through one of the water tanks.

The appropriations for the support of the fire department are $7000, and for hydrants $500. An attempt was made to reduce the number of men from 15 to 12 on H. & L., but was vigorously opposed by Chief Littlefield and the three men saved to the company. The four companies outside the brick house have been cut down from 15 to 12 men. An appropriation of $50 a company, for fuel and lights, for the four outside companies was made.

Hose 2 connected with two hydrants finding them frozen carried their hose to the hydrant near R. H. Brown & Co. on Walnut street and put a stream on the fire from that place.

William P. Clark furnished a collation of hot coffee, crackers and cheese to the firemen after the fire.

Last Wednesday afternoon, a slight fire was discovered in the large tenement house on Central street next to Page's pottery. The fire was caused by a defective flue, a piece of stone drain pipe, and was extinguished by George Diebel, of Hose 3 who happened to be near. George never gets left when there is a fire or a collation. The house had several families residing in it.

Petitions to be presented to the Selectmen in the interest of different ones for Engineers of the fire department are being circulated. They will not be appointed before the middle of April.

Steamer No. 1 has been out the past two days thawing out hydrants as a great many have been found frozen at the supply 6 feet down.

The committee on Fire Department of Salem City Government visited the Central Station Tuesday afternoon, and inspected the heating apparatus for the steamers and other arrangements in the building. A new house for a Steamer Hook and Ladder truck and Hose Carriage will be built somewhere on Boston street, Salem, and this committee are looking around the neighboring cities and towns to get plans.

The Selectmen and Board of Engineers met in conference Tuesday evening. The conference was called by the Selectmen to place the blame for the frozen hydrants at the Harris fire, but after talking the matter over and hearing the reports of the Engineers as to the exact condition of the hydrants, it was decided that the Engineers had done all in human power to prevent the freezing, and that the whole blame lay with the extreme cold weather. The subject of horses for Steamer 2 was also discussed and it was decided that it was necessary that three horses should be kept in the engine house at all times, and that by having the extra horses the surveyor could have four horses at his disposal to work in whatever part of the town he wished. The matter was left with the Selectmen and will probably be brought up this week.

A list of names for Engineers of the Fire Department was presented to the Selectmen recently, containing the following names:—W. W. Reed, S. H. Buxton, A. E. Johnson, John H. Tibbetts and William J. Roome. The list was handed back with the request to put it in the form of a petition.

A new Bicycle called the "Kangaroo," has been placed on the market for which its manufaturers claim perfect safety and greater speed than can be obtained from those in general use. One of the machines is now on exhibition at the Gent's Furnishing store of Hatfield & Burdett, Monroe street, Lynn.

C. H. Goulding has just received 2000 yards of Canton Mattings in new and desirable patterns, which he offers from 15 to 30 cents per yard. Give him a call, and see if there is any need to go out of town for anything in his line of business.

SOUTH PEABODY.

MESSRS. EDITORS.— The sudden death of Mr. Isaac Hardy awakened sincere grief in the hearts of many in this part of the town, where the deceased was held in high esteem, both for his own personal work and for his work's sake. One of the little band of Missionary workers from the South Church who labored here for many years in the Sabbath School and Prayer meetings, he devoted himself to the cause he so loved with earnestness and fidelity. He was inspired by the true Missionary spirit. For years he taught a large class of young ladies and he had the satisfaction of seeing many of them unite with the church. He was always ready to help on every good work among us with his voice, his purse and his example. His frank open way, his generous spirit and warm heart won for him here, as elsewhere, a host of friends. While others came and went he remained at his post, until it was granted him to see his own and his co-laborers' self denying efforts culminate in the most powerful revival that has ever visited this town for years, and in the organization of a church.

With other brethren of the South church he was present with us on the first Sabbath evening that we began to worship in our new house. To the building of this new house he had been a generous contributor, and he rejoiced with us that we had so far completed our efforts, and earnestly encouraged us to go on until we should see the finished work. It was a satisfaction to him when the work was done and the church dedicated.

He never forgot this people among whom he labored so cheefully and devotedly, after he had transferred his activity to other spheres. He always had a warm place in his heart for this church and Sabbath School and the circle of friends he had here drawn around him. Occasionally he would be seen in our meetings, and his presence was always welcome. We remember especially his last visit at our prayer meeting, when he spoke of the courage and faith of a dying servant of our Lord. Little did we then think, as he stood looking into the tomb after the friend who had gone in before him, that we should so soon be called to make this other record: "Then went in also that other disciple."

It is not for us to speak of his faithful efforts elsewhere or to attempt here a delineation of his character. We speak of him only as we knew him, and because we loved him for what he did for us; and this humble but glad tribute we bring to his memory, which will ever be cherished by us. The tender, discriminating and appreciative analysis of his character which was made by his pastor over his remains, must felicitously express our own estimate of his worth and usefullness. We attempt to recall what he did, where he labored, and what he was, and the question will arise unbidden: "Know ye not that there is a prince and a great man falleth this day in Israel?"

Our sympathy is with those who feel most keenly this loss, and with the Church and Pastor from whom this beloved brother has been taken. We share in the common sorrow, but we share also in the common joy which mingles with our grief, because we know that the faithful disciple has entered upon the reward of the just.

"Servant of God, well-done!
Rest from thy loved employ;
The battle fought, the victory won,
Enter thy Master's joy."

Mr. Warren Shaw and wife are expected home from their Southern tour this week.

Rev. J. W. Colwell exchanged pulpits with Rev. Mr. Smith of the Methodist church, last Sunday.

Mr. Frank Reed, who has been at work for John Shaw at Keene, N. H., all winter, returned home last week, there being nothing to do there.

A car load of about fifty came up from the minstrel show last Saturday night at the Town hall.

Mrs. Lydia Decatur is quite sick at her home on County street, with consumption.

The Rev. Mr. Smith delivered an excellent sermon, last Sunday afternoon at the church, and was listened to by quite a large audience.

It will not be well for the parties, if they are caught, who set the fires in cedar grove cemetery every spring. Quite a fire was started there last Sunday, but the Superintendent with assistants put it out before much damage was done.

A child of Mr. William Larrabee is quite sick with scarlet fever on Lynnfield street.

Don't forget the entertainment at the vestry to-morrow night.

Miss Jessie Craig has returned from Newark, N. J., where she has been visiting her brother through the winter.

Fred Shaw had a narrow escape from a serious accident last Sunday morning while out horse back riding. The horse got frightened at a team that came up behind him, turning on his heels quite suddenly, throwing Fred off, striking on his head and back, but fortunately not hurting him except a good shaking up.

Mrs. Sarah Larrabee celebrated her 82d birthday at her residence on Lynnfield street Tuesday evening. A large number of relatives and friends were present. Mrs. Larrabee received many valuable and useful presents.

Mrs. David Putnam is very sick at her residence on Lynn street.

The L. & B. R. R. Co. run a late car from the G. A. R. fair, in Lynn, Tuesday night to So. Peabody.

SKATING RINK NOTES.

The Peabodys played the third game in the series with the Stars of Haverhill at the rink last evening, defeating them in three straight goals. The Star team played their new team as follows: Capt. and goal, W. H. Bragdon; W. S. Sellers, 1st rush; A. W. Day, 2d rush; Bert Bragdon, cover point; J. Eastman, centre; J. Flynn, half back. The Peabodys played their usual team. Chas. O'Malley, as referee, called the game at 9 o'clock. Felton got the first two rushes and Sellers the third. The first goal was taken by Phalen in 1m. 15s; the second by Waterhouse in 1m. 30s; the third by Sullivan in 1m. 55s. and the game in 4m. 40s. After the league game an exhibition game was played in which Morrill tended goal for the Stars and Bragdon for the Peabodys. The first rush was taken by Waterhouse who rushed instead of Felton and the ball was sent from the Star goal to the Peabody cage, past Bragdon in just 45 seconds. In the other three goals Waterhouse secured the rush in the second, and Sellers in the third and fourth.

The second goal was won by Phalen in 1 m. 50 s., the third by Phalen in 4 m. 45 s. and the fourth by Phalen in 4. m. 20 s. giving the game to Peabody three goals to one. A fair audience was present. The games were rather tame—being too onesided.

The St. John's defeated the Father Matthew's at polo at the rink, last Saturday evening, three straight goals.

The space occupied by our account of the doings at Town Meeting, renders it imperative that several interesting articles should go on our inside pages. There is a very interesting letter descriptive of the ordination of one of the pastors of the South Church written in the year 1713. We also publish the substance of the remarks of Rev. W. G. Sperry at the funeral of Mr. Hardy, which will be found on the 2nd page. Under our South Peabody column will be found another tribute to Mr. Hardy, from the pen of Rev. J. W. Colwell. It is a singular coincidence that Mr. Hersey, of Boston, of the old firm of Low, Hersey & Co., but lately of the firm of Hersey, Whittier & Wyman, should have been taken iil at about the same time as Mr. Hardy, and died the same day. Mr. Hardy did considerable business with this firm, and it was the embarassment of this firm which caused that of Mr. Hardy not long since. It was as severe a blow to Mr. Hersey as to Mr. Hardy, and it is probable that mental depression consequent upon it, hastened the decease of both men.

The Trustees of the Peabody Institute met Monday evening and organized for the ensuing year as follows:—President, F. H. Appleton; Secretary, George M. Foster; Treasurer, Franklin Osborne; Finance Committee, C. C. Pike, Kendall Osborne, George J. Winchester, Thomas Carroll, F. E. Farnham; Building Committee, George M. Foster, George H. Poor, George F. Osgood. The Trustees appointed the following gentlemen as Lyceum and Library Committee: George F. Osgood, A. W. Littlefield, Frank C. Merrill, Lyman P. Osborne, William J. McCarthy, S. S. Littlefield, Charles F. Bushby, G. M. Foster, G. H. Poor, T. H. McGrath, E. F. McCarthy. The meeting of this committee will be held two weeks from last Monday night. J. D. McKeen was appointed Janitor.

Mrs. Larry Cuddire called on us this week to say that she was misrepresented in our item last week. She says there is another family in the house and the disturbance was not made by her. We are always glad to make a correction particularly if we have done an injustice. We got our information from a neighbor and considered it good authority.

Peabody now boasts a probation officer, Chief Police Thomas W. Peasley, having been appointed by the Selectmen last Saturday. It will be his duty to investigate the crimes committed and keep a record of the conduct of the accused as to the likelihood of his reforming. Should he be satisfied with the good intentions of a prisoner, he could ask the court to deal with him accordingly.

By order of the post office departments all mails have been weighed passing over the various railways and through the post offices for thirty days just passed, from Feb. 11 to March 17 inclusive, for the purpose of forming a basis for estimates for carrying mails. The amount of mail passing through the Peabody post office for the above thirty days was 7,888 lbs; 3270 out, and 4618 in.

At the weekly meeting of the W. C. T. U. on Friday next at 3 P. M., Mrs. M. O. Stevens will read a paper entitled "The Temperance Centennial." All are invited.

Thos. B. Shea, the man who was assaulted a short time since, was before Justice Merrill this morning and fined $1.00 and costs.

A lady of experience would like a position as housekeeper. The best of references given and required. Address Housekeeper, this office.

The West Peabody Farmer's Club will have a fine entertainment at the hall to-morrow night and it will be followed by a dance.

About 400 people greeted Hi Henry's Minstrels at town hall last Saturday evening and the best minstrel performance ever given in town was enjoyed. The programme was quite lengthy but the performers were obliged to respond to repeated encores. Hi Henry and his men are gentlemen and there was not an objectionable feature in the performance. They will no doubt be greeted by a large house, should they visit us another season.

Anthony Comstock says that the following crimes were committed by persons between the ages of 10 and 20 years, during the year 1884, through the influence of reading impure literature:—Murders, 74; felonious assaults, 104; robberies, 51; suicides, 37; larceny 230; forgeries, 18; arson, 4; rape, 37; train wreckers, 3; highwaymen, 179; poisoned father and mother, 1; band of desperadoes, 12. Fathers and mothers should take note of this statement.

Last Saturday a five-year-old colt, attached to a buggy, belonging to Henry Richardson of Wyoma, collided at the head of Foster street, with a heavy team, throwing Mr. R. out and then ran away, striking Upton & Magoun's team in front of S. A. Osborne's, where the buggy was overturned. Things were lively for a few seconds.

Next Tuesday evening there will be given at the Methodist Church a free concert by the Leslie Convention and Concert Company. The object of this concert, which will be of high order, is to organize a musical convention of our people and give them instruction in reading music and singing. If you attend the concert you will be well pleased and obtain the desired information about the lessons.

Last Thursday, a man named Geo. E. Strout, a deaf mute employed at L. & G. H. Poor's, was struck by the noon freight on the Lowell track and thrown several feet without being seriously injured. The engineer saw him and had reversed his engine, so was not running at full speed. It was a close call.

Mr. George A. Collins, of Salem, appears to have had more to do with the nomination of Judge Endicott as the Democratic candidate for governor, than any one from this part of the State, and we trust that Judge Endicott will return the compliment, now that he is in a position to do so.

Read the history of the unexampled success and bargains offered by Edward C. Almy & Co., 167 Essex street, this week. Never before was such an opportunity offered to obtain a stylish Spring Suit at a nominal price.

Mr. Frank B. Trask of Danvers, for several years past in the employ of Mr. C. H. Goulding as upholsterer, has accepted a position with Almy, Bigelow & Washburn of Salem to take charge of their upholstery work. He, assumes his new position April 1st.

An exchange says, "The Georgetown Cornet Band will be obliged to bring a suit against the city of Newburyport before they get their pay for furnishing music on "Greely day," last September." What is the matter, is the city too poor to pay for it, or was the music too poor to be paid for?

The wife of Rev. Albert Gould, formerly pastor of the Methodist church here, has been presented by the Society at Clinton with a beautiful and elaborate album quilt. It has over seven hundred names upon it including all the former pastors of the church.

Mr. John Murray played "London by Night" to a small audience at town hall last Wednesday night. The acting of Mr. Murray is about as fine as is ever seen on the road, and notwithstanding the small audience the play was not cut but given in full.

Lovers of athletic sports, should not miss the great wrestling exhibition for a purse of $150, at Mechanic Hall tonight, between H. M. Dufur of Marlboro, and W. A. Burbank of Hyde Park. There will also be dumb bell lifting and club swinging.

Mr. R. B. Conant, who lost a leg here by the cars last summer, is again visiting his customers in town. This time on crutches.

Officer Ferrin was unable to be on duty at town hall, Saturday night, on account of sickness.

Miss Abbie, daughter of Mr. Jacob Perley, is quite sick with nervous prostration.

The cigar store of Herbert Cox, on Caller street, was broken into on the morning of the fire and some cigars stolen.

A warrant in insolvency was issued yesterday on the estate of Geo. E. Lewis.

The So. Danvers Nat'l. Bank has declared a dividend of four per cent. payable April 1st., 1885.

The Warren Nat'l. Bank have declared a dividend of 3 per cent. payable April 1st, 1885.

Union Post 50 G. A. R. will give an entertainment Fast night, at Peabody Institute consisting of The Merritt Brothers, with Mrs. Lillie P. Hutchinson, of the famous Hutchinson family, and Theodore Chute, of the Hawthorne Quartette, of Boston.

Mr. E. C. Farwell, for the past ten years superintendent of the farm of Francis H. Appleton at West Peabody, has resigned and purchased a farm consisting of sixty acres at Reading. He will give particular attention to the dairy farming. The change was made necessary on account of his children as in their new home they are near the schools of the village. Mr. Farwell will be missed by the people in the western part of the town where he has been quite active.

The Salem News had a dispatch last night saying that Wm. Hayes had been brought before the Court on a writ of habeas corpus and held. So that he will be at once sent to Massachusetts.

WE TOLD YOU SO.

That Great Sale of Clothing bought of a retiring Boston Wholesale House was visionary, but

WILMOT'S

Great Sale of New York Clothing,

Bought at less than 33 per cent. of the actual cost is a bona fide fact. Our sales have been enormous since this sale began and proves to us that people appreciate the great bargains we offer.

SOME DEALERS are making a great hue and cry about a sale of $10 Suits, and labor under the impression that they are selling cheap. In order to show them and the people of Essex County that they are mistaken we shall to-day begin a SPECIAL SALE OF $10 SUITS.

Of over fifty different styles made from the following styles, of fabrics, viz: Black, Brown, Port Wine and Gold mixed Whipcord and Corkscrew Worsteds, Scotch and English Plaids, Cassimeres, Silk mixed and Sawyer finished Cassimeres, blue Yacht Cloths, etc., all cut in the latest styles and made and trimmed in the best possible manner. Every suit warranted all wool and never sold previous to this sale for less than $20, but you can have your choice now for only

$10 $10 $10

The History of our Unexampled Success and Bargains

FOR THIS WEEK.

The almost phenomenal rush we have had on the $10 Suits advertised last week, has almost closed the lot. The demand is unabated, however, and is so great that we have determined to offer this week

1000 ALL-WOOL CASSIMERE SUITS, TEN DOLLARS.

They are fresh from our machine rooms, and of the choicest SPRING STYLES, quiet Checks, Plaids and Mixtures, in Sack and Frock.

Every Suit is thoroughly All-Wool, made and trimmed in the best manner, cloth manufactured by such mills as Sawyer, Putnam, Harris, etc., and we guarantee, if you can obtain as good a quality elsewhere for less than $15, we will take back our Suit and refund the purchase money.

Never was such an opportunity offered to obtain a Stylish Spring Suit at a nominal price.

We have full lots and all sizes, 33 to 44.

RICH BLACK WHIPCORD SUITS TEN DOLLARS.

Warranted Pure Worsted and fast color, making an elegant Dress Suit. We have only about 100 Sacks and Frocks left, and this week will probably be the last chance to obtain one.

ELEGANT SPRING OVERCOATS FIFTEEN DOLLARS.

They are all made in the best manner in our own machine rooms, Satin Sleeve Linings, and in style and fit equal custom work. Sizes 33 to 44. The assortment includes choice styles of Whipcords, Meltons and Kerseys.

ALL-WOOL SPRING OVERCOATS TEN DOLLARS.

All sizes. Handsome and stylish patterns, all perfect in fit, and cannot be purchased elsewhere for less than $15.

Come early in the week. These prices admit no delay.

Orders by mail or express promptly filled.

THAT CAPS THE CLIMAX

AND PLACES ALL OTHER

Clothing Dealers' Bargains

In the Rear.

We have just purchased a large part of the stock of a well-known retiring wholesale Clothing firm of Boston, at a great discount from the first cost. To the above stock we have added all of our last spring's goods that were packed away, and shall offer to our patrons a stock of Twenty thousand dollars ($20,000) worth of good style, perfect and well made clothing, at such low figures that it would seem almost impossible to credit it. You will never believe it until you see for yourselves. This is no gammon about this sale.

Remember this is not a Bankrupt Stock of Clothing, neither is it a New York racket, both, we think, are about played out.

We give honest goods for honest money and at honest prices and agree to give better bargains from this stock than was ever given from any Bankrupt Sale ever started in this section of the country. This stock comprises the following lots, and is only a small part of our immense stock.

800 Men's and Young Men's Dress and Business Suits.
1500 Pairs Men's Pantaloons. 300 Boys' Long Pant Suits. 600 Men's, Young Men's, Boys' and Children's Overcoats.

Poet's Corner.

Why Girls Will Wed.

She rose at early daybreak,
With a sick and aching head,
And she said—this cross little woman—
"I wonder why girls will wed?
They wouldn't, I am sure, if they reckoned
The things that a wife must bear,
The never-done work of a household,
The never-done mother-care.

"Six-dozen pieces to wash to-day,
And the children must go to school,
And every one knows on washing days
Baby is cross, as a rule;
And Bridget is not to the work yet,
(Oh, dear, how my head does ache!)
Yet I shall have the dinner to cook,
And all of the beds to make."

But as soon as the breakfast was ready,
Father came in from the yard;
He kissed the sick little mother,
"Was sure that the work was hard."
He said to the noisy boys: "Be still!
Your mother's not well to-day;"
And wished, when he bade her "good by"
He "could kiss the pain away."

And the coffee or kiss—which was it?
Healed like a magical charm!
The spirit of diligent gladness
Was everywhere on the farm.
The father worked hard at the ploughing,
The mother forgot her pain,
Bridget did well with her washing,
There wasn't a drop of rain.

The baking and cleaning were over
When the boys came home from school;
Baby forgot it was washing-day,
And pleasantly broke his rule.
And at night the house was clean and bright—
There was not a thing amiss.
" 'Tis only a wife," the father thought,
"Would do so much for a kiss."

And the wife sitting down in the firelight,
The baby asleep at her side,
Her husband chatting and watching her
With a husband's loving pride,
Thought much of her full and pleasant home,
Of her children asleep in bed,
And said, with a sweet, contented laugh,
"No wonder that girls will wed!"

The Long Journey.

When our feet become heavy and weary,
And the valleys and mountains of life,
On the road has grown dusty and dreary,
And we groan in the struggle and strife,
We halt on the difficult pathway,
Glance back over valley and plain,
And sigh with a sorrowful longing
To travel the journey again.

For we know in the past there are pleasures,
And seasons of joy and delight,
While before all is doubting and darkness
And dread of the gloom and the night;
All bright sunny spots we remember—
And how little we thought of them then
But now we are looking and longing
To rest in those places again.

But vain of the vainest is sighing,
Our course must be forward and on,
We cannot turn back on the journey,
We cannot enjoy what is gone.
Let us hope then, as onward we travel,
That oases may brighten the plain,
That our road be beside the sweet waters
Though we may not begin it again.

Our existence forever goes upward—
From the hills to the mountains we rise,
On, on, o'er invisible summits,
To a land in the limitless skies.
Strive on, then, with courage unshaken,
True labor is never in vain—
Nor glance with regret at the pathway
No mortal can travel again.

Fenelon's Prayer.

"O Lord! take thou my heart,
I cannot give it thee;'t
'Tis bound so fast by earthly ties
I cannot wrest it free.
So close love's clinging tendrills twine,
How can it be entirely thine?

"And when thou takest it,
Keep it, O Lord! for I
Can never keep it for thee," while Earth's tempting voices cry:
"Come back to us, dear heart." But, oh!
My Father, do not let it go!
"And save me, Lord, in spite
Of my own self." For when
Sometimes I long for better things,
The wish takes flight again.
So, pitying Lord, I only pray,
Cast not so poor a heart away.

Selected Story.

His Little Love.

A snowy January afternoon.

Through the little windows of the warm waiting-room two travellers saw the snow blowing across the whitened fields, and heard the sweep of the wind among the leafless branches, and against the window panes.

A gentleman of about thirty stood by the window, one arm resting on a little shelf, and eyes bent on the girlish face beside him. He was not handsome, yet his was a face one would look at with as much or with more interest than if the features were as perfect as Apollo's own.

The eyes and mouth were full of power, the former especially, wonderfully expressive, and, as he spoke now, full of easy quizzical regard.

'Are you afraid of me, Miss Marion? Do you think I shall prove a tyrannical or lenient guardian?'

'I am not the least bit afraid of you, sir!' the young lady called. Marion answered, in a cold business-like voice, looking him in the eye.

'Not afraid? How!' he said, the smile around his mouth deepening.

'Do you generally inspire those who meet you with awe, Mr. Vann?'

'I am a lawyer,' he replied, therefore blessed with second sight, of course. Not only do we judge by the outward evidence of the thoughts in a client's heart, but the inner working of the vital organ is an open book to us. Your thought now—'

He paused.

'Well?' she asked impatiently.

'Are not flattering to me. You consider me an unmitigated bore, very cold and professional—not good-looking? You long for the school left behind you in the South, where days like this unheard of, and where the college students serenaded you and dedicated flowery sonnets to your beauty.'

The girl flushed and darted a quick angry glance at him from the dark eyes under the little tissue vail strapped across her nose.

'You are pleased to be sarcastic,' she said, with a little sneer and shrug; but of what matter is it? It it amuses you sir, it amuses me infinitely more. I am not afraid of your satire—neither do I like you.

Jerome Vann raised his brows in unfeigned surprise.

She was so petite, so childish in appearance, despite her 18 years, and the open animosity she expressed was so novel. It was all refreshing and he watched her amusedly as she went to a distant corner and buried herself in a novel, to the complete exclusion of himself.

All he could see beneath the book was a pair of extremely lovely red lips, and these he watched steadily, scarcely aware of it. Five minutes passed, ticked slowly off by the clock in the empty waiting room, and a brown curl appeared above the rim of the book, then one curious and brightly angry eye which met his and disappeared like a flash.

Jerome laughed. He knew that by that outburst of mirth he totally lost all vantage ground with her, but he could not help it.

Still smiling he walked slowly to her side.

'Do not freeze me!' he said pathetically, holding out his hand; 'we must be friends, you know.'

'Not at all!' she said coldly. I am absolutely sure that we shall never agree! Better begin as we shall surely end!'

'You dislike me?'

'I have said so!' she answered, turning the leaf.

'And why? Because I have been unfortunate enough to have unwittingly offended you?'

'You have laughed at me! I do not know what name they give it in the North, but in Virginia we should call that unmannerly.'

'If I have been so, Miss Romero, I sincerely beg pardon,' Jerome said stiffly, and retired to the window to whistle the 'Exile of Erin,' in most distracting discord, until the train puffed in.

* * * * *

Jerome sat by the library fire, a cigar between his lips, his hands clasped idly, his eyes almost closed.

He was listening to a story which interested him.

A younger man was also sitting by the fire, a cane in his hand, and his chin resting on the top of it. He was a very handsome young fellow, and the firelight playing on his head, turned his hair to gold, and made the intense, earnest blue eyes seem black.

'I have loved her from the beginning,' he said slowly. 'Through all the past months I have loved Marion silently; now I will tell her of it with your permission, and learn my fate. Better ultimate rejection than this suspense.'

Ned Buffington, you love my ward?' Jerome asked calmly, and no evidence that his heart was beating like a boys's could been seen in his face. 'You love her truly, you say?'

'I do! Upon my honor!' Ned replied. 'That surely is not strange! Could a man, seeing her constantly as I have done, not lose his heart to her?'

'You know of course, that she was left a fortune?' Jerome asked again in the same quiet voice.

'I have heard so. Perhaps, indeed, it is the only thing to be regretted, for I love her, and have abundance for both,' Ned answered regretfully.

'It is no longer to be regretted. Marion has nothing! In the recent failure she lost it all!'

'All!' the young fellow echoed, and there was silence.

'Marion is very proud,' Jerome continued. 'If she knew that she was not absolutely independent of my bounty, I believe she would not stay an hour longer beneath this roof. But, poor child, she need never know, at least, until after she has been married.'

The deep expressive voice ceased with a regretful ring, and then he concluded, more cheerily:

'Go, and I wish you success in your wooing.'

Ned wrung his hand and left the room, and in a very few moments Jerome followed.

For awhile the fire glowed on noisily in the grate, the wind howled and the quiet remained unbroken; then the heavy velvet curtains were drawn back, and Marion stepped out from behind.

Her face was pallid as a ghost's her dark eyes were burning with fierce pride, and very angry; her lips were trembling with excitement and suppressed resentment.

'Great heavens!' she cried with a passionate stamp. 'What deceit! How often have I hurled the fact in his face that I was glad—infinitely I owed him nothing. He calmly heard me knowing that it was a beggar's delusion he was listening to!' She paused, and her flashing eyes turned on the chair he had lately occupied. 'How he detests me, too,' she said with emphasis. I have never tried to win his favor—we have never been friendly, and to think for weeks past, or perhaps months I have eaten his bread and spent his money thinking it entirely my own. But it is over—I shall not stay. In the wide world there is surely room for me to earn my bread!'

She drew back the curtain and looked out. The stars were shining frostily, but the wild March wind was making havoc of every stray leaf and fragment in its path.

The streets were deserted. It was an unusual bitter night of that blusterous month, a night when humanity keeps its head snail-like, indoors, when the crackle of a bright fire is the sweetest sound on earth.

Marion, with a little shiver, turns away.

'I must go!' she muttered; not another night will I stay here a beggar on his bounty. Old Mrs. Chaplin, though she is poor, will keep me for my mother's sake until I get something to do and pay her back.' She paused a second by Jerome's arm-chair, and leaned her arm on the back of it. 'I wish—I wish he did not dislike me so,' she whispered, and the tears tempered the lustre of her eyes. 'It was my abominable temper at first, and now, he is tired of me, would gladly marry me to the first coxcomb that asks.'

This mood only lasted a second, and all their old fierceness returned.

'But what am I saying?' she said, dashing away the tears and trying to control her quivering lips. 'Do I not hate this man? This superior being who treats me like a wilful child. Am I not glad by accident I learned the truth of my position? Certainly! Am I not delighted at the possibility of feeling independent, away from his benevolent smile? I am, and the time will come when Jerome Vann will wonder that he ever laughed at me and my vagaries."

All the warm Southern nature aroused, she went to the desk and began to write a note to this detested guardian.

'Sir,' it dashed off, 'ten minutes since I learned my position in your house, and it is such an undesirable one that I renounce it this night. You, who have disapproved of me so strongly, will no doubt be pleased to learn that I have broken from your reins and fled. Good-night and good-bye to you, sir. MARION.

'P. S. I distinctly and emphatically refuse to marry Mr. Buffington.'

An hour later she was on the street, the wind blowing her cloak, and twisting her veil till it looked like a signal of distress.

There was nothing of the heroine about her as she hurried along, keeping on the darkest side of the street, her head lowered, and the tears dropping thick and fast on her cloak Poor Marion! The first touch of the world, in which she stood alone, was cold and blustery.

The weeks passed by on leaden feet. Advertisements and detectives were both of no avail, and Jerome Vann's face grew strangely old and sad, for Marion's whereabouts still remained a mystery.

He loved her far more than he ever realized. He longed to see that spirited, magnetic face again and to hear the pert, merry voice which had made such drollery of his well-meant advice.

Day after day passed, each one an exact repetition of the preceding one, and all very weary, sickening blanks to the rich lawyer in his stately home.

It was June. Sunny, soft weather reigned in the city. Roses bloomed everywhere, in florist windows, in market carts, in wealthy gardens—everywhere the fragrant bunches of different hued flowers waved in the breeze.

Jerome was standing at his library window, looking out at the throng of promenaders and open carriages dashing along. His eyes were no longer filled with suspense, they were far worse—calm and hopeless.

He had left nothing untried to discover her whereabouts, and it had all been worse than useless. He had been beating his heart out with pain, in alternate hope and failure, in passionate longing, and now all was over. Without any renewed vigor he was still deep in professional duties, trying, but vainly, to take up the thread of existence as though Marion had never been known and dearly loved.

He took up his hat and cane and went out. His steps led him to Broadway. The thoroughfare was crowded and he walked slowly along, his moody face, with its quietly bitter expression, in marked contrast to those around him.

Many saw and envied the rich and successful lawyer. Could they have but read that rich man's heart! And so, in the supreme blindness of egregious vanity, do we judge one another.

He paused to look at a picture which attracted a number of people. It was a quaint design in water colors, in the shape of a small screen.

The picture showed the sea on a stormy day, with the floating spars and masts of a wrecked ship appearing above the angry waves in the distance. All the coloring of the picture is centered in two figures on the shore.

One, the dead body of a drowned sailor, curls lying on his forehead, his eyes closed, and his blue jacket torn, showing the powerful chest in which the heart would never beat again. The other, a young girl with a face of extreme loveliness, though convulsed with anguish.

Her dress denoted that she was a fisher lass, and as she bent over the body of her lover, one hand over his heart, the other holding on the little black hood she wore, the expression of her eyes were strangely real and touching. The subject was an old one, yet this little water-color sketch held a quaint, original power of its own.

Jerome looked at it, puzzled and fascinated. There was a strange resemblance in the man to some one he had known; nay, more. With wondering eyes he realized that it was a perfect picture of himself.

He went into the store and bought it, at the same time obtaining the artist's address, and followed the direction with feverish haste.

The house was a small one, in a street which the word 'genteel' describes. On inquiring at the door for the artist who resides there he was told to knock at the door at the end of the passage.

He did so, but, receiving no answer, opened the door, and found himself in a shabby-clean, unoccupied room. Another room adjoined it. Jerome advanced hesitatingly, and stood on the threshold looking in, as though his hungry eyes would never be tired gazing at the picture he saw there.

Marion, in a plain, black dress was sitting at an easel, the brush lying idle in her lap, and her eyes turned languidly toward the open window, through which the sunbeams was straying.

Her figure looked very slight, and out of the pale face her eyes shone with unhealthy lustre.

She turned her head and saw him standing in the doorway. Without a start or sound, or any change of feature except the tightening of her lips, she rose to her feet.

Jerome came forward and took the feverish, unresisting hands in his.

What would he say? In what words express the suffering of the past weary months? She was before him now, and the wild, impassioned torrent he had imagined bursting from his lips at this happy moment had completely deserted him.

When he spoke at last, the words were common-place enough, but they covered the entire ground.

'I never thought to see you again, Marion; but I have found you!'

'And you really remembered me so long?' she asked, with a flash of something like the old defiance.

The expression which came into his eyes answered her, and he took the picture from its wrappings.

'This led me to you,' he said, with impressive tenderness, 'and it also told me that you had remembered me so long.'

Marion flushed and turned away; but she could not deny it. The proof was there.

Jerome drew her to his faithful heart, which had suffered many a bitter throb for his little love, and kissed her with solemn, heartfelt earnestness.

Thus peace was declared between them forever.

A week later they were married in Mrs. Chaplin's little front room, and after a Canadian tour, Marion settled in the old home in a new character.—[Philadelphia News.

CARPET AND UPHOLSTERY DEPARTMENT.

Carpet Department

Our Carpet Business since Feb. 1st, in consequence of the low prices, has been unexpectedly large.

We are glad for ourselves, also for the public, and propose to open our on the same line, believing that a largely increased business will compensate us for the smaller per cent. of profit.

It will be noted, that no matter how low our prices are fixed, our Carpets are always of good quality and desirable styles.

We are now receiving a great variety of choice things in all grades of Carpetings.

BRUSSELS CARPETS.

Special attention is invited to our Brussels Stock. We are informed that it is much larger than any other in Essex County.

It comprises novelties in Hartford, Lowell and Bigelow Brussels, with several other approved makes, at popular prices.

We shall continue to offer for the present a good line of the best

5 Frame Brussels Carpets at $1.

These Carpets are as good as the best, and comprise some excellent styles.

GLENHAM VELVET CARPETS.

This beautiful grade of Carpet which compares favorable with the Axminster and Wilton owes its origin to A. T. Stewart, who shortly before his death, planned its manufacture for the benefit of the Retail Department of the Famous House of which he was the head.

It is a beautiful and durable carpet at a reasonable price, and has grown in popularity from the first. We carry a full line of these Carpets.

TAPESTRY BRUSSELS CARPETS.

Roxbury & Smith Tapestries, Elegant New Styles.

We shall continue for the present to sell a good Tapestry at 50 cents.

A Good Line of New

EXTRA SUPER CARPETS.

Extra Super Carpets at 60 cents.

All Wool Carpets at 42 cents.

Cotton Chain Carpets at tremendously low prices. Our goods were bought before the great strike, and some carpets will probably soon advance on account of the scarcity of desirable goods.

Some manufacturers now take orders at an advance in price.

We devote special halls for each kind of carpeting mentioned.

We buy our goods direct from the manufacturer.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

HYCIENIC CARPET BEATING.

We Steam-Beat Carpets Entirely Free from Dust & Dirt.

There is no article in a household that collects more unhealthy dirt than a carpet. After the carpet has been in use some time, sweeping takes off only a part of the dust and dirt, and the rest settles down into the fibre, to rise again and be breathed into delicate lungs. Dust clings tenaciously to some fibres, especially woolen. No ordinary beating process will remove it. Hand-beating is ineffective. Our method of beating is the only thorough and effective one.

We invite investigation as to the merit of our claim, to wit, that we can beat carpets as clean as they can be made, and without injury to them, as we use no hooks, nails or screws, and require no ripping nor sewing to adjust them to our machine. It is essential to clean carpets thoroughly, if they are worth it; for carpets, like other household articles, will absorb impurities and retain them tenaciously

This can be tested by closing a room after the carpet has been in use some time, and on opening the room an offensive order is often emitted.

We can also apply our heated, or dry steam process in addition to the machine for removing dust and dirt; and the process will effectually relieve the carpet of all impurities, and also brings out and freshens the colors. It also kills Moths, Buffalo Bugs, and all other vermin that infest carpets.

STREET
GOSSIP,
AS GLEANED BY NOTES
Mulcahy

When the editor has a town meeting report in the paper "Mulcahy" gets left. Well, his readers will have to take what was left out last week, warmed over.

This has been a hard winter for shows in this town. I think that while the attendance was poor and wretched the first of the season it is worse as the season advances. When an actor like John Murray in Rip Van Winkle, a piece in which he has a reputation nearly equal to that of Joe Jefferson, will take at the box office less than twenty dollars, do you wonder that Peabody is beginning to be known among professional people as a "graveyard?" I do not wonder they give it that name when a first class minstrel show like that of Mr. Hi Henry's, whose expense list could not be less than $225 a day will only draw $175 house, while last season a company of fourth rate performers by taking the name of "Haverly" drew a $300 house and had $160 advance sale. Soon no first class company will come here leaving the refuse to try their luck and the people to be humbugged.

We are approaching the end of the penitential season, and the past month has been spent with the prayer-book, but I notice the Lenten season has not been wholly given up to gloom and church going. While dancing and theatre going has been tabooed the roller skating rink has been more extensively patronized, and society's fair penitents have found a little recreation there at least one night in the week.

The swindle on Mr. Viles brought to light a swindle on another well-to-do-farmer which happened last summer. It seems that early last spring a well dressed man drove out to his place, which was some distance from the square, and pretended he wanted to purchase a piece of meadow land. He said he had land the other side of Boston and made that city his headquarters. He would not decide at present but wanted to correspond with him, consequently he would like his address, so he took from his pocket a piece of paper and requested the farmer to write his address, which he did, and the stranger departed. About two months afterwards he received a notice from a Boston broker that they held his note for $50 which was about due. This proved to be the paper he signed, but it would seem that the fellow left the correspondence for the Boston broker to do.

I was much impressed during the performance at the town hall last week of Mr. John Murray, by the beautiful stage effects. The audience saw the street scene dropped so low that the ropes that held it could be plainly seen, --it was a wonderful sight—a street suspended in mid-air by ropes, and when the scene was being changed one end was up and the other down; that I presume was to illustrate the condition as it appeared to the man who came "rolling home in the morning." Then there was the parlor scene that was dropped to within about six inches of the stage and the audience saw a dado work around the bottom composed of the stage hands and company as they moved about. These were little things, yet they didn't help the play any.

I learn there was nearly a rupture at a meeting of the West Peabody Farmer's Club recently, all owing to the innocent little things in this column. One of the prominent members to amuse himself and thinking to be funny prepared a picture of a donkey, which he showed with appropriate remarks. After he had taken his seat the Rev. Mr. Spaulding arose and said, "When one donkey brays his fellows follow in the same line; they bray too." This was too much for the member and he commenced to boil. I believe they put pounded ice on his head to cool him off.

I attended the Grand Army lecture last Wednesday night and much enjoyed the Rev. V. M. Simons' remarks. He carried the audience with him from childhood through youth to mature years, through the season of love and marriage to the time when the man carried home a high chair under his coat and had a cradle sent in at night; then he began to talk about the days of courtship as if that was the next in order. Now if this had happened in any other town than Peabody I should have thought the lecturer had got his manuscript mixed.

Now I am waiting to see what efforts will be made by the L. & O. League toward helping Daniel Manning to a situation. As I understand Manning, who is a whitener by trade, is willing to accept a situation and let the rum business alone. There are a number of business men, members of the League who might give him a job, and the officers are all men of influence. Will they help him to a respectable business, or will a flattering offer from some Salem rum seller be accepted?

I hear that the manager of the Lucier family went into one of our barber shops last week and after getting shaved called for a little lavender water. The barber didn't keep it, but the composition he used instead will teach the young man not to call for lavender water in a country barber shop. He got a composition of alcohol, ammonia, hair tonic and cosmetic that left him with as lasting a perfume as lavender water.

Analyzing the Baking Powders.

"ROYAL" THE ONLY ABSOLUTELY PURE BAKING POWDER MADE.—ACTION OF THE NEW YORK STATE BOARD OF HEALTH. Under the direction of the New York State Board of Health, eighty-four different kinds of baking powders, embracing all the brands that could be found for sale in the State, were submitted to examination and analysis by Prof. C. F. Chandler, a Member of the State Board, and President of the New York City Board of Health, assisted by Prof. Edward G. Love, the well-known late United States Government chemist.

The official report shows that a large number of the powders examined were found to contain alum or lime; many of them to such an extent as to render them seriously objectionable for use in the preparation of human food.

Alum was found in twenty-nine samples. This drug is employed in baking powders to cheapen their cost. The presence of lime is attributed to the impure cream of tartar of commerce used in their manufacture. Such cream of tartar was also analyzed and found to contain lime and other impurities, in some samples to the extent of 93 per cent. of their entire weight.

All the baking powders of the market, with the single exception of "Royal" (not including the alum and phosphate powders, which were long since discarded as unsafe or inefficient by prudent housekeepers) are made from the impure cream of tartar of commerce and consequently contain lime to a corresponding extent.

The only baking powder yet found by chemical analysis to be entirely free from lime and absolutely pure is the "Royal." This perfect purity results from the exclusive use of cream of tartar specially refined and prepared by Co., which totally remove the tartrate of lime and other impurities. The cost of this chemically pure cream of tartar is much greater than any other, and on account of this greater cost is used in no baking powder but the "Royal."

Prof. Love, who made the analysis of baking powders for the New York State Board of Health, as well as for the Government, says of the purity and wholesomeness of "Royal:"

"I have tested a package of 'Royal Baking Powder' which I purchased in the open market, and find it composed of pure and wholesome ingredients. It is a cream of tartar powder of a high degree of merit.

E. G. LOVE, Ph. D."

The three act comedy of "Not so bad after all" was presented at the Danvers Hospftal on last Tuesday evening, with the following.

Captain Marchmont,	Dr. Gorton.
Lieut. Worthington,	Dr. Harrington.
Dr. Brunt,	Dr. Jewett.
Capt. Poppet,	Mr. Sweetser.
Smart,	Mr. Starbird.
James O'Brien,	Mr. Walker.
Mrs. Marchmont,	Miss Scott.
Mrs. Dr. Brunt,	Mrs. Starbird.
Mrs. Poppet,	Miss Gallagher.
Miss Clara Smeaton,	Miss McLean.
Sally Maybud,	Miss Hunter.

The performance was a very even one for so large a cast, and most creditably rendered. It is rather unfair to criticise amateurs, but as the leading parts were mostly impersonated by the "professors of this dramatic college," we were led to expect somethhng for future students to imitate. Dr. Gorton's Capt. Marchmont was all that could be desired. Miss Scott mastered the diffculties of the role of his invalid wife, and gave a capital piece of character acting. Miss Hunter was indeed a "Maybud," and looked very pretty and acted with much spirit as Sally. We think she should be assigned leading roles. Mrs. Starbird well fitted her part and seemed perfectly at home. Capt. Poppet had a very soldierly bearsng and executed the "left wheel" with Miss Gallagher nicely. Dr's. Harrington and Jewett and Mr. Starbird deserve especial mention. The "backward act" of the two first named brought down the house. Mr. Walker looked and acted well the part of the Irish servant, causing much merriment. Miss McLean looked charming and made the most of the small part assigned her. The comedy was handsomely costumed and staged, particularly the lawn scene of the first act.

SPOKESHARE.

OBITUARY.

(From The Charlestown News.)

Capt. William Harrison Roberts, a former resident of Charlestown, died suddenly of heart disease in Blaine, Kansas, last Sunday, shortly after arising from the dinner table, at the age of 44 years and 4 months.

Capt. Roberts was born in Alfred, Me., and was one of a family of ten children—seven boys and three girls. The deceased is the second link of a chain of ten to be broken, the first being the oldest member of the family, Mrs. F. O. Reed of this city, who died Nov. 12, 1883. She was a lady beloved and respected by all who knew her. The deceased came to Charlestown when quite a young man, and was employed by the firm of F. O. Reed & Co., grocers, where, by his faithful and punctual attention to business and courteous and pleasant manners, endeared himself to all who came in contact with him, and he enjoyed the friendship and association of a large circle of friends. The deceased was one who loved to meet his fellowmen socially, and he was a member of several orders. He was a charter member of Charlestown Lodge, No. 192, Knights of Honor, and a Past Dictator of that lodge. For two years he was also Reporter of the lodge. He was also a member of Court Orient, No. 2, Loyal Knights and Ladies, and represented them in the Imperial Court. He was a member of Bunker Hill Lodge, No. 14, I. O. O. F., also. During the war he served in the Putnam Blues, 47th Regiment Mass. Vols. After returning from the war he joined the Prescott Light Guards, a popular horse company in Charlestown for many years, and was captain of the same for several years, he being a special favorite of the corps.

As an Odd Fellow, he was true to the principles of that order, having a firm friendship for his fellow brothers, unbounded love for the principles eminated by this great brotherhood, and truth with him was an imperial virtue. As an officer he was dignified, yet pleasant, firm yet impartial, kind and sympathetic, and beloved and respected by all of the fraternity. In the death of Capt. Roberts, the community in which he lived has lost an honest and upright citizen. The fraternities of which he was a member have lost one whose life and character was a standard worthy of emulation. As a soldier and military officer his courage was undaunted, his fidelity to his trust was sacred and not to be tampered with. A beloved brother, a true husband, a kind and loving father and an honored and respected citizen. Some years ago Capt. Roberts went West and farmed it for a while, returning to Boston a year or two ago. Recently he went West again, established himself in business and had written for his family, a wife and three daughters, to join him. They were nearly packed up, when the sad news of his sudden death turned happiness to sorrow and instead of meeting the husband and father in a new home, the dead body of their loved one is brought to them to be committed to the grave. What a striking instance is this of the uncertainty of human life, and how strongly does it emphasize the Scriptural injunction, "Be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye know not, the Son of Man cometh." The bereaved family have the deepest sympathy of a large circle of friends, and the brotherhood to which the deceased was bound by the strong ties of fraternity will extend to the grief-stricken ones their tender sympathy and loving care in their hour of sorrow.

SOMETHING FOR THE BABY:—What a terrible affliction about the house is a cross crying baby! A young man on the very edge of matrimony might easily be frightened from his purposes by having too much of that sort of music at the homes of his married friends. Yet babies cry commonly only when they are sick. One teaspoonful of Parker's Tonic, given the little one will bring rest and sleep to the baby and all in the house. Only 50 cents at druggists.

It is a question with ladies now whether they will teach their poodles to skate on rollers or not.

A Great Victory

A Terrible Case of Scrofula Cured by

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"In the winter of 1879 I was attacked with Scrofula in one of the most aggravating forms. At one time I had no less than thirteen large abscesses over and around my neck and throat, continually exuding an offensive mass of bloody matter disgusting to behold, and almost intolerable to endure. It is impossible to fully describe my sufferings, as the case was complicated with Chronic Catarrh. After three years of misery, having been treated by three physicians, I was worse than ever. Finally, on the recommendation of W. J. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, I was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. And now, after having taken twelve bottles, within the last twelve months, the scrofulous eruptions have entirely ceased, and the abscesses have all disappeared, except the unsightly scars, which are daily becoming 'smaller by degrees, and beautifully less.' I do not know what it may have done for others, but I do know that in my case, Hood's Sarsaparilla has proved an effective specific indeed. As an evidence of my gratitude I send these facts unsolicited, and I am ready to verify the authenticity of this cure, by personal correspondence with any one who doubts it." CHARLES A. ROBERTS, East Wilson, N. Y.

This statement is confirmed by W. J. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, N. Y., who calls the cure a great victory for Hood's Sarsaparilla. Send for book giving statements of many cures.

The Peabody Press.

JOHN P FERNALD, ALBERT VITTUM,
Editors and Publishers

THE BOSTON Advertiser of Mch. 18 in an editorial on "How elective prosecutors use their powers" gave a careful digest of the work of the district attorney of that county with reference to appealed liquor cases. It showed that a very large proportion of these cases, on which a plea of guilty had been entered or a conviction secured in the lower court, had been shelved or placed on file for the past four years, and the power to do this or push the cases to trial rested entirely with the district attorney, who is an elective officer.

The article was so severe on Mr. Stevens, the district attorney for Suffolk county, as to call out from him a reply; in which instead of explaining the cause of the trouble complained of by the Advertiser, he takes occasion to attack the Law and Order League. He claims that the article in the Advertiser was written in its interest and closes with these words which were taken up by our neighbor last week: "until the Law and Order League is represented by men who will confine their efforts to the honest intent of its membership, the prevention of flagrant abuses of the privileges conferred by licenses, the suppression of the unlicensed and the protection of youth from the danger of their being supplied with liquor, without resorting to trivial technicalities, it cannot expect to get the sympathy of the average juror. As at present managed in this county, the league is worse than useless. It is a nursery of perjury."

That our readers may see what caused this indignation on the part of Mr. Stevens against the Law and Order League, we give the figures as found by the Advertiser. They were taken from the official returns prepared by the Clerk of the Superior Court for Suffolk County, on file at the State House.

In 1881 (about) 249 appealed liquor cases were pending from 1880, or were begun. In 8 of these the plea was, in substance (i. e., including nolo contendere), guilty. Of the others, only 6 were brought to trial; in 2 the verdict was guilty; in 4, not guilty; nol. pros'd. 4; placed on file, 95; went over to 1882, 120.

In 1882, 120 appeals were pending from 1881, 194 appeals were begun. In 42 the plea was, in substance, guilty. Of the others only 11 were brought to trial; in 5 the verdict was guilty; in 5, not guilty: in 1 the jury disagreed; nol. pros'd, 13; placed on file, 168; went over to 1883, 49.

In 1883, 49 appeals were pending from 1882, 248 appeals were begun. In 50 the plea was, in substance, guilty; brought to trial 26; in 9 the verdict was guilty; in 14 not guilty; in 3 the jury disagreed, nol. pros'd, 40; placed on file, 146; went over to 1884, 42.

In 1884, 42 appeals were pending from 1883, 295 appeals were begun. In 77 the plea was, in substance, guilty. In 3 the verdict was guilty; in 9, not guilty; in 2 the jury disagreed; nol. pros'd, 131; placed on file, 132; went over to 1885, 15.

Our object in this article is not to defend the Boston Advertiser or the Law and Order League. They are abundantly able to take care of themselves. But we wish to call attention by these facts to the usual defence of the friends of the liquor dealer; viz: an attack upon the Law and Order League. In Suffolk County, the license of liquor sellers predominates; that license which our dealers here were so anxious to obtain. Yet the work of the League is sufficient to bring an attack from the district attorney. Such attacks on the League manifest themselves in three ways: (1st) in the abuse of and incorrect statement of its methods; (2d) in the assertion that its complaints and prosecutions are upon technicalities; (3d) that the League has done and is doing no good.

So frequent is this abuse and so frequently are the methods of the League misstated that it is necessary to ring the changes again and again on their motto: "We ask only obedience to law." The League makes no attack on the law as it exists; it asks for no new law—no changes in the old. It usurps the province of no officer of the law; it only seeks to aid him. It asks that the law be enforced. One of the most frequent attacks upon the League is with reference to the employment of "spotters." We are perfectly satisfied that in the sense in which the word "spotter" is understood by the dealer, none such are employed by the League,—at all events not now. Men are employed to ascertain violations of the law. And this is more necessary in a license than in a no-license place. In the town of Peabody every sale of liquor, except by a druggist, is a violation of the law. In Salem, after the first of May, sales of liquor in accordance with the provisions of the licenses, are not violations of the law. In this town the employment of such agents has been rarely resorted to the past year; and in each case other and better testimony was obtainable. The benefit of the League to this town has been in its moral power. The agents of the League—the League itself has not done the work of the enforcement of the law. That belongs to our police force. And right well have they done it. In the city of Boston the League has not that moral power. That city is under the control of the rum power. Its officers are appointed by that power, and to enforce the liquor law is to cut off their own head. Then it is that the League must resort to other means. When, if ever, our own town becomes under the control of the rum power, the moral power of the League in this sense we have mentioned will be to that extent lost.

It belongs to district attorney Stevens to assert that the complaints of the Law and Order League are upon technicalities. Three-quarters of the complaints of Mr. Dudley and his agents in Boston are for the sale of liquor to minors, and the illegal sale on the Lord's day. And this is what the district attorney calls trivial! And it is in these cases that jurors will not convict! The information thus imparted is valuable, to say the least. Then he complains of the prosecutions of the League under the nuisance act. Well he may! We know how that has worked here. The penalty for conviction under this act, for second offense, must be imprisonment. This the liquor seller fears more than a fine. And the absolute knowledge, here, that these cases would be followed up, has completely demoralized the business, whereas the imposition of a fine alone, as was the case with the Salem dealers, was considered of small moment.

Finally, to quote again from Mr. Stevens, "the League is useless, and is a nursery of perjury." This last comes with ill grace from the district attorney, who has been trying for nearly a year to obtain conviction for perjury of two of the agents of the League. If they are guilty they ought to be convicted, and the Law and Order League will say Amen! But until they are, it would look the part of wisdom on Mr. Stevens' part to keep silence on this point. But is the League useless? Is it doing no good? Ask the liquor dealers of this town. Ask the liquor dealers of any town or city where there is a well organized working League. The best evidence of its good is the dismay of its enemies. They only strike back when they are hurt. The League in Boston has not stopped the illegal sale of liquor there. No one claims it. With officers who dare not enforce the law, with police commissioners appointed by the city government, which is controlled by the rum power, it has done all that could be expected. Its friends find no fault with its work. Many places of resort are closed on Sundays for the first time for years. The sale of liquor to minors has largely decreased. Let the enemies of the League continue to assail it—it is the best evidence that its methods and work are bearing fruit.

THAT CANARD ABOUT HAYES.—The story of the capture of Hayes copied in an Essex county paper and alleged to be from a New Orleans paper is untrue from beginning to end. The paper stated that Hayes was arrested before Shaw got to New Orleans. There is not a word of truth in the statement, and we almost doubt whether it was ever published in a New Orleans paper. Officer Shaw is entitled to great credit for what he did in this case.—Salem Telegram.

Has the Telegram become such an adebt in piracy and deception as to accuse other papers of descending to its corrupt practices? The story above referred to was published by us from the New Orleans Picayune and duly credited to that paper. If the Telegram doubts its genuineness, we can convince it in short measure. It was a great deal more genuine than the "special dispatches" to that paper, which were copied from the Boston Herald, and in the absence of any definite information we thought it to be full as reliable. In the Lynn Item's interview with Shaw, he states that he knew of the publication in the New Orleans papers, but considering the assistance he had received he did not care to contradict it. Officer Shaw is certainly entitled to credit, and the Telegram can give him all that is necessary, without accusing other papers of what no respectable journal would ever think of doing.

The New England Conference of Methodists holds its eighty-sixth annual session at Springfield April 9. This Conference includes the greater portion of this state. Bishop Foss is to preside. There are about 250 ministers connected with it. Nearly 50 of these are from age or feebleness, not in the active ministry. About 35 in the active ministry have reached the three years limit and will be changed to other appointments. Usually about the same number of one and two years men are moved, so that 70 changes will probably be made.

The entertainment and dance by the West Peabody Farmers' Club was largely attended last Thursday evening, and much enjoyed by those present.

Second Adjourned Town Meeting.

The second adjournment of the Annual Town Meeting was called to order by Mr. Merrill, the Moderator, last Monday afternoon. The first business was the report of the committee on the location of the School House and it was presented by Mr. S. A. Southwick as follows:

The Committee authorized to select a lot of land for a new School House report as follows:—

That they have examined all known suitable lots in the proposed new district. A lot on Tremont street, between Fulton and Midway street, containing about 33000 feet, can be purchased for $2000, a portion of the lot at pro rata price. The committee recommend the purchase of about 20000 feet of the above named lot on the corner of Tremont and Midway streets.

Mr. Southwick said that the cost of the land would be some $1200 and if 20,000 feet were purchased, it would give ample play ground for the children.

Jonathan King said he understood by the last report of the committee that the whole expense would not exceed the sum appropriated at the last meeting, and now this committee report the purchase of the land at $1200 and he wanted to know if this sum was included in the original estimate. Chairman Southwick said that it did and the estimate was a little less than the figures given. Mr. Farnham said that while the cost of this would be only from $1200 to $1300 in the original estimate, the cost of the land had been figured at from $1500 to $1800.

C. B. Farley thought that if the committee should not be able to conclude the bargain satisfactorily, they should have some leeway, so that they would not be obliged to purchase this particular piece. S. F. Blaney thought that it was $2000 well expended to take the whole lot. Suppose that part of the town grows, as we hope it will, we may need the land for a hose house or a larger school house. When the land can be bought for six cents a foot it was better to take the whole lot at $2000, than have a lot of tenement houses put on one side of the lot, and he moved that the report be amended so as to recommend the purchase of the whole lot at an expense not exceeding $2000 Mr. Farley said he would favor the purchase of the entire lot, but he questioned whether the committee can buy the whole lot and carry out the project recommended inside the appropriation of $9500, if so, he would favor the motion.

Mr. King said he understood that the Committee have taken this matter under careful consideration and they have come to the conclusion that it is better to purchase a part, rather than the whole of the lot. The committee have done what they think right and now for the town to make an expenditure that is not asked for, he did not consider right. He hoped the motion would not prevail.

Mr. Southwick said he did not want to be on the committee if the motion prevailed. If $2000 was to be spent he was not in favor of that lot as, he considered for the money they could secure something better at less price. Thought it was an unnecessary expense the purchase of the whole piece. Mr. Blaney said he hoped if Mr. Southwick had something equally as good for less money he would "spit it out" and let the people hear what it was. Mr. Southwick said the lot on English street contained about the same number of feet and could be bought for $1800. He favored Tremont street, because the inhabitants of the district wanted it, but in his opinion the English street lot was the best. Mr. Farnham thought ill-advised to order the committee to buy the whole lot, he should be unwilling to spend $700 in advance of the recommendation. He did not believe in providing for the future "Sufficient to the day is the evil thereof." He thought it was wiser to leave it to the owners for speculation than for the town. It was not often that the town had an opportunity to purchase a part of a lot pro rata. He thought that for a school house that size, the 20000 feet was enough, and that the town was not in a condition financially to look forward but to only provide for the present.

W. P. Clark said if the town bought the whole lot the house would be put in the corner of 20000 feet and the rest of the land would not be used. Mr. Blaney did not take much stock in the talk about the extravagance of the town, if the whole lot is secured the 33000 feet is bounded by three streets and would make a good open lot and give the pupils a breathing place. The lot is worth as much after the house is built as it is now, and if the town don't want it, they can dispose of it for fully as much as it cost them, and the town would miss it if they didn't buy the whole lot. The motion was carried 43 Yes to 34 No.

Mr. King wanted to know if the whole expense that had been voted at the previous meeting would include this extra purchase, as he understood the vote, we had voted to locate the school house on a lot paying a sum exceeding that recommended by the committee. Mr. Southwick said he would not stand on the committee if they could not have $500 additional, as he thought the house could not be built inside the appropriation. A vote on the report as amended was then taken and adopted 37 Yes to 32 No.

Wm. P. Clark declined to serve on the committee. Frank E. Farnham said he wanted to see one building erected that would come inside the appropriation, but as he saw no prospect of it since the last vote taken, he would decline. T. J. Relihan said he understood the committee reserved $500 in their estimate for leeway, and if they estimated the cost of the English street lot at $1800, this lot will cost but $200 more than what they estimated and take that from the $500 then they have $300 to work with.

Mr. Lyman Osborne declined to serve on the committee, and also S. A. Southwick declined. John Linehan said he didn't like to see them all decline just because their recommendation was not adopted, he believed in the rule of the majority Albert Vittum moved that a committee of five be appointed by the chair to retire and nominate a list to fill the vacancies. Mr. King said the committee had reported and the town had voted to have them locate the school house and report to this meeting and now they declined; he did not consider it proper to select a new committee unless there was as large a number present as at the previous meeting. Mr. Farnham wanted to know if Mr. Vittum's motion conflicted with the by-laws and the moderator informed him it did not. Mr. Farley said it was a very able committee and regretted that they declined, and hoped they would see their way clear to remain, if there was any way to bring it about he would like to see the committee have sufficient funds for their purpose.

The motion was carried and the chairman was appointing the committee, several gentlemen declining to stand, when Jas. P. King moved to reconsider the vote whereby we voted to buy the whole piece of land, supplementing it with remarks in favor of his motion. Mr. Blaney regretted the spirit manifested by the committee, it had shown itself for just what it is, the spirit of unless we rule we will ruin. If our report is not accepted, we will kill the whole thing and we wont serve unless you down and down the expressed will of the majority. If this committee see fit to resign, let them, there are men that are their equal, they are not all there is in this creation. Let them go, let their action bear its own fruit, I regret they have put themselves on record as they have; I have my opinion of their action and the object of it. Mr. Farnham said he had listened to that eloquence in the past and it was no more convincing now than then. It was such eloquence as keeps the town in debt and keeps capitalists away, he had hoped the depression of the past two years would have been sufficient to check reckless expenditures, but probably nothing short of municipal bankruptcy, would bring them to realize it. The lot recommended is sufficient for the present, and it is rarely a committee comes inside an appropriation and now he saw no hope for the future, and hoped the people would see it. The principle of the thing is wrong, when a few could be gathered on the street to come into town meeting and be lead by such eloquence and they would pay dearly for it. His (Mr. Blaney) policy is ruinous. I haven't seen a man who would not like to see this building fall rather than maintain it; the gentleman insisted on the purchase of the whole of this lot of land and by his eloquence secured 56 votes for it. We have been to unnecessary expenses in things enough, probably you would vote a railroad to the moon if this man by his eloquence said we needed it. We need a good many things but the town has not the money. The committee prided themselves on figuring so close as to have a balance and the same power and support that has defeated other things, defeated this. The committee have no axe to grind, they have been prudent and economical for the town. He hoped the motion would prevail. John Linehan said the committee said they had $500 extra and this extra land would only cost $200 more, he thought they could save that on the school house. He was ashamed of the committee for resigning, because they did not agree with the vote of the majority. Didn't one of this same committee make a motion to change the report of the Finance Committee and did not a majority vote to do so? He thought a majority vote should prevail. Mr. King thought the vote should be reconsidered, he had heard no opposition to the original appropriation, as all knew it was a necessity. This committee have looked the matter over and believing the building could be built inside the appropriation, they made a report to purchase land sufficient for the purpose. Now why run the town in debt to purchase land we do not want. He hoped the vote would be reconsidered. Frank Marsh said he understood the motion of Mr. Blaney was for the town to purchase the land for speculative purposes, another has said the land would be worth more in the future. Is land near a school house worth more on that account?

Mr. H. H. Proctor said there was one member of the committee who seemed to favor the purchase of the whole lot, if there was any reason why they should do so let him give it. $500 is a small leeway as any one knows who has had experience in building.

Mr. Blaney said he had been so thoroughly disciplined and any one, no matter how dull or thick headed, could understand that this move was made to discipline him because he had independance enough to stand up and recommend something different from the report of the committee and not to save the $500. He had a right as a citizen to advocate the purchase of additional land. He was glad he made the motion to purchase the land in the rear of the town house. Mr. C. Warren Osborne had come to him since and told him that he was glad that his motion prevailed, and that he made a mistake in opposing it, and I honor him for it. It was not the same spirit as was manifest here to-day He was always ready to do his part with all the ability he had and was not ashamed of his record, he did not go about town concocting schemes to carry out at town meeting, he was independent as any man that lives, he didn't like that spirit which says, "You must down him or we leave you, yes down him who has dared to speak his mind." Look at this piece of land, the whole lot contains 33000 feet. There is 45000 in the school house lot in West Peabody and probably the same in So. Peabody, and surely 33000 in this one at the Centre. Gentlemen there is something else in this besides the extra 1200 feet of land that has called forth this discussion. I believe it for the best interest of the town to purchase the whole of this lot, not for speculative purposes, but for the benefit of those who attend there. The speaker then made some personal remarks respecting Mr. King but was interrupted by the Moderator who said he should confine all future remarks to the question. Mr. Blaney concluded by saying he did not intend to intrude on the good nature of the chair, but when the truth is told, it cuts and he was willing to let it cut. He would leave it to the good judgment of his fellow citizens to decide if his record was not as good as that of Mr. Farnham's. The motion to reconsider was then put and lost.

Mr. Vittum's motion was then taken up and the following committee appointed to retire and nominate Albert Vittum, Aaron F. Clark, S. F. Blaney, D. S. Littlefield and E. Pope Barrett.

While the committee were out, Mr. Marsh for the committee in relation to the Central street culvert reported as follows:—

The committee to whom was recommitted the report of the article in relation to the extension of the culvert on Central street to see if the abuttors would consent to the payment of a certain part of the expense of the same, report that they have requested them to do so, but they have answered nay, so that the committee recommend as before that having examined the premises and estimated the cost, they would advise the laying of an eighteen inch pipe the distance called for in the petition and that the necessary connections and cesspools and inlets be made and that a sum not exceeding thirteen hundred dollars be appropriated therefor.

Jonathan King opposed to accepting the report, as he thought the abuttors should pay part the expense. W. P. Clark wanted to know if the town was more liable for damage this year than previous years. Frank Marsh said he was of the opinion at first that the abuttors should pay for part of the drain, but upon further examination he thought it would not be right to ask them to and that the town should pay for the whole of it. J. S. Needham wanted to know if it was sewerage or drainage. If it was drainage he thought they had better wait a few years, until we adopted a system of sewerage. Jas. P. King said it was drainage they were talking about and that nothing had been said about sewerage. He explained the condition of the streets and how it would be effected by the proposed drain. John Linehan said he sympathized with the abuttors, when he wanted a drain on Foster street he went to the Selectmen and they told him he could have one if he would furnish the cover stones and one side, and afterward they came and looked at it and said they guessed he might finish it and furnish the rest of the material. He thanked them for the privilege and built it at his own expense. The report was then accepted by a vote of 30 to 26.

The committee reported the following names to fill the vacancies in the building committee of the new school house: G. Fred Osgood, Thomas Carroll, C. F. Winchester, J. E. T. Bartlett, and the gentlemen were elected. Mr. Winchester and Mr. Bartlett declined and S. F. Blaney and John Linehan were elected in their place. The meeting then dissolved.

ROLL OF HONOR.—The following pupils of the Centre School have not been absent nor tardy since school begun in Sept. Cora L. McLean, Carrie B. Patch, John W. Cannon, Minnie Daniels, Julia Carroll and Marrietta Green. The following have been perfect in attendance for a full term.—Etta Blanchard, Arthur Mayhew, Nellie Walton, Emma Patch, Laura Bodge, Eddie Green, Nellie Stanley, Eddie Carroll, Eliza Greene, Andrew Moore, Clarence Barnes, Harold Goodwin, George Durkee, John Riley, Frank Carroll and Eddie Boxwell. George A. Blaney, Alice J. Millea, Charlie Mallard, Helen Mayhew, Grace Petty, Louis Durkee, Ida Tigh, Timothy Woods, Geo. Smart, and Fred. Wiley have nearly a perfect record of attendance for the past term.

Mr. C. F. Hathaway started his cream home made bread by baking 16 loaves a day and now the largest number in one day has reached 1700. It is still growing in popular favor.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

Mr. Eli F. Burnham died at his home on Central street last Saturday morning from the effect of a shock of paralysis. He was born in Essex, Oct. 13, 1805, which would make him 79 years of age. Early in life he chose Peabody for his home and carried on an express business between this town and Boston, going over the road. He afterwards established the omnibus line between South Danvers and Lynn, and later had a livery stable; his stables were on the edge of the old mill pond where the Burnham stable, Walnut street, now stands. After the Eastern Railroad began running through town he had a wood and coal yard for a number of years. He leaves a widow, his second wife, and one son, Webster F. Burnham. Mr. Burnham was a strong anti-slavery man before the war, and was not afraid to express his opinions. He was a man highly respected by all who knew him. His health had been poor for a number of years.

The Legislative Committee on towns visited us last Thursday, and together with the committee from the town and West Peabody went over the proposed line of division and around parts of West Peabody in John Linehan's and H. N. Pillsbury's barges, after which they drove to the square and up to the Bleachery and Glue Works, and returning to town hall a fine lunch was served by the committee from this part of the town; Mr. Wentworth of Salem being the caterer. The tables were arranged in the Selectmen's room and the menu embraced escalloped oyster, lobster and chicken salad, ham sandwiches, cake, ice cream, coffee, etc. The wants of the Legislative Committee and invited guests were looked after by Frank T. Arnold, C. B. Farley and Chairman Southwick for the committee. After the lunch, the town hall was inspected and a visit made to the brick engine house and Peabody Institute. The committee left on the 3.07 train, having had a special car provided for their use.

The Leslie musical convention and concert company gave a fine concert at the Methodist Church last night, consisting of songs, duets, etc. The object as stated was to start a class in music, the class to be taught to read music and to sing. A class of at least 40 was required to assure the success of the enterprise. A committee was appointed to secure names from those in the audience who would join and only fifteen or twenty names were obtained, although the house was full. The gentlemen having the matter in charge requested those who would meet him at the South Church Vestry to-day to stand and five responded. He said he would leave the matter in the hands of the ministers and if they would work up a class he would return at a later date.

About 4.30 P. M. on Friday, a man named Duncan McKenzie, called at the Police Station, in Salem, and said he had been in the woods for ten days. He had worked in Peabody, but being out of employment he had got discouraged and intended to die in the woods. His feet and legs had been frozen, and he appeared in a very bad condition. He was refused admittance at the Hospital because he was so filthy and he was taken to the Almshouse. He has a mark on his throat indicating that he had attempted suicide. The City Physician considers his case critical. He was a man of dissipated habits and was arrested here for being drunk some time ago. He died at 12.30 this afternoon of pneumonia, caused by exposure.

Last Sunday was Palm Sunday, the last Sunday in Lent. It is so called from the custom of blessing the branches of the palm tree in commemoration of the triumphal entry of our Lord into Jerusalem. The date of the origin of this custom is uncertain. It existed as early as the 7th century, but is now almost exclusively confined to the Catholic Church, and last Sunday each member of the congregation of that church received a sprig of the blessed palm.

Peabody was represented at the meeting of prominent democrats at the Essex House, Salem, last Thursday, by Mr. Thomas H. Relihan. The Essex County Democratic Committee have organized as follows: President, F. W. Jones of Lynn; secretary, J. H. Rice of Danvers; executive committee, J. O. Winckley of Newburyport, G. D. Sleeper of Haverhill, D. J. Coleman ot Lawrence, John Ganey of Salem, Daniel Porter of Beverly, and Mark Jewett of Rowley.

The West Peabody people have voted to call their town Appleton when the town is divided(not till then) and on the first ballot it stood 31 for Appleton and 7 for Spaulding. They are of the opinion now that it will remain West Peabody for the present.

The Lucier Family were received by small houses at town hall last Wednesday and Thursday evenings, but the entertainment was good. From the time the curtain went up, to the close of the entertainment there was not one feature but what was pleasing to the audience. We will not speak in praise of one, but credit all with doing finely, and many times they were encored. The trained dogs are a whole exhibition in themselves. The company deserved better patronage.

A suit has been brought against S. W. Brownman of Pittsfield, president of the democratic campaign club, to make him pay legitimate campaign expenses. It is too commonly the case that many a hall owner and printer has to "whistle" when he asks pay for his services. We have on our books charges for the printing for the successful ticket at the spring election two years ago. We have attempted to collect it several times without success. Campaign bills should be made a debt of "honah."

The news of the report of the Legislative Committee against the division of Marblehead was celebrated with great demonstrations of joy last Friday. All the church bells were rung for three hours in the afternoon, the steam whistles of the factories were blown, guns were fired, and nearly every boy in town was supplied with fire crackers to add to the general din. In the evening bonfires were lighted on the hilltop. Truly, Marblehead is a "fly" town and ought not to be divided.

The meeting in G. A. R. Hall, Friday evening, by ladies interested in the formation of a Ladies' Relief Corps was well attended. After discussion of matters a committee consisting of Miss S. F. Kittredge, Lizzie Chute and Mrs. S. G. Southwick, was appointed to canvass the town to obtain signers, and a meeting will be called later to organize.

A good many men "don't care anything about what the newspapers say;" but we notice that once let them get an inkling that their names are likely to appear in connection with some questionable transaction, and they'll whine like sick puppies to have "my name left out," and then very likely go away and abuse the editor, after he has complied with their wish, it may be out of regard for the feelings of their families.

Albert Vittum, of the PRESS received a severe cut in his left hand Tuesday, by the breaking of a bottle which he held in his hand. Dr. Weston dressed the wound. As he is an editor, it is needless to say what was in the bottle.—Lynn Item.

Certainly not, John, they would infer that it was an ink bottle without your hinting as much.

The entertainment and sale by the ladies of the Universalist Church, last Wednesday and Thursday, was in every respect a success. The apron and domestic tables were well supplied and liberally patronized as was also the refreshment tables, etc., while the programme of entertainment was well carried out and very pleasing.

Frank Gilson, a young man from Lynn, took a serious header from his bicycle on Central street last Saturday. He was coming down the hill and lost his pedals, meeting an obstruction he was thrown violently to the ground. He was considerably stunned and his face was badly cut. He had been visiting in Danvers.

An Irishman who had been discharged from the Glue works recently, and thinking his fellow workmen were the cause, went and got drunk and then waited for them as they came down the railroad track and demanded satisfaction. He got it in the shape of a black eye, a cut lip, and a general disfigurement of his homely mug.

People who have not seen the Cyclorama at 541 Tremont St., Boston, have no idea of the treat in store for them when they go. Hours can be spent in viewing the wonderful work of art painted by the talented Phillopoteaux and then the spectator goes away wishing to come again and bring his friends with him.

The social gathering and ice cream and cake sale given at the residence of Mrs. J. B. Thomas, on Oak street, last Wednesday evening, for the benefit of the Baptist Church, was a success both financially and socially, and a most agreeable evening was passed by those who attended.

One of our citizens manufactured some whiskey for his own use and the first dose turned him black and blue. A doctor was sent for and a stomach pump used. It is believed that should the stuff be analyzed it would be found to contain, vitrol, broken glass and North river water.

The committee on Towns reported yesterday that the petitioners for the division of the town of Peabody and the incorporation of West Peabody have leave to withdraw. It is understood that the committee were unanimous. The result when received here caused no excitement as every one had anticipated the result.

The oldest inhabitant has said that 48 years ago we had a winter just like this.

The report that officers of the State Prison were here investigating the case of one Ricker, who is in State Prison, proves not to have been an officer of that institution but a swindler, who demanded $30 of Mrs. Ricker for the release of her son, but as the poor woman had not the money he was satisfied with taking all she had with her, 25 cents, and departed, since which time nothing has been heard from him.

Remember next Monday evening the A. H. B. Association will hold their annual Easter assembly. There has been a large demand for tickets thus far and it is safe to predict one of the best assemblies of the season. A fine and appropriate Easter order will be presented to those who attend.

FROM REV. E. W. WHITNEY,

Formerly Pastor of the Universalist Church, Peabody, Mass.

For several years I have been troubled with Catarrh, which seriously interfered with my public speaking, and which baffled all my attempts to get permanent relief. Experienced surgeons operated upon me, and I was under the care of a Boston physician for two years, but obtained no lasting benefit. I applied various medicines, but failed to get relief. I was lead, by the advice of friends, to consult Dr. Lighthill. My faith was at the lowest ebb, but I am happy to say that after a few months' treatment no trace of my old trouble appears, and I have every reason to believe that the cure is permanent. I cordially recommend Dr. Lighthill to all who may be afflicted in a similar manner.

E W. WHITNEY,
Peabody, Mass., June 27. 1879.

AN INTERESTING CASE.

A statement of Mr. Clement A. Thorndike, of the firm of L. A. May & Co., 127 Union street, Lynn, Mass.

To the Public:—Having been raised almost like one from the dead by the skillful treatment of Dr. Lighthill, and to benefit similar sufferers, I make this public statement of my case. For years I was troubled with Catarrh in my head, seriously affecting and almost destroying my nasal bone; the discharge was very profuse, requiring constant blowing and hawking for relief; gradually the irritation passed into my throat, producing hoarseness and a hacking cough, and finally it affected my bronchial tubes and lungs, leaving me a victim to consumption. The cough now became distressing and almost constant, and debilitating night sweats made their appearance. I lost flesh and became greatly emaciated. I consulted medical men and used various remedies, but all efforts for relief utterly failed. In that condition, and greatly disheartened and discouraged, I applied to Dr. Lighthill, whose able and thorough examination of my case proved to me that I was in the right hands. Convinced that he fully understood my condition, and, inspired with new hope, I placed myself under his care, and very soon experienced the benefit of his treatment. One after another of the symptoms of Catarrh left me. I gained in strength and weight, my cough and night sweats disappeared, and now I am only too thankful and delighted to be able to call myself well again. Hoping that this statement may give new courage and confidence to such as may suffer as I have,

I remain, respectfully,
CLEMENT A. THORNDIKE.
Lynn, June 18, 1881

CATARRH CURED.

FROM REV. E. C. BUTLER,

Beverly, Mass.

I most heartily recommend any one afflicted with that troublesome disease, Catarrh, to Dr. Lighthill. I have full confidence in him. His treatment has had the most gratifying results in my own case, which was severe and of long standing.

E. C. BUTLER,
Beverly, Mass., Oct. 29, 1879.

CURE OF DEAFNESS.

FROM RT. REV. T. F. HENDRIKEN,
Bishop of Providence. R. I.

My Dear Dr. Lighthill: Permit me to thank you most heartily for your kindness to the Sisters of our Convent. I had no idea when I consulted you on Sister Demonica's deafness that you could so quickly restore her back to hearing, but she tells me that she hears now better than she did before. For this, and your kind and successful treatment of my own deafness, I thank you. Now I would be glad to have you refer your patients to me. You know I can recommend you as a physician and surgeon, thoroughly accomplished in those departments of medicine in which you practice. I owe you a debt of gratitude, and would be glad to pay it.

Very truly and sincerely yours
Rt. Rev. T. F. HENDRIKEN.

A comp lete and

ASTHMA.

REPORT FROM MR. C. F. BOYNTON, 31 MILK STREET, BOSTON, ROOM 35.
TO THE PUBLIC.

After having spent large sums of money, and found no relief, I was induced to apply to Dr. Lighthill, at 115 Boylston street, for treatment. having suffered from asthma in the worst form for six years, and I wish to say, for the benefit of others suffering as I did that DR. LIGHTHILL'S TREATMENT HAS MADE ME A WELL MAN, and I now can enjoy life, when before it was a dread to me. This cure was performed on me over a year ago, and I can confidently pronounce it a permanent one. I hope all afflicted with that dreadful disease will avail themselves of Dr. Lighthill's skilful services, for I feel morally sure he can cure them.

EDDY, Solicitor of patents.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse."

CHAS. MASON, Commissioner of Patents.

"Inventors cannot employ a person more trustworthy or more capable of securing for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office."

EDMUND BURKE, late Com. of Patents.

BOSTON, Oct. 19, 1870.

R. H. EDDY, Esq.—Dear Sir: you procured for me, in 1870, my first patent. Since then you have acted for and advised me in hundreds of cases, and procured many patents, re-issues and extensions. I have occasionally employed the best agencies in New York, Philadelphia and Washington, but I still give you almost the whole of my business, in your line, and advise others to employ you.

Yours truly, GEORGE DRAPER.

Book Notices.

AN ARTISTIC HUMOROUS GEM.—The Baltimore American says: The choicest selection of copyrighted American humor and one which will delight every reader is now being distributed free throughout America. Nearly all the humorists and comic artists of the country are represented in it. The book in question is the unique annual literary production of The Charles A. Vogeler Company, this city, and is styled the St. Jacobs Oil Family Calendar and Book of Health and Humor for 1885. While it has been gotten up primarily for advertising purposes, it is so replete with original matter free from advertising reference that the business feature is almost a secondary one. The Red Star Cough Cure, a new discovery in medicine, has also space devoted to it. The former editions of this little book were very attractive, but in the present instance both publishers and contributors seem to have determined that they would give the country all that is brightest and best in American humor.

An informing and timely article on the "Framers of the Constitution," with twenty or more portraits, is the opening gem of the beautiful Magazine of American History for April. The editor has performed a service that will be gratefully appreciated by hosts of students and writers, and by readers of all grades and ages the country through. The other articles of the number are of exceptional merit, including as usual wide range of topics. Original documents contain a "Curious Petition of the Boston Ministers in 1709." Notes, Queries, Replies, Societies, and Book Notices are crowded with agreeable material. The Magazine of American History is the only one of the great leading magazines that from time time to delights its audience with an exquisite frontispiece in steel, as in this current number. Price, $5.00 a year in advance. Published at 30 Lafayette Place New York City.

"GENTLE SPRING."—Among spring preparations, do not neglect that which is most important of all—your own body. During the winter the blood absorbs many impurities, which, if not expelled, are liable to break out in scrofula or other disease. The best spring medicine is Hood's Sarsaparilla. It expels every impurity from the blood, and gives strength to every function of the body. Sold by all druggists. (A)

During the year 1884 the county treasurer of Essex county paid $2383.53 for damages done by dogs, of which sum $917.50 was for 116 sheep; $299 for 13 heifers; $50 for a horse; $755.35 for 768 fowls; $8 for a goat. At the close of the year there were 6751 male dogs and 648 female dogs on which taxes were paid in the county. Between 400 and 500 dogs were killed by officers during the year, and the amount paid the appraisers of damages was $353.68.

AGREEABLE TO EVERYBODY.—Col. Robert G. King, for ten years Deputy Collector Internal Revenue, Baltimore, Maryland, writes: I endorse the Red Star Cough Cure. I have used it in my family for a violent cough and found it excellent. Its use was entirely free from the depressing effects of other cough remedies. It can readily be taken, and agrees with and benefits everybody suffering from throat and lung troubles. The relief is permanent, and there is no reaction.

Our thanks are due Hon. George B. Loring, Commissioner of Agriculture for the annual report of his department for the year 1884. It is an intensely interesting and valuable document, many of the subjects being illustrated, and should be perused by every farmer and stock raiser. His work has been practical rather than theoretical, and the country at large has reaped the benefits.

THE BEAUTY OF YOUTH:—No matter how handsome or stalwart a young man may be otherwise, nothing can make up for a partially bald head. Shining talents are attrcative but a shining poll is not. The cause may be sickness or anything else, yet Parker's Hair Balsam will stop the loss of the hair and start a new growth of glossy soft hair so quickly as to surprise you—restoring the original color at the same time. Not a dye, not oily, delicately perfumed. Only standard 50 cent dressing.

MAYO'S

Compound Vegetable Anæsthetic.

A safe and pleasant substitute for gas and ether.

Discovered by Dr. N. K. Mayo of Boston, April 1883, subsequently administered by him in nearly two thousand cases, producing perfect slumber, being applicable to the child, the delicate sentitive woman as well as the hardy man. No ill effects have followed its use in any case, it acting rather as a vegetable tonic.

It controls the patient one-fourth longer than gas giving us time to remove from three to twenty teeth. It is with great confidence we have introduced it into our practice, giving very successful results.

ON THE ENGINE.

RUNNING A LOCOMOTIVE WHILE DEATHLY SICK—SOMETHING THE PASSENGERS DID NOT KNOW A PHYSICIAN SAVES AN ENGINEER.

Taunton, Mass.

DR. DAVID KENNEDY, Rondout, N. Y.

Dear Sir.—I am an engineer on the Old Colony Railroad, and run the Fall River boat train between Fall River and Lowell, residing in Taunton. For ten years I suffered everything but death from dyspepsia. Often I had such blinding sick headaches that I could scarcely see. I think this was due partly to irregular habits of eating, and partly to the jar of the engine. Sometimes my head would snap like neuralgia, and again the pain would settle in my eyes, which would feel as big as a man's fist. My breath was very offensive, and my food soured as it entered my stomach. In fact my stomach felt as though it were a great raw and sore surface, and what agony it gave perhaps you can imagine.

In the summer and fall of 1876 when we had the heavy centennial travel, the constant jar brought on acute attacks nearly every week and I thought I should have to leave the road. But I kept at work until the next spring, when I grew so much worse that I could virtually eat nothing, and concluded that my labor, and my life too, were about over.

Remember that I had tried every medicine I heard of, and had been treated by some of the best physicians in Taunton and Lowell. At this critical time DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY was recommended to me. It was new to me, and with my experience of medicines, you can easily forgive me for saying that I had not a particle of faith in it.

I had taken it but a few days when I began to get better. The raw and sore feeling left my stomach, and the snapping pains left my head, and soon I was all right, and have been ever since. It is the only thing that ever did me the least good, and it drove every ache, pain and discomfort completely out of my body. Now I keep KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY with me on my engine, and it goes wherever I go.

Why, I believe FAVORITE REMEDY will cure anything. One night, a while ago, John Layton, an engineer who runs the main line boat train from Boston, came on my engine sick as death. He was worn out with work, had a high fever, and was so nervous he almost broke down crying. "Nonsense, John," I said, "cheer up, I've got something on my engine that will set you up in a jiffy." I took out my bottle of FAVORITE REMEDY, lifted his head and gave him a good dose. He went to bed. Two days after I saw him looking healthy as a butcher. "Dan," he said, "what was that stuff you gave me the other night?" "It was DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, Rondout, N. Y." said I. "Well, I don't care whose Remedy it is, it's the thing for a man on the railroad." So say we all.

Yours, etc., DANIEL FITTS.

This preparation goes to the root of disease by purifying the blood and rousing every organ into healthy action. It is useful at home, shops, in office—everywhere.

MALARIA.

As an anti-malarial medicine

DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S

has won golden opinions. No traveler should consider his outfit complete unless it includes a bottle of this medicine. If you are exposed to frequent changes of climate, food and water, Favorite Remedy should always be within your reach. It expels malarial poisons, and is the best preventative of chills and malarial fever in the world. It is especially offered as a trustworthy specific for the cure of Kidney and Liver complaints, Constipation and all disorders arising from an impure state of the blood. To women who suffer from any of the ills peculiar to their sex Favorite Remedy is constantly proving itself an unfailing friend—a real blessing. Address the proprietor, Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. THE DRAMA.

A great deal of honest pleasure has been afforded thousands of people the past week at the Boston Theatre. "Joshua Whitcomb" has lost nothing in popularity. Often as its story has been told on the stage it is still full of interest and still appeals with peculiar power to the great heart of the public. Denman Thompson's portrayal will be offered throughout the present week only. The co-operation given by Miss Julia Wilson, Ignacio Martinetti and the other efficient members of the "Joshua Whitcomb" company is worthy of note. Next week Damrosch's German Opera.

Both sections of Manager Field's company return to the Boston Museum this week for a season after their journeyings near and far. To-day at both performances, "The Guv'nor" is to be played with George W. Wilson, Sol Smith Russell (title role) and Charles Barron in the cast. On Fast day, afternoon and evening, as well as Friday night, and at the matinee on Saturday, "The Ticket-of-Leave Man," Tom Taylor's famous drama, will be offered with a great cast, for its first performance in a long time here. Saturday evening for Mr. Barron's benefit, will be presented "The Three Guardsmen" and "A Regular Fix," Sol Smith Russell contributing also his specialties.

Acrobatic and athletic comedy has no more enjoyable illustration than in "Frivolity," the merry piece which the agile Leopolds are this week to present on the stage of the Bijou Theatre. The flying waiters, the demon musicians, the living statues and all the other curious personations of the Leopolds are thoroughly worth seeing, and should be applauded by large audiences. The company stay at the Bijou only for one week.

One of the first cities to recognize the merits of the Salsbury Troubadours in their peculiar line of stage productions was Boston. The favor thus early accorded has steadily continued, whether "The Brook" or the pleasant conceits that followed in its train were presented. It is in that laughable piece "Three of a Kind," that Nellie McHenry, Nate Salsbury, John Webster and the other troubadours are to be seen the current week at the Park. Mr. Kidder's piece has already met with emphatic approval and the favorites could hardly choose a better vehicle for the display of their varied abilities.

Mr. William Redmund and Mrs. Thomas Barry, who were great favorites at the Boston Theatre, will come to the Museum, April 6, for a two weeks' engagement in their successful romantic drama, "A Midnight Marriage." The company has made a great success in the West during the past season, and have played extremely profitable engagements in New York, Brooklyn, Philadelphia and Baltimore.

"Lend Me a Dollar," William Carroll's new specialty piece, comes to the Bijou next week. It is said to be very funny.

The Essex Agricultural Society will hold a Farmers' Institute at Town hall, Danvers, Friday April 3, at 9.30 A. M. The subject in the forenoon will be "Neat Stock," with introductory by Mr. Doane Coggswell, of Bradford. In the afternoon, Mr. B. P. Ware will speak on "A trip to the New Orleans exposition." All interested are invited to be present and take part in the meeting.

It is said that the beetles which lay the eggs from which come the buffalo bugs, those troublesome pests which are so destructive to carpets and clothing, are now flitting about and are endeavoring to enter the houses.

The old half burned building near the railroad track continues to be a disgrace to the town. If it is not to be removed in any other way it would greatly improve the looks of the place to set fire to it and complete the destruction.

Butter color is said to be very fashionable. If there is anybody hanging around who can define the color of butter, let him stand upon his feet and speak. During our short life we have seen as many as four.

The only apparent sign of spring is the removing of a few storm doors, the hanging of a few gates and the ever smiling agent trying to effect sales of strawberry plants and trees to be delivered at a later date.

A citizen of Sanbornton, N. H., aged 59, recently committed suicide while under strong mental excitement induced by having been drawn as a juror. Down this way many go nearly crazy if fail to get drawn as jurors, but these have not the wit to commit suicide and give others a chance.

Now the dutiful husband is saving his spare dimes in anticipation of the annual requisition for that spring bonnet.

Envelopes for the ten cent collection for the Soldiers' Home are being distributed. Let everybody ante a dime for a worthy object.

The Capture of Hayes.

Officer Shaw, of Lynn, returned last Saturday, from New Orleans, having in custody "Billy" Hayes and lodged him in Lawrence Jail, where he will await the order of the criminal term of the Superior Court to be held in May at Newburyport. The story of the capture of Hayes as related by District Officer Shaw is quite interesting. After Hayes had "skipped" the officer sent a description of him all over the country and also of John Holloran, who was supposed to have left with him. As is well known Hayes had been bailed by Miller of Boston, and Salmon of Woburn, and property supposed to equal the amount of the bonds had been made over to them by Billy and his wife. On examination, however, the bondsmen learned that they were not fully secured, and they appealed to Chief Wade to arrest the fugitive. Chief Peasley heard that a party in Salem had seen a letter written from New Orleans to the effect that Hayes was there under an assumed name, and by request of Officer Shaw procured the letter which was written in German, and contained a diagram of the New Orleans exposition grounds with the location of Hayes bar room. The writer also said Hayes had refused to recognize him and was doing business under the name of Farrell.

Shaw was instructed to proceed to New Orleans and ascertain if the man referred to was really the one wanted, and on Tuesday, March 10, he started. On his way down he stopped two days in St. Louis, and there fell in with a German officer who translated the letter. He was then sure that Hayes was the man. The officer reached New Orleans on the 16th, and made himself known at police head-quarters and secured the assistance of Detective Kerwin. They visited the exposition grounds, and began an inspection of the row of hotel restaurants that flank the grounds. In one of them Shaw caught a glimpse of a man whom he thought was the person sought. When Hayes jumped his bail he was smooth faced, but since going to New Orleans he has grown a moustache and chin whiskers. They had agreed on a signal and as they entered Shaw, was sure of his man and gave the signal. Hayes recognized him and started out from behind the bar. Shaw walked along abreast of him, and as he came out Shaw took hold of one of his wrists and Kerwin the other, and Shaw addressed him as Hayes and told him he was a prisoner. Calling the barkeeper he put the place in his charge, and the officers conveyed him to the Seventh Precinct station and locked him up.

Hayes' place was called the "Cleveland House" and one of the advertised attractions was "Genuine Boston Baked Beans." He had been doing a flourishing business and had bought a piece of land, put up a building with eight lodging rooms, bar and dining room. He had built a large cistern, caught the rain water as it fell, purified it with charcoal, and had a real novelty for that section in the shape of pure water. He had dug a well in addition, and curbed it and drew from it a supply of water for cooking, which was much preferred by his neighbors to the river water in common use. His rooms were all full, and his bar was profitable. He had not drank any liquor for three months, was quite popular among his neighbors, and had got together quite a snug amount of money. The house was neatly painted, and had an air of thrift which made it noticeable among the surrounding buildings.

Hayes was taken before Judge Keller as a fugitive from justice and sent to the Parish prison to await the requisition papers, which were on the way in possession of officer Batchelder of Lawrence. The officers had some difficulty about having the man turned over to them but it was finally adjusted. After his arrest, Hayes set to work to settle his affairs, and succeeded in turning all his property into cash, and paying all bills before leaving the city.

The officers with Hayes left New Orleans at 5.30 P. M., on Tuesday, March 24. Hayes promised to make no trouble on the route, and kept his word, and he was not handcuffed after entering the cars. The first two days he was very despondent, and for 24 hours did not leave his berth in the sleeper, and for 48 hours only ate a little oatmeal. The officers endeavored to raise his spirits, and finally succeeded. The party reached Boston at 9 A. M., Saturday morning. Hayes was allowed to make some purchases in Boston, and was then taken to Lawrence over the Boston and Maine main line, and safely lodged in jail to await further action of the authorities.

The Fifth Annual Ball of the Three Ones and a Two of the Peabody Fire Department will take place to-night, in Upton's Hall. The arrangements have been carried out by the committee appointed and the affair bids fair to be a success. Good music will be furnished by the Salem Band Orchestra, R. L. Reinewald, leader. Handsome orders containing twenty-four dances and ten fancys have been prepared. Harvey Blunt, of Boston, will cater for the occasion, and that fact alone is enough to warrant a good supper. Tickets $1, for sale at the door. Give the boys a lift and at the same time have a pleasant evening's enjoyment.

The Board of Engineers held a meeting Monday evening and voted to put in eight new hydrants in place of some of the old Newport hydrants. Littlefield and Pierce were appointed a committee to take charge of the matter. A number of bills were approved.

Salem is having trouble in their fire department, or rather had it, for Chief Osborne promptly checked the matter. Samuel Potter, assistant fireman of H. & L. 1, refused to do duty, and high words resulted, after which Chief Osborne suspended him on the spot. Potter was one of the crowd who voted to have beer in the H. & L. house at a recent supper, and was suspended by the Engineers, but re-instated by the Aldermen. The trouble took place at a small fire on Monday.

The Naumkeag Street Railway received this week a large number of the Hanlen Hand Fire Grenades to be distributed about the extensive stables and sheds of the company.

The bill providing a uniform fire hose coupling was passed to be engrossed, on Wednesday, by a large majority. The bill came up in the Senate Monday and was laid on the table.

The pair of horses belonging to Munroe & Arnold, which have been hired by the town since the first of January for use on Steamer 2, were sent home Tuesday night, as the town did not appropriate any money for either buying or hiring the horses. The Finance Commitee either neglected or did not want to recommend the purchase of the horses, and the result will be, that the department is now placed just where it was last Fall as far as the brick house is concerned. Steamer company No. 2 will have to run their hose carriage again and the steamer or hook and ladder truck will have to sit on the floor of the house during the first alarm.

Richard P. Keefe a member of H. & L. 1, was injured at the Harris fire on the morning of the 23d, by falling from a ladder, and throwing the bones of his right ankle out of position. He has been laid up ever since. He belongs to the Relief Association.

Last Wednesday evening, by the Rev. W. G. Sperry, at the residence of S. F. Reed, Arthur S. Reed, a member of Hook and Ladder No. 1, was united in marriage to Miss Altha Thompson, of Gray, Me. Last evening the members of the company, agreeably to the custom of the company on the marriage of one of their members, called upon the newly wedded couple at their home on Franklin street, and presented them with a very handsome maroon plush platform rocker easy chair. Foreman Miller made the presentation speech and Mr. Reed responded as best he could under the circumstances. He was taken completely by surprise. After a short time spent in pleasant conversation, the whole party were invited to adjourn to the dining room where a substantial lunch in the shape of cake, coffee, fruit and cigars, was served up. The party broke up early wishing Mr. and Mrs. Reed many years of happiness. Engineer Folsom and your scribe were present at the festivities.

The insurance on the building at the Harris tannery has been adjusted for $2573. On the Jacob's factory for $396. On W.O. Batchelder's store $16, stable $5. The insurance on machinery and stock has not been adjusted as yet.

Charles K. Bailey, formerly assistant foreman of the Steamer 1, is in town to-day.

MUSICAL NOTES.

All our choirs are busy with Easter music. The programme at some of the churches will be found in another column.

The closing concert of this season by the Salem Schbert Club will be given at Plummer Hall on Thursday evening, April 9th, at 7.45 o'clock. The works to be given are "The Tale of the Viking," a cantata by Geo. E. Whiting; "The Feast of Adonis," a cantata by A. Jeusen, and part songs "The River Sprite" and "The Sea hath its Pearls," by J. C. D. Parker. The soloists will be Miss Helen H. Howland of Boston, soprano; Mr. William J. Winch of Boston, tenor, and Mr. Clarence Hay of Boston, baritone. Mr. Arthur W. Foote, conductor.

The Boston Saturday evening Gazette of a week since, in a correspondence from Salem, has the following complimentary notice of the choir of Grace Church, and of Mrs. F. C. Ferguson of this town. The choir has for years been under the direction of Dr. J. F. Tuckerman, who is an acknowledged authority in all musical matters, and his assistants are Miss Pitman, Mrs. Ferguson, of Peabody, and Mr. Cate. Miss Pitman has a strong, true voice, and sings with much taste. Mrs. Ferguson, who sang for a long time in a church in Lynn, has a deep, sweet contralto voice into which she puts much feeling and pathos. Grace Church is, therefore, treated to the best, though we have heard the feeling expressed by the members of the Congregation that the music is so good they wish they could sing too without seeming to intrude.

The Salem Cadet Band went to Ipswich last week and furnished music for the ball in Damon's Hall. At the Elk's ball in the Mechanics' Building, Boston, April 6, two of Mr. Jean M. Missud's compositions will be performed. The band will play at the carnival of the Soldiers' Home which opens in Boston, April 7.

"Moses in Egypt," with a fine array of soloists, is to be the Eastertide oratorio of the Handel and Haydn society at Music Hall next Sunday evening. Emma Juch, Ita Welsh, and W. J. and John F. Winch are among the soloists.

The final arrangements for the season of German opera at the Boston Theatre, beginning April 6, are being rapidly pushed forward, and indications on every side promise a successful series of performances by the company under the direction of Mr. Walter Damrosch. The general interest in the first appearance here of Frl. Brandt as Fides in "The Prophet" on Monday evening shows that her success in the role has been noised abroad in local musical circles. As a matter of fact, the presentation of this role by Frl. Brandt gave such an interest to the performances of the opera that it was repeated nine times during the New York season. The operas and casts for the first week are as follows: Monday, April 6, "The Prophet." Frl. Brandt, Frau Materna, Schott, Koegel, and Staudigl. Tuesday, April 7, "Tannhauser." Frau Materna, Frl. Slach, Schott, Robinson and Koegel. Wednesday, April 8, "Fidelio." Frl. Brandt, Frl. Slach, Udvardy, Staudigl, Miller and Kemlitz. Thursday, April 9, "Lohengrin." Frl. Brandt, Frl. Slach, Schott, Robinson and Koegel. Friday, April 10, "La Juive." Frau Materna, Frl. Slach, Udvardy, Koegel, Kemlitz. Saturday, April 11, matinee, "Tannhauser." Frau Materna, Schott, Frl. Slach, Robinson and Koegel. Saturday, April 11, evening, Gluck's "Orpheus." (First time in America.) Frl. Brandt, Frl. Slach and Frl. Hoch. Chorus largely augmented by singers from local societies.

E. & C. Woodman, Danvers, are now advertising large quantities of Vegetable Plants, etc., and can supply in lots to suit from one dozen to one thousand plants, or more, carefully packed for shipment by express when desired; no charge for packing. They also have Flowering and Ornamental plants, cut flowers and floral designs to order. See adv.

Whitcomb & Carter, Beverly, are advertising the Kemps Manure Spreader. The demand for this spreader is rapidly increasing every year, which is a good recommendation of its merit. It will do the work of five men and spread the manure much finer and more evenly than when spread by the shov el full They also have the largest stock of agricultural tools and seeds in Essex County. Give them a call and examine their goods and prices.

Pneumonia is in the air and it behooves one and all to guard against undue exposure.

SKATING RINK NOTES.

The Baker's polo team defeated the Evergreens at the rink last Wednesday night, three straight goals. Time, 10 minutes.

The Peabodys visited Haverhill last Thursday evening and defeated the Stars of that city three goals to one. The Stars won the first goal in 8m. and the Peabodys the next three in 50s., 1m. 45s. and 17m. 30s. respectively. Dempsey played in place of Sullivan. Andrew Jackson was referee.

John Linehan carried the Peabody Reserves to Wakefield last Wednesday evening, and a game of polo was played with the local club there. The Reserves won in twenty-three minutes. Three goals to one. Murray of the Peabodys played as rusher for the Wakefields.

On Monday, April 20th, the Salem skating rink will change hands and be known as the People's Theatre. It will be supplied with new sliding scenery and have a stage 25 feet deep and a 25x20 drop curtain; fine stage settings. The music will be made a specialty and the best of attractions offered, including dramas, light operas and varieties. The management will make contracts with none but first class and moral attractions and People's Popular prices will be charged, 10, 15 and 25 cents.

The Stars of Haverhill have withdrawn from the Mass. League and this takes four games from the Peabodys and puts the Globes ahead of the Peabodys.

Last Saturday night the Stars of So. Peabody defeated the Franklins of Salem in a game of polo at the rink, after a play of fifty minutes. Fred Thomas was referee.

The Peabodys played an exhibition game of polo with the Woburns at Woburn last Saturday night and the game was tied, each club having won two goals. The Woburns secured the first and second in 14 m. and 52 and 35s. respectively and the Peabodys the third and fourth in 1 m. and 40 s. and 5 m. A. A. Ferrin, referee. The game could not be finished, as the Peabodys had to catch a train.

The Peabodys will play a league game with the Bay States at Chelsea tomorrow night. They will play an exhibition with the same club at 11.30 Fast morning at Chelsea.

Fast day the rink will be opened morning, afternoon and evening; in the evening a hat, cap and necktie party will be held.

Roller skating is becoming so popular in many places that husbands are going out to board in order to give their wives time to attend the rink.

A fine photograph of the Salems is on exhibition in Low's window with the N. E. League medals.

Joseph Cohen, one of the contestants in the recent six days' roller skating race, died at his home in Brooklyn, N. Y., on Monday, from exhaustion.

If the skating rink floor took as good negatives of the front view of a fellow as it does the rear side, one could have got some splendid cabinets.

Attendant physician to the rink is the latest.

SOUTH PEABODY.

There will be a glass ball shoot at Lynnfield Hotel, Fast day, to which all sportsmen are invited to attend.

Mr. J. B. Newhall, the surveyor, will commence work on the highways as soon as the frost is out of the ground.

Easter services will be held at the church next Sunday afternoon.

Master Bert Brown is home from school on a vacation.

The L. & B. R. R. Co. run on four horse time nearly all day Sunday last, owing to the heavy snow.

The concert at the vestry last Thursday night was a success financially, about $18 being realized for the society.

Mr. Sylvester Needham is improving the looks of his house on County street by painting.

Mrs. Lizzie Oliver has been quite sick at her home on Lynn street the past two weeks.

The aristocrats of Nahant voted against the extension of the Boston & Lynn R. R. to their town by a large majority. Of course, why need the blue blood denizens of Nahant, whose principal business is dodging their Boston taxes—why need they be troubled with the common herd who pay their tax bills and who may patronize the above road for summer pleasure?—Chelsea Telegraph.

A grocer's association was organized at G. A. R. Hall, Salem, on Thursday evening and officers elected as follows: President, J. H. French; vice president, R. F. McCrillis of Danvers; secretary, Geo. H. Sargent; treasurer, John Chamberlain.

The Brooksbie Club gave an entertainment last night at which Ed. K. Hood, of Lynn, read some fine selections and Harry Innis, Salem, gave some executions on the Xylophone. Mr. Lewis Fisher also sang several selections. This was followed by an orange party.

PEABODY

Report says that two of our largest store keepers are about to consolidate their business. If they do they will "whoop" it up and the citizens will get the benefit.

Mr. Frank W. Stanley and Warren Wilson, Jr., have gone on an extended western and southern trip. They will visit the exposition at New Orleans before they return.

Mr. George H. Clothey, formerly of this town, has been appointed on Col Strachan's staff as Hospital Steward for the "Military evening" at the Soldiers' Carnival.

If you want a nice beef tongue get it of Hallowell & Smiley, 16 Caller street. They only ask 12 cents a pound, while the regular price is 18 cents. Other things in proportion.

The police raided Jas. Corbett's on Tremont street Monday evening and captured a gallon of whiskey in a jug in the barn. They also called on Mrs. Hayes, but found nothing.

There will be a lecture at Ashland Hall Saturday evening, April 4, by Capt. R. F. Trevelick. Subject, "The aims and objects of the Knights of Labor and their platform."

Owing to the increased demand for "taffy," Geo. W. Pepper is obliged to extend the room where he makes that article. He will also put in a water moter to run the cocoanut grinder.

Last Thursday officers were in town searching for John Fahey, a deserter from the United States Army. He belongs in New York State but has an uncle here. They did not find him.

The building committee on the new school house organized last night with the choice of S. F. Blaney, Chairman and T. J. Relihan, Secretary. They will commence operations immediately.

The Salem authorities have presented a bill of over $60, for the board of Mrs. H. A. Sweet at Danvers, to Dr. Cullis, and it has been paid. Mrs. Sweet was the wife of the late Timothy Walton and well known in this town.

Parsons & Peterson will do the mason work and George H. Symonds the carpenter work for the alterations soon to be made in the front of the building occupied by Almy, Bigelow & Washburn.

Mr. Stephen Blaney purchased the house on the Robinson estate which was sold at auction by Mr. Farnham, Monday, for $170 and the out buildings were purchased by Samuel Trask for $4.00.

A writer on health advises people to "live in the sun." Owing to the present inadequate facilities for transportation and the high prices of real estate on that luminary, we should not advise any of our readers to emigrate there this season.

Messrs. Abbott & Reynolds, received yesterday another lot of western horses, selected by Mr. Abbott for this market. Those wishing to secure a good animal will find an excellent assortment to select from.

The shipments of leather from Peabody and Salem for the week ending March 28 were 5162 rolls, 1071 sides, 210 bundles, 21 barrels, 5 bags and 3 bales of leather, and 3 rolls and 1 bundle of skins.

The Lynn & Boston and the Naumkeag street railroad are going to petition to straighten out the horse car track and come near George Stevens' store and then continue the track up Lowell street.

The police raided Michael Carney's place on Washington St., Saturday and captured a quanity of beer and hard liquors. The police also visited Capt. Mitchel's and P. Mahoney, but without finding anything.

We call the attention of those of our readers who are looking for employment to the advertisement of the C. L. Vandusen Nursery Co., of Geneva, N. Y., which appears in another column of this paper. Their Nurseries are favorably known.

The real estate of the late William H. Vittum situated on Webster and Union streets, is advertised for sale. The lot contains five house lots and will be sold as one piece or in lots to suit purchasers.

The old bell will ring no more this year at noon and nine o'clock and the town will save $75 a year.

> "Well done! thou good and faithful bell,
> Thou'st always done thy duty well,
> And now thy tongue may rest in peace,
> And from its arduous labors cease."

"We don't want any office. We try to give our readers a bang up paper every week, and we find that doing this takes all our time. When an editor has made the round of all the saloons for items, digested all the war news from the Soudan, and classified all the paid locals, he has done a good week's work and should not be called upon to bear the responsibilities of any office. We are confident that President Cleveland will find men to fill all the offices without taking us. If we did not believe so, we would gladly sacrifice our private business for the good of the country." —Arizona Editor.

Washington Streets.

An excellent judge of such matters asserts that this city has gained more in outward appearance during the last half dozen years than it had before in half a century. It now has forty miles of better pavement than can be found in any other American town, and which compares favorably with any in Europe. This has made thorough street-sweeping practicable at small cost, and it results that, although the city is poorly supplied with water, it is little afflicted with dust, and is beginning to have a refreshingly clean aspect. Bordering these streets there now stands upward of one hundred thousand well-formed, nursery grown trees. Maples of several species are the more common, but there are representations (by the hundred) of at least six different genera. They are at present but club-headed saplings, hardly recovered from the shock of transplantation, or fairly settled in their new homes, and show none of the characteristic mature beauty of their several families. They have as yet, therefore, but little value except as promissory notes, their growth to be discounted. Nevertheless, seen as they constantly are in long perspectives of uniform mass and color, their effect on the city is absolutely transforming, and if all goes well with them Washington will in a few years be a new and glorified city—a capital that Americans may be proud of.

To all persons interested in the estate of PRESCOTT E. GRANT, late of Peabody, in said county, carpenter, deceased, intestate, GREETING:

WHEREAS, Lucy S. Grant, the widow of said deceased, has presented to said Court her petition praying for an allowance to her out of the personal estate of said deceased, in addition to the personal estate by law belonging to her.

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be holden at Salem, in said county of Essex, on the third Monday of April, next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause if any you have, against the same.

And said petitioner is ordered to serve this citation by publishing the same once a week for three successive weeks in the Peabody Press, a newspaper printed at Peabody, the last publication to be two days at least before said Court.

Witness, George F. Choate, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this twentieth day of March, in the year eighteen hundred and eighty-five.

Poet's Corner.

As I Roam'd Fru de Vin' yar'.

As I roam'd fru de vin'yar'
I met de Massa dar;
His face was beamin' kindly,
His eyes looked mild and clar.

Said he to me: "Oh, workman,
I hired you by de yeah,
De time's full short fur de reap'n,
De frost'll soon be heah.

"Dar am no time fur idl'n',
Nor roamin' fru de lan's;
So workman, swing youah sickle,
An, join de oder han's.

"De grain am nigh a bustin',
De wheat an' cornfiel's laugh,
So harves' all dat's perfec',
An' fro away de chaff.

"De fruits am hanging rip'ned
Upon de leafy vine,
So fall to work, now O workman,
Or you are none of mine."

I looked into his face den—
O, suah all heav'n was dar;
I saw its light a shinin'
About him bright an' clar.

An' den I fell to workin'
To rid my heart ob sin,
An' nebber will I stop it
Till all de harves's in.

Till I heah de Massa sayin'
"De fruit's off all de vine,
You've earn'd your hire, workman,
An' you're one o' mine."

O I am glad I met de Massa
As I roam'd fru de field,
For I was weak an' tempted,
But now I'll nevah yield.

Modern Opera.

THE PLAIN ENGLISH OF "LUCIA."

ACT I.

A lady (very high soprano)
Is buried in the depth of woe;
The deeper goes her vocal sorrow,
The higher up her head tones go.

Beloved by an awkward tenor,
She clings to him with faithful heart;
Her brother (very heavy basso),
However, tears the pair apart.

The tenor after singing falsely,
Decamps and goes to parts unknown;
The lady proves that this afflicts her
By flattening almost half a tone.

ACT II.

A marriage follows with another
(A tenor of the second class);
Her brother seals the fatal nuptials,
And things come to a frightful pass.

Her lover had a round trip ticket
When he went off to parts afar;
He comes back just too late to stop it;
The wedding's done—and here we are.

The lady faints to heavy brasses;
The lover curses with the strings;
A tumult follows in orchestra,
Then all the crowd together sings.

ACT III.

The lady, after long cadenzas,
Plunges a dagger in her breast;
The lover doesn't seem to like it,
And drags a high C from his chest.

The brother stabs the awkward tenor,
Then on the dead soprano calls;
The chorus, looking apathetic,
Sings on until the curtain falls.

Dear Little Hands.

BY A LOVING MAMMA.

Dear little hands, I loved them so!
And now they are lying under the snow—
Under the snow so cold and white,
I cannot see them, or touch them to-night.
They are quiet and still at last, ah me!
How busy and restless they used to be!
But now they can never reach up through the snow,
Dear little hands, I loved them so!

Dear little hands, I miss them so!
All through the day, wherever I go—
All through the night how lonely it seems
For no little hands wake me out of my dreams,
I miss them all through the weary hours,
I miss them as others do sunshine and flowers;
Day time or night time, wherever I go,
Dear little hands, I miss them so!

Dear little hands, they have gone from me now,
Never again will they rest on my brow—
Never again smooth my sorrowful face,
Never clasp me in a childish embrace.
And now my forehead grows wrinkled with care,
Thinking of little hands, once resting there,
But I know in a happier, heavenly clime,
Dear little hands, I will clasp you some time.

Bernard Murphy, Champion Youth Walker of Australia, says in the Melbourne Sportsman: "On Monday previous to the match with Ormes, of Sydney, I was attacked with the 'stitch.' I could not walk another yard, and gave up all hope of winning. I was advised to try St. Jacobs Oil. I did so, rubbing a little on my side. I have not been troubled since, and won my match."

"Where would we be without women?" asks an exchange. It is hard to determine just which way the majority would drift, but some men we know would be out of debt and out of trouble.

Selected Story.

The Spoopendykes.

THEY DRESS FOR A DINNER PARTY WITH SOME DIFFICULTY.

'Now, we haven't much time to get ready, my dear,' suggested Mr. Spoopendyke, cheerily, 'and I won't be late at a dinner party. I want you to fix up so as to be the best looking woman at the table. You can get ready in an hour, can't you?'

'I think I can,' replied Mrs. Spoopendyke, with a titter. 'Oh, yes, I can dress in that time, and I hope you won't be disappointed in me,' and the little woman began to take down her back hair.

'You might get my shaving tackle for me,' said Mr. Spoopendyke, appropriating the only mirror. 'And now I think of it,' he continued, after a pause, 'my dress coat needs a button. Sew it on, won't you?'

Mrs. Spoopendyke lugged out the coat, and hunted through a broken-down old bag after a button that would do.

'Got that button sewed on yet?' inquired Mr. Spoopendyke, lathering away comfortably.

'In a minute, my dear,' responded his wife.

'Well, hurry up; I want you to put these studs and sleeve-buttons into my clean shirt.'

Mrs. Spoopendyke gradually got around to those offices, and laid out the habiliment in readiness for her lord.

'Did you take those stitches in my gloves?' inquired Mr. Spoopendyke.

'Oh, yes; certainly,' replied Mrs. Spoopendyke; 'going right to work at it.'

'Well, then, you can brush my vest and pantaloons, and by that time I'll be ready to have you tie my cravat.'

A few moments more found Mr. Spoopendyke arrayed completely.

'Come, you ready?' he demanded, having assured himself that his wife had not accomplished a single step toward her toilet.

'Not quite, dear,' responded the lady, with one-half her hair in her mouth and the other half crackling under the brush.

'What's the matter with you?' he asked. 'Didn't you say you could get ready in an hour? Didn't you hear me tell you when I came in that we only had an hour to dress in? What have you been doing? Why can't you go as you are? You look well enough.'

'I was busy fixing your things,' faltered Mrs. Spoopendyke,' 'and I couldn't do two things at once.'

'Oh, no! You can't do anything at once. Why didn't you have my things fixed this morning? Why don't you keep house somehow? That dress you've got is good enough. Why can't you go in that dress? If you've got to put on all the frills you won't be ready till next fall. Ain't you most ready now? Think I'm going to stand around here like a jug of mineral water?'

Mrs. Spoopendyke twisted up her hair and jammed in the pins. Then she put on her hat and twitched it first one way and then the other; put one hand up behind and shoved it forward, and then caught hold of it in front and pulled it down.

'Well, if you're ready, let's start,' growled Mr. Spoopendyke. 'You've been long enough for a telegraph wire now. Come on.'

'Oh! I haven't got my dress on yet,' pleaded Mrs. Spoopendyke. 'I'll be through in a minute.'

'Dod gast the dress!' ejaculated Mr. Spoopendyke. 'Where's my paper? Give me my paper and I'll read a month or two. You won't be ready till spring. Where's that paper?'

'Take a book, dear,' recommended Mrs. Spoopendyke, blushing deeply, and glancing around nervously.

'I don't want a measly book,' retorted Mr. Spoopendyke. 'I want the morning paper. Find that paper the first thing you do, and then you get ready in four seconds.'

'I think you'll find the paper behind—behind the book case,' said Mrs. Spoopendyke, as red as a brick, and she hustled into her skirt and began clawing at it behind in an effort to loop it up straight. 'I'm almost ready,' she giggled hysterically, as she drew on the waist and buttoned it up nervously. 'I'll be ready before you could turn the paper inside out,' and she snatched a ribbon from the drawer, tied it in a bow, pinned it at her throat and backed away from the glass to see how it looked.

'I want to know whether you're going to find that dod gasted paper for me?' thundered Mr. Spoopendyke.

'I'm all right except my cloak,' jerked out Mrs. Spoopendyke. 'If you'll hand me my cloak we'll start right away. It's in the closet there.' And Mrs. Spoopendyke flopped down on the floor and began putting on her shoes.

'S'pose I'm going to hunt around for that measly cloak?' howled Mr. Spoopendyke. 'Can't you get your things yourself? I want my paper, and I want it now!'

'I can tell you what was in it,' said Mrs. Spoopendyke. 'I can tell you all about it while I dress,' and she looked up at him pleasantly, with her face all flushed.

'No doubt,' retorted Mr. Spoopendyke. 'You know all about it. All you want is a can of oil and ten men swearing at you all day to be a printing press. When are you going—'

'Now, I'm all ready, dear,' smiled Mrs. Spoopendyke, who wasn't anything of the sort. 'You won't need to read now, for we're going.'

They started off together arm in arm, Mr. Spoopendyke growling and his wife hitching at her various garments as they went along.

'Another time we're going out to dinner you be ready the day before, you hear?' demanded Mr. Spoopendyke.

'Yes, dear,' responded his wife, and then she thought to herself, 'I'm very glad he didn't insist on my looking for that paper.'

Tact.

May we not describe tact fairly well as the antithesis of clumsiness? Etymologically, as we know, tact is touched, and it may be called, therefore, the deft way of handling people. It is born with some men and women, like the supple, delicate fingers of the artist's hand, and those that have it use their gift instinctively. It is not measured alike to those who have it—men possess it in different degrees; while others, again, are wanting in it altogether.

Tact ought not to be confounded with savoirfaire; it is not merely the English equivalent for that term; one may have a large acquaintance with the world and its conventions and be perfected in the practice of social duties, great and small, and yet be lacking in this fine sixth sense, so invaluable to its possessors and to all whom they come in contact. It is the outcome of intellectual and temperamental qualities, and implies the possession of clear perceptions, quick imagination, and delicate sensibilities; it is these that gave the tactful person his subtle intuition of another's mental processes and moods of feeling, and in the same moment the exactly right mode of dealing with these. Tact, it is true, like any other natural gift, may be consciously exercised and brought by use to a higher perfection. Practiced on a large scale, with experience and foresight aiding, it makes the successful diplomat. It is impossible not to feel a certain pleasure in the use of special faculties, of whatever kind; and it is not to be wondered at that a person possessing the gift of dextrous touch should regard with a mingling of amusement and compassion the unfortunate individual who goes on his blundering way through the world, forever stumbling against people's idiosyncrasies, bruising their small foibles, oversetting their cherished prejudices, when a little adroitness might save all the damage. There are men and women who are always doing this, just as there are those whose awkward motions and clumsy fingers are continually bringing disaster upon themselves and whatever they handle.—Atlantic Journal.

HE DIDN'T PROPOSE TO LET HIS SHANKS HANG OUT.—A rather rough looking countryman and his wife took a berth on a Milwaukee sleeper the other night. They retired early and were soon asleep. When the train arrived at La Crosse the conductor came into the car and shouted La Cro-s-s-e.

La Crosse, howled back a gruff voice from the. countryman's berth. La Crosse, no I'me d-d ef I will, ther ain't room fur me ter lay lengthways and stretch out in this ere coffin, an' I'll be danged ef I'll lay cross an' let my shanks hang out in ther cold.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

MUSICAL NOTES.

The choir of St. John's Church presented Mr. Charles A. Clark, their organist and director, with an elaborate Easter card, last Sunday.

Miss S. P. Clemons, soprano of the Baptist choir, was one of the soloists at the Cantata of Ruth and Boaz, which was performed in Salem last Thursday

To-morrow evening occurs the closing concert for this season of the Salem Schubert club. From all indications it will be one of the best. The names of the soloists were given last week in this column, and are well known to our readers with the exception of Miss Howland, who we feel sure will meet with the favor of the audience. She is a pupil of Mrs. Edna A. Hall, of Boston, and has recently accepted the position of soprano in J. C. Bartlett's choir in Worcester—the best position in that city. Mr. Arthur W. Foote will conduct.

The closing concert of the Salem Oratorio Society, also, will be given Monday evening in Mechanic Hall, Salem, when Handel's Jubilate and Spohr's Last Judgment will be performed. The soloists will be Fanny Kellogg, soprano; Miss Mary Howe, contralto, and Messrs. Winch and Babcock. It is a long time since we in this vicinity have had the pleasure of hearing Miss Fanny Kellogg, and it will surely be a pleasure. Miss Howe is well known as one of Boston's best contraltos, and take it all in all, the Society present a formidable array of talent. There ought not to be a vacant seat in the hall—and we know Peabody people will be present in goodly numbers. There will be a public rehearsal in the afternoon, to which an admission fee of 25 cents only will be charged.

The engagement is announced of Mr. Arthur French of Abram French & Co. and Miss Minnie Felt of Salem. Miss Felt is the contralto of the Unitarian Church here, and also of the Barton Square church in Salem, both of whom will lose her service.

The concerts announced at Music Hall, Boston, on the 28th and 29th inst. by the Theodore Thomas' orchestra and assisting soloists promise to have many attractive features. The evening of the 28th is to be made notable by Mr. Thomas, as its programme will include two and possibly three large orchestral works which have never been heard here before. The matinee concert on the 29th will be made to represent the same class of compositions as have been given with so much success at the young people's concerts during the last two New York seasons. Seats are now on sale at Music Hall.

Miss Anna Hubon, the contralto a the Universalist, resumed her position in the choir Easter Sunday for the first time in several weeks. During her illness her place has been supplied by Mrs. Emma Bartlett, of the Baptist Choir.

Miss Bessie Hamlin made a great success in "Judas Maccabaeus" in Liverpool, Feb. 19. The Courier says: "It is almost impossible to award too high a praise to Miss Hamlin, who made her debut under the most satisfactory circumstances. Her voice is a pleasing and powerful soprano which she used with great skill. In the trying air "From Mighty Kings" she displayed admirable phrasing and a clear enunciation. This was particularly noticeable in the allegro, "Judah, rejoice." The runs and trills were chastely performed, for which she again earned high demonstrations of favour and a redemand, which, however, was not accorded."

Our readers will note that Carrie Swain, the charming soubrette actress, is to appear Friday evening in the Town Hall under the management of H. Brooks Hooper. She is to appear in her new play "The Little Joker." It was first produced at Pope's Theatre, St. Louis, in November last, and scored an immediate success, since which it has been successfully played in all the principal cities of the South. The Little Joker is in five acts, illustrating several interesting phases of life, and is full of mirth and good humor. Miss Swain will assume the role of Chirp, the Little Joker, and as such assumes several characters, among others a newsboy and bootblack, and also a swell of the period. She will also introduce her world-famed character impersonations, including new songs and dances, and will be supported by a strong and efficient dramatic company under the management of Fred G. Maeder. In speaking of the star an exchange says: "She sings very sweetly, and her lullaby in the first act was warmly applauded. Her songs, dances and flipflaps in the second act aroused the audience to the hurrah point, and she scored her usual success. A great point in Miss Swain's favor is that as a soubrette she is by no means mechanical; there is actual color and strength in all she attempts, and however impulsive or vigorous she may seem at times, it is the sou of heartiness, and does not suggest stiffness or angularity. Her perfect freedom and nonchalence constitute the strength of her acting. Some of the music introduced in Chirp is exceedingly pretty, nicely arranged, and will become popular.

CARPET AND UPHOLSTERY DEPARTMENT.

Carpet Department

Our Carpet Business since Feb. 1st, in consequence of the low prices, has been unexpectedly large.

We are glad for ourselves, also for the public, and propose to open our on the same line, believing that a largely increased business will compensate us for the smaller per cent. of profit.

It will be noted, that no matter how low our prices are fixed, our Carpets are always of good quality and desirable styles.

We are now receiving a great variety of choice things in all grades of Carpetings.

BRUSSELS CARPETS.

Special attention is invited to our Brussels Stock. We are informed that it is much larger than any other in Essex County.

It comprises novelties in Hartford, Lowell and Bigelow Brussels, with several other approved makes, at popular prices.

We shall continue to offer for the present a good line of the best

5 Frame Brussels Carpets at $1.

These Carpets are as good as the best, and comprise some excellent styles.

GLENHAM VELVET CARPETS.

This beautiful grade of Carpet which compares favorable with the Axminster and Wilton owes its origin to A. T. Stewart, who shortly before his death, planned its manufacture for the benefit of the Retail Department of the Famous House of which he was the head.

It is a beautiful and durable carpet at a reasonable price, and has grown in popularity from the first. We carry a full line of these Carpets.

TAPESTRY BRUSSELS CARPETS.

Roxbury & Smith Tapestries, Elegant New Styles.

We shall continue for the present to sell a good Tapestry at 50 cents.

A Good Line of New

EXTRA SUPER CARPETS.

Extra Super Carpets at 60 cents.

All Wool Carpets at 42 cents.

Cotton Chain Carpets at tremendously low prices. Our goods were bought before the great strike, and some carpets will probably soon advance on account of the scarcity of desirable goods.

Some manufacturers now take orders at an advance in price.

We devote special halls for each kind of carpeting mentioned.

We buy our goods direct from the manufacturer.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

HYGIENIC CARPET BEATING.

We Steam-Beat Carpets Entirely Free from Dust & Dirt.

There is no article in a household that collects more unhealthy dirt than a carpet. After the carpet has been in use some time, sweeping takes off only a part of the dust and dirt, and the rest settles down into the fibre, to rise again and be breathed into delicate lungs. Dust clings tenaciously to some fibres, especially woolen. No ordinary beating process will remove it. Hand-beating is ineffective. Our method of beating is the only thorough and effective one.

We invite investigation as to the merit of our claim, to wit, that we can beat carpets as clean as they can be made, and without injury to them, as we use no hooks, nails or screws, and require no ripping nor sewing to adjust them to our machine. It is essential to clean carpets thoroughly, if they are worth it; for carpets, like other household articles, will absorb impurities and retain them tenaciously

This can be tested by closing a room after the carpet has been in use some time, and on opening the room an offensive order is often emitted.

We can also apply our heated, or dry steam process in addition to the machine for removing dust and dirt; and the process will effectually relieve the carpet of all impurities, and also brings out and freshens the colors. It also kills Moths, Buffalo Bugs, and all other vermin that infest carpets.

THE GENTLE STOVE.—What's the matter with the melancholy days. Now is the time to hunt out your last winter's stock of stove pipe and put up your stoves for the season. Try if possible to get the joints of pipe to your wash-house stove, and to your parlor heating stove, between which there is a difference of three-quarters of an inch in diameter, mixed. You will find some little difficulty in getting things to work smoothly, but pshaw, "Faint heart, etc.' Strive on, this is only one of the patent rights schemes to make human beings forget the wickedness of profanity. Your aim should be to get the larger joint to fit into the smaller. If it don't glide in at once remember that 'there is a Divinity that shapes our ends,' and take the family axe or a stove leg and strike it one consecutive blow upon the side, near the extremity, thereby beautifully crimping the edges, better still, jump on the blasted thing with all the might of your hoofs and crush it out of existence, it will then come to time and see the fitness of fitting. The most interesting act in the whole stove-pipe drama, is to get an elbow joint to work all right in a ceiling flue. In performing this melancholy duty one is liable to forget, for the time being, the beautiful little prayer taught him by his good old mother, and to entirely disregard the whole kit of ten commandments. There is about as much romance in setting up stove-pipes as there is in shaking carpets and poor hen-pecked heads of families who have to indulge in any such domestic matinees are certainly deserving of sympathy, from the young sap heads, who spend their winter evenings on the sofa by this same parlor fireside, with the old man's handsome daughter.—Ex.

NOTES
ASHTON

I saw it suggested somewhere that the present committee appointed by the town to oppose the division before the legislative committee should keep up its organization and be ready for duty next year. Now I think that excellent committee, who have done such effective work this year, will decline to bear the burdens next year. I don't know the exact figures but I think it was estimated that $150 would be sufficient to carry on the defense, but I will wager my old hat that it has cost nearer $500. This amount cannot come from the town but from individuals, and most of it will come from this committee, who have not only put in their time but must now pay the expense. Let the mantle fall on the shoulders of another committee and may they be as successful.

Beverly people have long enjoyed the reputation for being "big" feeders, and one of them at the firemen's ball last Wednesday night did all he could to sustain that opinion. The supper was a fine one and there was plenty of everything, but Beverly's representative had no sooner seated himself at the table than he requested me to pass him the cake, and he "took the cake" too. There were six bars on the dish and he removed four of them to a position in front of his plate; the confectionery and fruit was also passed him and a genuous allowance used to increase his pile. Then he went to work on cold turkey and oysters. I left him eating after sitting at the table three-quarters of an hour, and he had not got to the cake and confectionery then. Perhaps he was supplying an Orphan Asylum somewhere and was trying to provide for the whole family.

A lady living not far from Walnut street has been in the habit of shutting off the water every night. She forgot it one of the cold nights last week and her husband discovering it shut it off. The next morning he went to work without speaking of it and the poor woman thought it was froze and spent most of the forenoon bringing water from a neighbors and heating it and attempting to thaw the pipe out. What she said when she discovered the water was shut off I am not going to say.

I forgot to give you Joe's weather for last month but here is his prediction for April. The first week will be mild, cloudy and changeable. About the 10th, wet and unpleasant, and from then to the 25th, a period of fine, mild weather will probably ensue, with possibly excepting the 15th and 16th. Now let's see what kind of a prophet Joe is.

I was shown the new badge presented Mr. Phalen last week. It was in the form of a shield, with Peabody Police in small letters, while the monogram M. P. filled up the balance, and was the most conspicuous. I suppose the M. P. stands for "Metropolitan Police," and was designed to paralyze the young hoodlums when they see it coming around the corner.

I was in the "dusky mine" a short time ago when one of the ex-soldiers got to speaking about the pension bureau of the Government. Among other things he said, "I was in two companies during the war each having a hundred men, and it is wonderful how so many of them during the last five years have found out that they suffered with chronic diarrhea twenty years ago, and write me expecting me to remember just when it attacked them, how sick they were, and when they left for the hospital, etc. And they want me to swear to it. I am willing to help my comrades but to do this with a clear conscience a man has got to have an everlasting memory."

A well known resident of the southern part of the town who had two false teeth on a small plate woke up the other morning and missing them thought he had swallowed them. I believe he could feel them rattle as he walked about. Being a very nervous man he could not work and commenced to take medicine to dislodge the crockery. It had reached the third day and he was so sick from swallowing those teeth that he was about taking his bed and sending for the family physician, when his little girl found them in an open shed adjoining the house. His recovery was very rapid after that, although the medicine left him rather weak.

The Pansy for April is at hand. It is an excellent number, and its many little readers will read its illustrated stories with interest. Published by D. Lothrop & Co., Boston.

THE DRAMA.

At the Boston Museum William Redmund and Mrs. Thomas Barry appear for a two weeks' engagement, while the Museum Stock Company are supporting Edwin Booth at Philadelphia. "A Midnight Marriage," as a romantic play, has won its share of cordial commendation. It is the work of Mr. Chas. Osborne, whose "Becket" has recently been accepted by Lawrence Barrett, and who ranks among the most successful of English playwrights. Mr. Redmund, as Casimir, has the role of a gallant officer, who battles against conspirators and persecutors, and at last comes out triumphant, "just in the nick of time." Mrs. Barry essays, of course, the character of the heroine. The stars will be supported by their own combination.

The special success of the dramatic year at the Union Square Theatre, New York, is this week to be transferred to the stage of the Park, where so many famous dramas of the Union Square have had successful production. "A Prisoner for Life" is the work of Louis Nathal. It is a melodrama, abounding in exciting situations, and marked also by unusual literary merit, and as well by consistency—a quality which too many dramatists of the present day ignore in their work. All the scenery and effects, including the avalanche scene, which aroused enthusiasm at the Union Square, will be seen. "A Prisoner for life," in its cast, will present such favorite actors as Sara Jewett, Maud Harrison, Joseph E. Whiting and J. H. Stoddart. As the Union Square company ceases to exist after the current season, the present engagement gives to the Boston public the last opportunities of witnessing this celebrated organization in melodrama. The run of the Nathal play, in which no little interest has already been made manifest, is for two weeks only.

The first opportunities for hearing Mr. William Carroll's new farcical play in Boston are to be enjoyed the present week at the Bijou Theatre. "Lend Me a Dollar" is the suggestive title. It is a musical piece, this production of the pen of Mr. John Harrison, and there will be, in the course of the performance, a large number of popular songs. Those who know Mr. Carroll hardly need to be told that he knows what is funny, and the play which he produces is pronounced one of the drollest in all the long line of presentations in farcical comedy. The piece will have the advantage of the services of a company unusually strong. "Lend Me a Dollar" will be performed for a single week only.

The grand Russian scenic and spectacular drama, "Michael Strogoff," ranks as one of the great successes in the theatrical annals of Boston. The announcement that "Michael Strogoff" will be once more offered to the public will be hailed with satisfaction, and thousands who have heard of "Strogoff," but have never witnessed it, will throng to the Howard at all the performances of the coming week. Cornalba, the great premiere, is to lead the grand ballett especially engaged for "Michael Strogoff." All the famous features of D'Ennery and Verne's world-famous dramatic production are to be seen at the Howard. The battle scene, the illuminated fete, and the burning of Irkutsk will all be given in most complete style. Dancers in elegant costume, brilliant processions, realistic war scenes, introducing mounted cavalry, a drum and fife corps, grand military pageant—all these things are to be awaited in "Michael Strogoff."

"Pique," strongly cast, is the Museum underlining for April 20, when the company return from the Booth engagement in Philadelphia.

Louise Balfe will sing her tickling song and dance her sailor's hornpipe—in which she recently scored a great success in Cincinnati—at the Bijou Theatre this week in "Lend Me a Dollar."

"A Very Odd Trick," a little operetta that is warmly praised, in which the characters represent a pack of cards, is soon to have a hearing at the Globe, with Miss Janet Edmondson as director.

HOW BAKING POWDERS ARE MADE.—While rival companies are disputing as to what ingredients are to be found in the "best baking powder," the public will be interested in the following definition of these now indispensable articles, as given by Appleton's Cyclopedia, the acknowledged American authority; "The best baking powders are composed of bitartrate of potash (cream of tartar), tartaric acid, carbonate of ammonia, and soda bicarbonate, bound together by a little starch.'

One of our heavy weight citizens while coming out of the post office the other morning fell pretty solidly on the steps. I listened to the broken French language as he looked to see whether it was the flooring of the steps, or the adipose tissue in the neighborhood of his ribs that had yielded to the pressure. He smiled a sickly smile on his friends as he continued his way.

There is an effort being made to secure a pardon for Billy Hayes by friends in Peabody and Lawrence, on condition that he will leave the state and never return. A paper reading as follows and signed by one hundred of the neighbors of Hayes while at New Orleans has been sent north:

We, the undersigned citizens and residents of the city of New Orleans, state of Louisanna, do hereby certify that having known one William Farrell for the past three months as the owner and proprietor of the Cleveland hotel near the Exposition grounds in this city, we have found him to be a good citizen and business man. Our inter course with him, has shown him to be an honest, honorable, straightforward man in all his dealings; and he has won the respect of all who have known him here.

In an interview with a representative of the Lawrence Eagle he gave the following account of himself. I was born in Dublin about forty years ago, and arrived in this country about twenty-two years ago, landing in New York. I immediately started for Boston, and entered the employ of a stone mason on Federal street, and worked at hod-carrying. About eighteen years ago I came to Lawrence and assisted in building several cellars on Common street, among them being those of Messrs. Wellman, Reily and Reed. I afterwards worked for Messrs. Leonard & McDermott, wholesale liquor dealers, the former being the well known police officer Richard Leonard. After leaving Lawrence I located in Peabody and became yard overseer in the Bleachery at that place. I next entered into business for myself. My business career is known to most every reader of a newspaper in the state so I will not refer to it but will confine myself to what transpired from the time of departure to and from New Orleans. I made but one stop and that was at Cincinnati during the time of the election riot of last November. I remained in that city for a few days and then started for New Orleans with about $700 cash in my possession. After reaching the latter city I selected a nice spot of ground next to the building known as the "Battle of Soudan" and directly opposite the main entrance of the exposition structure. There I erected a two-story building. This did not prove large enough so I enlarged it. The house had 11 rooms and each had occupants. I had a full complement of help. The land I purchased cost me $1500 and the building $2200. When leaving New Orleans I had to sell for $1100. I was doing a business of from $40 to $50 a day. The rear portion of my lot was rented to a man from Idaho for exhibition purposes. Therefore it could be easily seen that I was making money fast. I had paid up all I owed on the land and had $1710 in my possession coming back. The reason I left Peabody was I had a great horror of imprisonment. I showed by my very action that I intended to locate permanently in New Orleans and to forever keep out of the state of Massachusetts. I thought that my bondsmen were sufficiently secured in Peabody and that no uneasiness would be experienced by them. The man Shaw that gave me away I treated very friendly, and I gave him some money but could not provide him with work. I telegraphed Mr. Miller, one of my bondsmen $460 to pay the expenses incurred in hiring the detectives.

The question was asked of Hayes by the reporter if he had anything to sa relative to the crime for which he had been convicted. The reply was: "Between you, (the reporter) myself and God, I am an innocent man, and did not commit the deed with which I was charged. I was at that time under the care of a physician, Dr. Shanahan of Peabody, formerly of Lawrence. Other medical men of note had me under treatment and could have testified to this, but my case was not handled properly, as a result I was convicted, as I said before of a crime of which I am entirely innocent." Hayes further said that he would be willing to sign an agreement to keep out of the state for ever if such arrangement could be made.

Rheumatism

It is an established fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla has proven an invaluable remedy in many severe cases of rheumatism, effecting remarkable cures by its powerful action in correcting the acidity of the blood, which is the cause of the disease, and purifying and enriching the vital fluid.

It is certainly fair to assume that what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for others it will do for you. Therefore, if you suffer the pains and aches of rheumatism, give this potent remedy a fair trial.

A Positive Cure.

"I was troubled very much with rheumatism in my hips, ankles, and wrists. I could hardly walk, and was confined to my bed a good deal of the time. Being recommended to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, I took four bottles and am perfectly well. I cheerfully recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla as one of the best blood purifiers in the world." W. F. WOOD, Bloomington, Ill.

For Twenty Years

I have been afflicted with rheumatism. Before 1883 I found no relief, but grew worse. I then began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, and it did me more good than all the other medicine I ever had." H. T. BALCOM, Shirley, Mass.

"I suffered from what the doctors called muscular rheumatism. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and am entirely cured." J. V. A. PROUDFOOT, letter carrier, Chicago, Ill.

We shall be glad to send, free of charge, to all who may desire, a book containing many additional statements of cures by

THE ACTION of the city government of Salem, in declining to grant licenses to innholders, may be supposed to indicate an intention to enforce the law this year with regard to the provisions under which are granted licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquors. The only condition under the law, by which a Sunday sale can be made, is found in Section 9 which reads "except that, if the licensee is also licensed as an innholder, he may supply such liquor to guests who have resorted to his house for food or lodging." By the refusal of the authorities to grant the innholders license, it will not be possible for any one, except druggists, to sell any liquor legally on the Lord's day.

It is not stated what the innholder is to do without such a license, wherein he will violate a section of the Public Statutes, imposing a fine of One Hundred Dollars on any person presuming to keep an inn without an innholders' license. But we suppose it is to be considered that no prosecution will be made under that law. Therefore it looks like an indication towards the enforcement of the law. We use the word indication advisedly, because if the city of Salem are able the ensuing year to stop the sale of liquor on Sunday, in places even where an innholders' license would neither be asked or granted, they will do more than has been done previously in that city.

We confess we have very little faith in the city of Salem, or any city or town where licenses are granted, making a strict enforcement of the license law without the moral support or aid, one or both, of a good Law and Order League. Two years ago in Peabody, liquor was sold under a license law. We doubt if a day passed without open violation of some of the provisions of the license. And at the most convenient place for the sale of liquor in the whole town, it was sold as openly on the Lord's day, as at any other time. Last year, in Salem, the general sale of liquor was illegal at all times, and it is so to-day. But is the law enforced? Does any one pretend that there is any attempt at enforcement? Is there any attempt to conceal its open sale? Not openly, perhaps, on the Lord's day. But does any one pretend that it is not sold on that day?

Under a license law, we fail to see wherein the enforcement of the law is to be made more effective in our neighboring city on the Lord's day, or any day, without the aid of a Law and Order League. And this is what Salem ought to have. This city is to be, the coming year, the nucleus for all sales of liquor in the vicinity. Peabody, Danvers, Beverly, Marblehead, Swampscott—all refuse the sale of liquor within their borders. The liquor dealers here, who are perhaps harder pushed than elsewhere, are thinking of hieing themselves across the line where they can pursue their business with more pleasure and profit. There will be plenty of legal sales. No one doubts there will be as many, if not more, illegal sales. We do not believe Salem will license all the applicants. There will be many unlicensed places. To attend to these, to stop Sunday selling, to see that no liquor is sold to minors, for their own use, or that of any other person; to see that no liquor is sold to intoxicated persons—all these things come within the enforcement of the license law. Despite the fact that Salem's vote was for license, we know there is a strong temperance element in that city. There are among her best citizens those who should favor such an organization and be able and willing workers in it. And in our judgment, with an effective Law and Order League in Salem, the next year would witness a reversal of the vote on the question of whether licenses shall be granted.

WE HAVE delayed making any comment on the Annual Report of the Trustees of the Peabody Institute, which was presented to the town at the Annual Meeting, partly because action on it was deferred by vote of the meeting until our citizens could have an opportunity of reading it. No further action, however, was taken, and as the matter stands, we believe the report has not been accepted by the town.

This, however, is of small moment; as the report, outside of the publication of an obituary on the late Hon. A. A. Abbott, and the figures of the treasurers, showing the expenditures of the different departments, contains very little information. As compared with the report of last year it is a tame affair. And this leads to the question whether our citizens generally are as interested in the management of the Institute as they should be. Our judgment is that a large majority of the people of the town, who enjoy the benefits of Mr. Peabody's bequest, know very little of the management by which these benefits come to them as a matter of course. They make their regular visits to the Library, find fault or otherwise in accordance with their success in obtaining the last new novel, attend the free lectures which are provided for them, and frequently find more fault than if they paid a handsome price for admission,—and all without realizing what they enjoy which is denied to other towns and cities, and without the least thought of the labors of the several committees who have the care of providing for the public, a labor too, which is given without any charge for their services—solely as a matter of love.

This ought not to be. And inasmuch as the action of the Trustees last Monday evening, in reference to the income of the reserve fund, is a matter which has been under discussion (with little knowledge to the public) for some considerable time, meeting with much opposition from the conservative portion of the Trustees, we desire to call attention to it, and in connection therewith to the reports of this and the preceding year.

Last year's report, which was written by Frank E. Farnham, was rightly characterized by Mr. Blaney in town meeting as an interesting document. It not only called attention to the advisability of taking a portion of the income of the reserve fund, but openly and strongly advocated it. The income by which the Lyceum and Library are supported had decreased from former years, owing to the lower rate of interest then and now to be obtained on invested funds, while the reserve fund was steadily on the increase. The Library and building were well insured so that even if the entire income were taken, the reserve fund, it was thought by those sympathizing with Mr. Farnham, would be all sufficient for any emergency. The opponents of the measure laid great stress on the wishes of Mr. Peabody in giving the amount for the fund—that it should be allowed to accumulate without disturbance, until some larger and better building should be required, or until some great emergency should arise. This had already come, in the opinion of the writer of last year's report. The regular funds were insufficient to support the Library and Lyceum as they should be supported, and the reserve fund was accumulating for the support of future generations. An attempt was made that year, we believe, to make an appropriation from this fund, but it failed. This year, by the action of Monday night, noted elsewhere, it succeeded, and $800—not quite half the income—was given to the Lyceum and Library Committee for their use.

Since the publication of Mr. Farnham's report, the matter has been talked of more or less, not only by the Trustees, but by the members of the Lyceum and Library Committee. Indeed it was considered by this latter committee previous to that time. For in the same report, last year, we find the report of the Chairman of the Lyceum and Library Committee, written by Thomas M. Stimpson, devoting considerable discussion to the matter, and recommending to the Trustees the desirability of considering the matter. Such advice was very pertinent, and it seems to us, very proper to be made by this committee. To them are entrusted the care of the Library and the arrangement of the courses of lectures. They, more than the Trustees, knew the difficulties under which they labored—the straits to which the Library was reduced from want of funds. They saw the remedy, and why should they not advise it? But the present year, whether from over-sensitiveness in the matter of advice, or whether because the Trustees had settled in their mind the desirability of devoting a portion of the fund to the purpose desired, and wished to take upon themselves the sole merit of originating it—at all events they did not look with favor upon any further advice in this direction. So that when the report of G. Fred Osgood, the Chairman of the Lyceum and Library Committee, was presented to the Trustees, couched in as respectful language as that of Mr. Stimpson the previous year, only made stronger by natural events and the increasing need of the appropriation, it was suppressed. Our citizens are therefore without this report, in the published document—a report which in our judgment contained more valuable information than the entire remainder of the book. But the gentleman can console himself with the reflection that his labors have not been in vain; that the matter has been accomplished, and by his own election to the Board of Trustees he was made an instrument in carrying out his own recommendations.

It is probable that in the future the precedent established will be followed; and good will result therefrom both to the Library and Lyceum, which we trust will be appreciated by the public.

Fire at George Clerk's Factory.

At 9.30 last evening an alarm of fire was given by the chime whistle on the mill of B. & A. N. Jacobs on Mason street for a lively fire in the large morocco factory of George Clerk on Spring street, between Winter and Foster streets. The fire when discovered by one of J. B. Thomas' employes, was coming out at the chimney on the Winter street side of the building. He immediately gave the alarm which was promptly answered by the firemen and in just nine minutes from the first alarm, Hose 2 had a stream on the fire from the hydrant at the corner of Oak and Foster streets, followed by Hose 1 and 3 and Steamer 1 and 2. The fire ran over the upper part of the building and burst out through the roof, threatening to spread to the other parts of the works, but the prompt action of the firemen in surrounding the building soon confined it to the section where it originated. The flames did not get below the second floor to do any great damage, but the upper stories and the roof was gutted and the roof burned through in many places.

Connected with this building, which was 70 by 40 feet and three stories and a half high, was a building of about the same size running to Spring street, and another running at an angle toward Foster street, but the fire was not allowed to get into these. The buildings were owned by J. A. Davis of Boston; boiler, engine, machinery, etc., by George Clerk, and the stock in process of manufacture by George Clerk, L. Beebe & Sons and other Boston firms. The damage to the building is estimated at about $1500, on which there is an insurance of $5000, placed in ten companies $500 in each company. The boiler, engine, machinery, piping and belting will be damaged about $500, covered by $5600 insurance in eight different companies, $700 in each company. There was 300 dozen skins in the different stages of manufacture in the burned building, which will amount to some $2500 fully covered by insurance. George Clerk's stock was covered by $2500 in two companies. L. Beebe & Sons had $1500, in the Phoenix on their stock. J. A. Davis had an insurance of $14,000 on all the buildings, including the $5000 on the burned building.

The loss will amount to between $4000 and $5000. Hose 1 laid their first line from the hydrant in front of the "Woodbine" and others from hydrants at the rear of the fire. Hose 3 attached to the same hydrant on Foster street. Steamer 1 connected with the Oak street hydrant with Hose 2, and had not run but a few minutes before the suction hose was burst, causing a delay of only a minute or so. The 6 inch water main on Oak street beyond the slaughter house was burst early in the progress of the fire, but did not cause any delay as the steamer could draught the water from the hydrant. When the break occurred an immense volume of water was thrown up in the air. Work was begun on the burst as soon as the fire was over. The break was about ten inches long on the under side of the log, caused by a crack in the cement lining of the pipe. Steamer 2 set at the corner of Foster and Oak streets and three lines run out which were manned by the company Hose 4 and 5. As soon as the H. & L. arrived at the fire the horses were sent back for Steamer 2. This of course causes a delay in getting the second machine at work, which, if the town had purchased horses for its use, might have been at work fully ten minutes before it was, and saved property enough to have more than paid for the horses. At 11.30 o'clock all the apparatus had been relieved from duty, and had packed up and got in readiness for the next alarm. The fire was well handled and reflects great credit on Chief Littlefield and his assistants. The boys did good service, and had to work under the disadvantage of wading knee deep in sumac grounds and tan. The smoke beat down to the ground in stifling clouds. After the fire, a fine collation was served at the engine house at the expense of George Clerk. The need of more hose was felt last night, some of the carriages being obliged to keep their wet hose on the reel, there not being enough for a change. Had the fire occurred later it might have come up to some of our big blazes of this year, as it was completely surrounded by tinder boxes.

SPARKS.

The fifth annual ball of the "Three Ones and a Two," which was held in Upton's Hall last Wednesday evening, is now a thing of the past, but it will be remembered by all who attended it as one of the best ever held. The evening was clear and cool, all that could be wished for an occasion of that kind. The grand march took place at nine o'clock and was led off by Foreman William J. Roome, with about 100 couples in the line. Firemen were present from Lynn, Salem, Danvers, Marblehead, Beverly and Essex and the display of brilliant uniforms together with the costumes of the ladies made a very pleasing scene. The supper, which was served in the supper room about one o'clock, was one of the best that Blunt ever served in this town and was partaken of by about 150. The music by the Salem Band Orchestra was excellent and gave perfect satisfaction. The arrangements for the ball were carried out by the committee, J. H. Miller, Chairman, and the affair was a social success if not financially. The orders were neat and in great demand. Foreman Wm. J. Roome and a corps of aids had charge of the floor. There were 24 numbers, besides the fancies, and dancing was kept up until nearly six o'clock, there being nearly fifty couple on the floor at the close.

Hose 5 will probably get a new piece of apparatus now, and why not put a hose wagon at that house? The opinion of departments where they are used is that they are far superior to the hose reel and cost less. The Engineers could get a hose wagon and put in a swing harness, as the apparatus will be run by a horse, for less than the cost of a hose carriage; and it would be better for the men to work with and to ride on going to and returning from alarms.

The Board of Engineers hold their regular meeting this evening.

The different companies held their last regular meetings of the year Monday night.

In answering the alarm last night it was observed that the horse of Hose 4 was acting queer, in fact as though it wanted to come back with the "boys," and upon examination it was found that he had no bits in his mouth. The driver had to turn back and finish harnessing.

The Fireman's Herald in its last issue said that the Selectmen were all the time finding fault with the firemen of this department. That is an error, as the Selectmen never have, to our knowledge, spoken of the firemen except in the best of terms. The fault finding comes from another source, and not an official one either.

Hose 5 made good time in coming down last night.

Steamer No. 1 has voted to sell their pool table, and any one in want of one, will do well to examine this before purchasing elsewhere.

The Selectmen will probably appoint the Board of Engineers this week. We do not know what their action will be, but we think that they can do no better than to appoint the present Board, with perhaps some slight changes, especially after the able manner in which the last two fires have been handled.

The lists for the new companies have been made out, and the majority of the old members are signing for the new year.

The insurance on the machinery at the Harris tannery has been adjusted as follows: Engine and boiler, $741.04; machinery, $1378.56, making the total of insurance, with the $2513.52 on buildings reported Wednesday, $4532.96.

In all probability the S. C. Bancroft hand engine has been sold at last. The Chief Engineer of Camden, Maine, fire department was in town last Saturday and made an offer for the machine which the Engineers have since decided to accept, and have so notified the Camden authorities. The engine was built at the Button Engine Works in Waterford, N. Y., in 1876, and has only been in actual fire service about five years, as the engine was put out of service when the high service water was let on. During the five years of fire duty the engine had no severe usage, and since its retirement has been kept in perfect condition, and is really as good as new. The engine has attended a number of firemen's musters and has taken several prizes, securing a muster record of over 200 feet. The sale of this engine winds up the last of the hand engines, the Volunteer having been sold at Derry, N. H., where it is now said to be located in a barn. The Torrent was sent out in the neighborhood of Holyoke, Turners Falls, we believe, and nothing has been heard from it since. A new carriage will be purchased for No. 5, from the money received from the sale, and then all the companies will be supplied with suitable apparatus.

The company of Dalys who are to play in Vacation, or Harvard vs. Yale, at Town Hall next Monday evening, ought to be greeted with a full house. The play is first class in every respect.—and so also is the company. They performed early in the season at the Boston Museum to full houses, and received the emphatic endorsement of all the Boston dailies. Tickets will be on sale at Spaulding's to-morrow, and we can assure our readers that it will be one of the best shows that has appeared in this town.

In a neighboring town recently they voted a bonnet to its "handsomest married woman," or tried to, but every husband voted for his wife, and the bonnet was destroyed in the fight that followed.

THE CROSS.

Blest they who seek,
While in their youth
With spirit meek,
The way of Truth.

To them the sacred Scriptures now display,
Christ as the only true and living way.
His prescious blood on Calvary was given
To make them heirs of endless bliss in heaven.
And e'en on earth the child of God can trace
The glorious blessings of his Saviour's grace.

For them He bore
His Father's frown;
For them He wore
The thorny crown;
Nailed to the cross,
Endured its pain,
That His life's loss
Might be their gain.
Then haste to choose
That better part,
Nor e'en refuse
The Lord thy heart,
Lest He declare
"I know you not,"
And deep despair
Should be your lot

Now look to Jesus, who on Calvary died,
And trust on Him who there was crucified.

RESURREXIT.

Last Sunday was Easter, the festival of the Resurrection. Lent and its season of prayer and fasting has passed. Holy week and its solemn ceremonies ended, and Christianity gave voice in celebrating the glorious feast which commemorates the resurrection of Christ. Easter has always been one of the greatest feast days of the church. From the earliest days Easter has been welcomed with songs of joy and praise. It is a matter of history that the exact day of the resurrection has never been ascertained. The early fathers of the church discovering that it came within a certain period of time, by which Easter falls every year on a Sunday of a different date than the previous year. The Catholics are foremost in celebrating all the great feast days of the church, and as they celebrate Christmas, which gave birth to the Saviour, more so they celebrate Easter which places beyond doubt the resurrection of Christ. The Episcopalians also observe Easter with fitting ceremony. Other denominations, though having no special observances of the day, commemorate the feast with appropripate music and the themes of the sermons are usually of a character with the importance of the festival. Last week we published a programme of the services arranged for up to the time of going to press. It was fully carried out Sunday and there was a large attendance at all our churches.

At the Catholic Church there was High Mass at 10 o'clock and an appropriate sermon by the new assistant pastor, Rev. Father Patrick Masterson. An excellent musical programme was rendered under the direction of Mr. Chas. A Clark, organist. In the afternoon there were vespers at 3 o'clock.

At the Episcopal chapel Easter services were conducted by the pastor, Rev. George Walker, who took his text from Philippeans 3d chapter and 10th verse—"That I may know him and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings being made comfortable unto his death." The flowers about the chancel were many and beautiful. There were also some new white cashmere "hangings" around the altar which added to the pleasing effect.

At the South Church, Rev. Mr. Sperry preached from the text Philippeans 3d chapter and 10th verse—"That I may know him and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings being made comfortable unto his death." The choir rendered a number of appropriate selections, and Mrs. S. P. Chase sang a solo. Around the pulpit were several baskets of flowers and the center one represented a cross. In the evening there was a well attended concert, and the children recited a verse, while the singing by the school as a whole and the individual members was excellent.

At the Unitarian Church Rev. J. W. Hudson preached an appropriate sermon taking his text from John 10:17 "Therefore doth my Father love me because I lay down my life, that I might take it again." The musical programme as announced was carried out. There was a beautiful display of cut flowers and calla lilies and the air of the church was perfumed with them.

Mr. John B. Wilson occupied the pulpit of the Baptist Church and preached an interesting sermon. The choir gave several appropriate selections. The service was well attended.

At the Methodist Church, Rev. Mr. Smith preached from Matthew 28:6 "He is not here for he is risen as he said. Come see the place where the Lord lay." At this church there was congregational singing. In the evening there was a largely attended Sunday school concert at which the reports of the different officers were read, showing a very successful work during the past year. An interesting feature of the concert was a large cross, with the words "Christ is risen." The letters were covered up and as each child recited a verse a small bouquet was placed on the cross and the covering from a letter removed until all was uncovered.

At the Universalist Church the pastor, Rev. Mr. Sprague, preached from the text John 20:15; "Women, why weepest thou?" A fine programme of music was well carrred out. In the evening there was an interesting Easter concert with appropriate selections by the little ones and recitations by the older ones. The pastor made some pleasing remarks.

About the average number of worshipers assembled at the morning service in School House Hall on Easter Sunday. Willing hands had brought an offering of flowers with which the pulpit was tastefully decorated. The pastor presented the same theme here as at South Peabody. The Sabbath School had an Easter service in the evening which was both interesting and instructive.

Carpets and Upholstery are now prime factors in the business of every large community. They represent the artistic comforts of the modern home Who ever expects to maintain a successful business in these departments must become a student of the higher thought of humanity. Messrs. Almy, Bigelow & Washburn represent in their combined establishment the result of twenty seven years of experience in our midst. In nothing have they more closely applied study and labor than in their carpet and upholstery business. We advise our readers to visit the firm during the present sale, to examine the beautiful goods and notice the remarkably low prices.—Salem Register.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

The Lyceum and Library Committee of the Peabody Institute organized last Monday night as follows: Lyceum and Library Committee, G. Fred Osgood, Chairman; Arthur W. Littlefield, Secretary; F. C. Merrill, Treasurer. Peabody Library Committee, S. S. Littlefield, Chairman; Arthur W. Littlefield, Secretary; G. H. Poor, G. M. Foster, D. P. Grosvenor, E. T. McCarthy, F. C. Merrill, Wm. J. McCarthy. Eben Dale Sutton Reference Library, G. F. Osgood, Chairman; Lyman P. Osborne, Secretary; Wm. J. McCarthy, F. C. Merrill, A. W. Littlefield, Chas. Bushby. Lecture Committee, G. M. Foster, Chairman; G. Fred Osgood, D. P. Grosvenor, Lyman P. Osborne, T. H. McGrath. Finance Committee, F. C. Merrill, F. Fred Osgood and S. S. Littlefield.

Last Monday evening the Methodist Sunday School held their annual meeting and elected the following officers: Superintendent, H. W. Gilman; Assistant Superintendent, Walter McMath; Librarian, Thomas G. Smith; Concert Committee, H. W. Gilman, Mrs. I. P. Knowlton, Mary Goldthwaite, Hattie Perkins, Lottie Sim. Committee on Decorations, Alfred Baker, Walter McMath, Mrs. Ella Gibson, Grace Jenkins, Ella McMath. There are 194 scholars and 24 teachers and officers in the school, making a total of 218, a gain of 18 over last year. The Treasurer reports that the sum of $209 was received during the year, and all bills paid, leaving a balance of $27. The Librarian reports 415 volumes in the library.

There was a large audience present at the Institute Fast night to listen to the entertainment given by the Merritt Concert Company, under the auspices of Union Post 50, G. A. R. The concert consisted of songs, duets, piano selections, etc., and to some of the audience was quite pleasing, and encores were asked for. But as a whole the entertainment was not up to the standard of those previously given by the Post. However, you can't have the best always, and those who have attended the previous entertainments have been well repaid.

At the meeting of the Trustees of the Peabody Institute last Monday evening, it was voted to give the Lyceum and Library Committee $800 from the income of the reserve fund, in addition to the regular appropriations. This gives the Committee after paying the salary of the librarian and assistants $3100, in place of $1900, last year. The income of the regular fund shows an increase from last year, which together with the extra $800 gives the Committee an opportunity to make further additions to the Library which are much needed at the present time.

At last the army is moving—not the soldiers, but the bug that lays the eggs, that hatch the canker worms that destroyed the foliage on our trees last year. A gentleman has tried some experiments in trying to catch the insect that lays the eggs, but with little success until the night of April 1st, when they came out of the ground by the thousand, and commenced to climb the trees until they came to the printer's ink that he has applied to the trunks, when they piled up on one another and could not go any farther. They are about the size of the potato slug, of a dark brown color.

The Selectmen made the following appointments at their meeting last Saturday. Chief police and keeper of the lockup, Thomas W. Peasley. Day police, B. F. Goodwin and Timothy D. Crowley. Night police, Thomas N. Barnaby, Geo. W. Jones, John J. Sweeney and Michael Grady. Sunday and evening police, John McKean, A. E. Johnson, Jerry B. Mack. Town hall police, N. C. Patterson, A. E. Johnson, Othernial Ferrin. Geo. C. Farrington was appointed head usher at the town hall.

A correspondent from Essex traces the pedigree of the late Eli Burnham of this town as follows:—He was the son of Moses Burnham, who was the son of Aaron, who was the son of Jeremiah, who was the son of Thomas, who was the son of John, who was the son of Thomas, one of the first settlers of Chebacco. Mr. Burnham was extensively engaged in ship building in this town fifty years ago, and was a member of the Board of Selectmen in 1834.

The Danvers bleachery makes the following returns to the Commonwealth:—Certificate filed March 26; treasurer, W. Walker; fixed capital, $200,000; capital paid in, $200,000. Assetts:—Real estate, $65,000; machinery, $135,000; cash and debts receivable, $63,400; manufactures, $15,500; total; $279,000. Liabilities:—Capital stock, $200,000; profit and loss, $64,000; reserve for depreciation, $15,000; total, $279,000.

Mr. C. F. Hathaway, our enterprising baker, will shortly retire the old baker teams used on the different routes in town and in their place will put on six new wagons made in the latest style and with all modern conveniences. Two of them are being made at Pike & Whipple's and the others in Lynn. In connection with this bakery, Mr. Hathaway is doing a large and successful business at Cambridge.

The police report for last month is as follows: 28 arrests, of which 9 were for drunkenness; assault, 6; breaking and entering, 3; maintaining liquor nuisance, 2; assault with dangerous weapon, 2; larceny, 2; vagrancy, 1; obstructing sidewalks, 1; collecting junk without license, 1; keeping liquor with intent to sell, 1. Number of lodgers, 110.

Last Monday afternoon, a pair of horses attached to an open buggy, driven by a Mr. Harrington, of Salem, came down Foster street at a tearing pace, and it was plainly seen that the driver had no control of them. The team passed through the Square, just missing striking a horse car, and went up Central street, when the driver got them under his charge again.

Our readers must not forget that Margaret Mather will appear in the Town Hall, here, Thursday evening, April 23d, and it will be the event of the season, as it was last year. She will play the Lady of Lyons, one of the most satisfactory plays in Miss Mather's repertoire. Next week we shall announce definitely the sale of seats.

Monday's Evening Record contained another expose of the Boston gambling saloons. It is the liveliest one cent daily published. D. J. Sweeney has it every night, where he will be pleased to take your orders. And when you want any thing in the line of cigars or tobacco, give him a call and you will be pleased with his goods.

The Brockton Gazette in speaking of its local lawyers, says of a former Peabody boy who is located there: "William W. Wilkins is a college graduate, one of the best educated of our lawyers and possessing a fine legal mind. He and his brother Frank came here together and built up an excellent practice mostly in civil cases."

We extend congratulations to Miss M. Lizzie Shepard of the Danvers Mirror, who was united in marriage to Joseph S. Temple, of Reading, last Thursday, the Rev. Geo. J. Sanger officiating. May her married life be as brilliant and successful and give as much pleasure as those spent on the Mirror, is the wish of the PRESS.

Last Wednesday evening the members of the St. John's C. T. A. Society presented Michael Phalen, one of the newly elected constables, with a silver badge. The badge contained the inscription: "Presented to Michael Phalen, by the members of the St. John's C. T. A. Society of Peabody, April 1, 1885."

The A. H. B. Association held their 12th annual dance Monday evening in Upton's Hall. It was a grand success in every way, there being over 100 couples present, all enjoying themselves to their utmost. Music was furnished by the Salem Band Orchestra under the leadership of R. L. Reinewald.

Chapter thirty, section three of the Public Statutes will be amended by the Legislature so that State Aid may be paid to the widow of any soldier, sailor or marine who was married to said soldier, sailor or marine before the ninth day of April, 1870—about five years after the close of the war.

It looks as if we were going to have a truant school after all; Commisssioner Colby in his paper says Essex County will probably establish such an institution. The only thing which has so far prevented them has been the large expenditures on public buildings.

The Second Corps of Cadets at their annual meeting, elected Lieutenant Charles W. Osgood, treasurer, in place of Captain Hines, resigned. The corps is now out of debt and has $20 in the treasury. Last year at the same date the corps was $300 in debt.

Have you a cold? Yes, of course. Every self respecting person in this vicinity is possessed of one of these fashionable appendages, while some of our citizens are running up a fearful and wonderful laundry bill for pocket handkerchiefs.

The Danvers Mirror says: "Work will be commenced on the street railway to Peabody, before long." Hope you know it to be a fact, Bro. Shepard, we had begun to feel, this way, that there wasn't much prospect of it this year.

While Mr. J. M. Ward, the florist, was at work about one of his greenhouses last Wednesday, he was stung on the hand by a bee. His hand shortly after became badly swollen and was quite painful for several days.

The fifty-sixth annual meeting of the Essex County Teachers' Association was held at Marblehead last Friday. The exercises began at ten o'clock. At the business session officers were elected as follows: President, L. P. Brickett, of Lynn; vice president, Frank W. Anthony, of Bradford; secretary, A. P. Doe, of Lawrence; Treasurer, N. A. Moulton, of Newburyport; councillors, E. C. Adams, of Beverly, Miss A. R. Thaxter, of Salem and I. N. Carleton of Bradford. G. A. Walton, agent of the state board, read a paper on "School Examinations in Essex County; Their Great Lesson." He emphasized the need of more efficient superintendents and sharply criticised those cities and towns that have gone back to the old system. The next paper was on "Methods Found Advantageous in Teaching," and was read by Miss E. J. Smith of Newburyport. Charles F. King of the Lewis school, Boston, gave a talk on "Fingers and Eyes." He strongly urged the employment of the kindergarten method to a greater extent. A collation was served at noon, and the afternoon session opened at two o'clock. A resolution was adopted requesting the General Court to pass a law that all cities and towns of over 5000 population should have free evening schools and that all incorporated cities be compelled to establish evening high schools. Miss Emily G. Wetherbee of the Lawrence High School read a paper on "The Study of English Literature." Misses Lola A. Manner and Mary R. Stanton, of Lynn, read papers on "Methods of Primary Work." A. E. Wells, principal of the Bowditch School, Peabody, read a paper on "Upon What Does the Success of a Teacher Depend." The session was a most interesting and profitable one.

A boarding house beat, giving his name as Charles Atwood, engaged board at Mrs. Joseph Goldthwait's, on Washington street, on Monday of last week, claiming that he was going to work for J. B. Thomas. Last Saturday noon the fellow entered the room of another boarder, named John McDonald, and stole his pocketbook, which contained $3, and an overcoat, silk handkerchief, underwear, etc., to the amount of $25, and has not been seen since.

FROM REV. E. W. WHITNEY,

Formerly Pastor of the Universalist Church, Peabody, Mass.

For several years I have been troubled with Catarrh, which seriously interfered with my public speaking, and which baffled all my attempts to get permanent relief. Experienced surgeons operated upon me, and I was under the care of a Boston physician for two years, but obtained no lasting benefit. I applied various medicines, but failed to get relief. I was lead, by the advice of friends, to consult Dr. Lighthill. My faith was at the lowest ebb, but I am happy to say that after a few months' treatment no trace of my old trouble appears, and I have every reason to believe that the cure is permanent. I cordially recommend Dr. Lighthill to all who may be afflicted in a similar manner.

E W. WHITNEY,

Peabody, Mass., June 27. 1879.

AN INTERESTING CASE.

A statement of Mr. Clement A. Thorndike, of the firm of L. A. May & Co., 127 Union street, Lynn, Mass.

To the Public:—Having been raised almost like one from the dead by the skillful treatment of Dr. Lighthill, and to benefit similar sufferers, I make this public statement of my case. For years I was troubled with Catarrh in my head, seriously affecting and almost destroying my nasal bone; the discharge was very profuse, requiring constant blowing and hawking for relief; gradually the irritation passed into my throat, producing hoarseness and a hacking cough, and finally it affected my bronchial tubes and lungs, leaving me a victim to consumption. The cough now became distressing and almost constant, and debilitating night sweats made their appearance. I lost flesh and became greatly emaciated. I consulted medical men and used various remedies, but all efforts for relief utterly failed. In that condition, and greatly disheartened and discouraged, I applied to Dr. Lighthill, whose able and thorough examination of my case proved to me that I was in the right hands. Convinced that he fully understood my condition, and, inspired with new hope, I placed myself under his care, and very soon experienced the benefit of his treatment. One after another of the symptoms of Catarrh left me. I gained in strength and weight, my cough and night sweats disappeared, and now I am only too thankful and delighted to be able to call myself well again. Hoping that this statement may give new courage and confidence to such as may suffer as I have,

I remain, respectfully,

CLEMENT A. THORNDIKE.

Lynn, June 18, 1881

CATARRH CURED.

FROM REV. E. C. BUTLER,

Beverly, Mass.

I most heartily recommend any one afflicted with that troublesome disease, Catarrh, to Dr. Lighthill. I have full confidence in him. His treatment has had the most gratifying results in my own case, which was severe and of long standing.

E. C. BUTLER,

Beverly, Mass., Oct. 29, 1879.

CURE OF DEAFNESS.

FROM RT. REV. T. F. HENDRIKEN,

Bishop of Providence. R. I.

My Dear Dr. Lighthill: Permit me to thank you most heartily for your kindness to the Sisters of our Convent. I had no idea when I consulted you on Sister Demonica's deafness that you could so quickly restore her back to hearing, but she tells me that she hears now better than she did before. For this, and your kind and successful treatment of my own deafness, I thank you. Now I would be glad to have you refer your patients to me. You know I can recommend you as a physician and surgeon, thoroughly accomplished in those departments of medicine in which you practice. I owe you a debt of gratitude, and would be glad to pay it.

Very truly and sincerely yours

Rt. Rev. T. F. HENDRIKEN.

A complete and permanent cure of

ASTHMA.

REPORT FROM MR. C. F. BOYNTON, 31 MILK STREET, BOSTON, ROOM 35.

TO THE PUBLIC.

After having spent large sums of money, and found no relief, I was induced to apply to Dr. Lighthill, at 115 Boylston street, for treatment. having suffered from asthma in the worst form for six years, and I wish to say, for the benefit of others suffering as I did that DR. LIGHTHILL'S TREATMENT HAS MADE ME A WELL MAN, and I now can enjoy life, when before it was a dread to me. This cure was performed on me over a year ago, and I can confidently pronounce it a permanent one. I hope all afflicted with that dreadful disease will avail themselves of Dr. Lighthill's skilful services, for I feel morally sure he can cure them.

Livermore, Harriet Beecher Stowe, Louise Chandler Moulton, Mary Clemmer, Lucy Larcom*, and 11 other well known authors. These TWENTY distinguished writers here give for the first time, the complete history of the Lives and Deeds of 80 famous American women, most of whom are now living, whose lives have never before been written, and they tell how they have won their way from obscurity to fame and glory. For Thrilling Interest, Romantic Story, Spicy Humor, and Tender Pathos, this grand book is without a peer. The Christain Advocate says: "This splendid book certainly is one of the very best and choicest subscription-books we have ever seen." It is splendidly illustrated with full-page engravings, besides many superb portraits from special photographs.

AGENTS WANTED!

AGENTS! This grand book is now out-selling all others 10 to 1. Ministers, Editors, Critics, etc., unqualifiedly endorse it and wish it Godspeed. We have many lady agents who have sold over 200 in their respective townships. We want a few good agents—men or women—in this vicinity at once. We give Extra Terms, and pay freight. Now is the time to make money. ☞ Our Circulars, giving Special Terms, Extracts, etc., sent free. Correspondence invited. Address A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse."
CHAS. MASON, Commissioner of Patents.

"Inventors cannot employ a person more trustworthy or more capable of securing for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office."
EDMUND BURKE, late Com. of Patents.

BOSTON, Oct. 19, 1870.

R. H. EDDY, Esq.—Dear Sir: you procured for me, in 1870, my first patent. Since then you have acted for and advised me in hundreds of cases, and procured many patents, re-issues and extensions. I have occasionally employed the best agencies in New York, Philadelphia and Washington, but I still give you almost the whole of my business, in your line, and advise others to employ you.

Yours truly, GEORGE DRAPER.

ONE MILLION Copies will soon be sold Twenty Years of Congress—By James G. Blaine. The only history of our government from 1861 to 1881. Hon. John S. Wise, M. A Woman's Thoughts.

"I am so weary of my home!" she cries,
"And of its endless task so mean and small;
I love to mingle with the world outside,
To drink from life's full cup; the drops that fall,
From beakers others clasp though gladly quaffed,
Shake not my thirst, my hand must hold the draught."

She feels a little hand slip into hers,
And little fingers clinging to her gown,
And in her heart a tender memory stirs
Of violet lids by early death shut down,
And as she lifts the little hinderer up,
"I drink" she cries, "at least from love's full cup."

"Forgive, dear Lord, forgive the foolish speech,
For love is all; without it life is naught
Let me but have the blessing in my reach,
And I will never more complain of aught;
Life's cue may hold for woman what it will,
Without love's wine she will be thirsty still.

SOMETHING FOR THE BABY:—What a terrible affliction about the house is a cross crying baby! A young man on the very edge of matrimony might easily be frightened from his purposes by having too much of that sort of music at the homes of his married friends. Yet babies cry commonly only when they are sick. One teaspoonful of Parker's Tonic, given the little one will bring rest and sleep to the baby and all in the house. Only 50 cents at druggists.

The Point of Pines Co. will not lease their hotels, "The Pines and The Goodwood," this season, but will manage them themselves. Mr. Charles H. Thayer, general manager for the company, will have the assistance of I. N. Andrews of the Coolidge House, as superintendent of the houses, with Nelson M. Merrick as assistant superintendent and Fred W. Vroom as head clerk. Everything about the house will be conducted in the best of shape, which will be on both American and European plans, with special arrangements for permanent guests. Gentlemen and families who wish to be near Boston and yet enjoy a perfect change, with cool salt breezes, bathing, and all the pleasures of a beach resort, with all the luxuries of a first class hotel, will find both at The Pines.

The steamers of the Portland line will now leave India wharf at seven o'clock instead of five. The popular "day excursions" via this line will commence on Monday, June 22, leaving Boston at 8 A. M., and Portland at 9 A. M. This trip was very popular last season, and doubtless will be this, as there is no pleasanter way to spend a couple of days.

Advancing spring warns us to be prepared for warmer weather. Strengthen the system, purify the blood, by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

THE LADIES WILL PLEASE SKIN THIS.—Ladies, skip this paragraph. It got into my letters by mistake, and I ask the printer to destroy it or set it wrong side up:

If there's anything worries a woman,
It's something she oughtn't to know;
But you bet she'll find it out anyhow,
If she gets the least kind of a show.
Now we'll wager ten cents to a farthing
This poem she has already read
We knew she'd get at it somehow,
If she had to stand on her head.

THE BEAUTY OF YOUTH:—No matter how handsome or stalwart a young man may be otherwise, nothing can make up for a partially bald head. Shining talents are attrcative but a shining poll is not. The cause may be sickness or anything else, yet Parker's Hair Balsam will stop the loss of the hair and start a new growth of glossy soft hair so quickly as to surprise you—restoring the original color at the same time. Not a dye, not oily, delicately perfumed. Only standard 50 cent dressing.

An exchange says that "to test the purity of water there has been found no better or simpler way than to fill a clean pint bottle three-fourths full of the water to be tested, and dissolve in the water half a teaspoonful of the purest sugar—loaf or granulated will answer—cork the bottle, and place it in a warm place for two days. If in twenty-four to forty-eight hours the water becomes cloudy or milky, it is unfit for domestic use."

The liquor dealers are getting very sly as well as shy.

MAYO'S

Compound Vegetable Anæsthetic.

A safe and pleasant substitute for gas and ether.

Discovered by Dr. N. K. Mayo of Boston, April 1883, subsequently administered by him in nearly two thousand cases, producing perfect slumber, being applicable to the child, the delicate sentitive woman as well as the hardy man. No ill effects have followed its use in any case, it acting rather as a vegetable tonic.

It controls the patient one-fourth longer than gas giving us time to remove from three to twenty teeth. It is with great confidence we have introduced it into our practice, giving very successful results.

RUNNING A LOCOMOTIVE WHILE DEATHLY SICK—SOMETHING THE PASSENGERS DID NOT KNOW A PHYSICIAN SAVES AN ENGINEER.

Taunton, Mass.

DR. DAVID KENNEDY, Rondout, N. Y.

Dear Sir.—I am an engineer on the Old Colony Railroad, and run the Fall River boat train between Fall River and Lowell, residing in Taunton. For ten years I suffered everything but death from dyspepsia. Often I had such blinding sick headaches that I could scarcely see. I think this was due partly to irregular habits of eating, and partly to the jar of the engine. Sometimes my head would snap like neuralgia, and again the pain would settle in my eyes, which would feel as big as a man's fist. My breath was very offensive, and my food soured as it entered my stomach. In fact my stomach felt as though it were a great raw and sore surface, and what agony it gave perhaps you can imagine.

In the summer and fall of 1876 when we had the heavy centennial travel, the constant jar brought on acute attacks nearly every week and I thought I should have to leave the road. But I kept at work until the next spring, when I grew so much worse that I could virtually eat nothing, and concluded that my labor, and my life too, were about over.

Remember that I had tried every medicine I heard of, and had been treated by some of the best physicians in Taunton and Lowell. At this critical time DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY was recommended to me. It was new to me, and with my experience of medicines. you can easily forgive me for saying that I had not a particle of faith in it.

I had taken it but a few days when I began to get better. The raw and sore feeling left my stomach, and the snapping pains left my head, and soon I was all right, and have been ever since. It is the only thing that ever did me the least good, and it drove every ache, pain and discomfort completely out of my body. Now I keep KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY with me on my engine, and it goes wherever I go.

Why, I believe FAVORITE REMEDY will cure anything. One night, a while ago, John Layton, an engineer who runs the main line boat train from Boston, came on my engine sick as death. He was worn out with work, had a high fever, and was so nervous he almost broke down crying. "Nonsense, John," I said, "cheer up, I've got something on my engine that will set you up in a jiffy." I took out my bottle of FAVORITE REMEDY, lifted his head and gave him a good dose. He went to bed. Two days after I saw him looking healthy as a butcher. "Dan," he said, "what was that stuff you gave me the other night?" " It was DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, Rondout, N. Y." said I. "Well, I don't care whose Remedy it is, it's the thing for a man on the railroad." So say we all.

Yours, etc., DANIEL FITTS.

This preparation goes to the root of disease by purifying the blood and rousing every organ into healthy action. It is useful at home, shops, in office—everywhere.

MALARIA.

As an anti-malarial medicine

DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S

FAVORITE REMEDY

has won golden opinions. No traveler should consider his outfit complete unless it includes a bottle of this medicine. If you are exposed to frequent changes of climate, food and water, Favorite Remedy should always be within your reach. It expels malarial poisons, and is the best preventative of chills and malarial fever in the world. It is especially offered as a trustworthy specific for the cure of Kidney and Liver complaints, Constipation and all disorders arising from an impure state of the blood. To women who suffer from any of the ills peculiar to their sex Favorite Remedy is constantly proving itself an unfailing friend—a real blessing. Address the proprietor, Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y. $1 bottle, 6 for $5. by all druggists.

The Country Paper.

The country newspaper should be a clean paper. It should be free from the sensational matter that fills largely the space of the mammoth dailies and caters to a vicious appetite and tends strongly to weaken the normal sense and increase rather than lessen the evils of the times. Parents certainly have reason in these days of glaring exposure of all the private scandals of society through newspapers to exercise very careful judgment in the selection of newspapers and books.' Young minds are being too much familiarized with the bad side of life. We believe that many a man conceives the idea of committing suicide from reading frequent accounts of this practice. As Pope has it:

> "Vice is a monster of so frightful mien,
> As, to be hated, needs but to be seen;
> Yet seen to oft, familiar with her face,
> We first endure, then pity, then embrace."

It is to be deplored that many country newspapers are inclined to ape the city papers in inserting matters of gossip, scandal and misfortunes that find currency enough, aye, too much, without the aid of the home newspaper from, which, we think, they should be seduously excluded. The home paper should be filled with something that is instructing and elevating, something stimulating to mental and moral growth, something showing noble thought and acts, the better side of humanity, not the worst. Who that has a boy or girl entering upon the stage of mental and moral responsibility desires him or her to become speedily acquainted with the facts and acts of the world at large in its devious paths of wickedness? There is an ideality of integrity, womanliness and manliness that the parent should have his children to hold before them and keep steadfast in the faith and useful and honorable life here and a glorious immortality beyond. The beautiful flowers of truth, charity, honor should charm their fancies so that they may not see or notice or think about the noxious weeds that grow in the nooks and cornerss They should be made familiar with the examples of the martyrs of truth rather than the monsters of crime. They should be led up the mountains of knowledge rising into purer air and feeling stronger while they gaze upward steadily rather than as breasts of the field downward habitually.—Exchange.

LOTS OF FUN FOR THE BALD-HEADED MAN.—'Ain't you awful glad that you are bald, papa?' said the little girl.

'No, I can't say I am.'

'Well I should think you would be, for you can always have all the fun you want.'

'I would like to know how that is?' asked papa.

Neither horse nor girl was skittish. He—'Won't you go to sleighride with me this evening?' She—'Have you a gentle horse?' He—'Yes, indeed. I can drive him with one hand.' She—'I'll go.'

NOT THE SAME OLD STORY BY A LARGE MAJORITY. — Said the fat street-car passenger: I knew a conductor on this very line who worked industriously at his post for ten years. His honest ways attracted attention, he was promoted, and now, gentlemen, he is one of the most trusted clerks in the company's employ. You needn't tell me that honesty doesn't have its own reward.

Very true, very true, responded the slim passenger. I happened to know a shrewd fellow on this line several years ago who let no chance slip to put every car-fare he could into his own pocket. He kept up his stealing for two years, and then stopped. Poor fellow—

The same old story, interposed the fat passenger, the same old story. Kicked off; now out of work and loafing; on the edge of a drunkard's grave.

Oh, no; not by a large majority. He's now one of the biggest stockholders.—Buffalo Times.

CNSIDERABLE TIMBER IN HER VOICE BUT TOO MANY CRACKS FOR WEATHER-BOARDING.—A lady was singing at a concert, and her voice was, to say the least, very thin in places.

'Ah,' said the husband, who after the manner of husbands who have musical wives, thought her vocal powers were great, 'what a fine voice she has!'

'Very fine,' exclaimed a strange man at his side.

'What timbre!' continued the husband.

'Considerable timber,' responded the stranger again, 'but too many cracks in it for weather-boarding, and not quite enough for a paling fence.'—Merchant Traveller.

A DECIDEDLY BAD COMBINATION. —'There,' exclaimed Mrs. Talkamuch, 'that's the kind of brutes you men are,' and she read an account of a wife-murder by a Georgia barber recently.

'You say he was a barber, my dear?'

'Yes, he was, and—'

'Oh, well, it's all for the best. A barber and a woman can't live happily together, anyway.'

'I'd like to know why not. I can't see—'

'Too much competition, my dear. Neither of them could get a word in edgewise.'—Atlanta Constitutism.

AN EVENING'S PLEASURE SPOILED. —'My dear,' whispered a man to his wife as they seated themselves in a theatre, 'I left my pocketbook at home.'

'Haven't you any money at all?'

'Only 40 cents.'

'Won't that be enough?'

'Enough!' he repeated impatiently. 'It's a five-act play.'

The joint legislative committee on education are considering the question of passing a bill giving school boards the right to contract with teachers for a longer term than one year. There is a point beyond endurance to which the legislature is driving the towns very rapidly. This is one.—Amesbury News.

'You don't have to comb your hair, nor have it cut, and when you go to the theatre they always give you the best seat where the music is and you have lots of fun don't you, papa?'

'Mamma,' said the bald-headed pirate, 'our little girl is awful sleepy.—Paris Beacon.

SOUTH PEABODY.

The bright skies, warm sunshine, clear air and good walking, combined to make especially attractive for this locality, Easter Sabbath, the most joyful day of the Christian Calendar. A fair-sized congregation gathered at the Church, at the usual hour of worship. There was an elaborate and very beautiful display of potted plants, from the greenhouse of Mr. O. F. Newhall, tastefully arranged by Messrs. J. N. Newhall and Clarence Goodrich. In front and on either side of the pulpit, richly variegated foliage plants and bright geraniums were banked, producing a fine effect. The pulpit was trimmed with English ivy and from its top depended graceful hanging plants, a row of Easter lilies being arranged about the cushion. A flower stand at the right bore a basket of rose buds, pinks and heliotrope. The Pastor preached from the text taken from I Peter 2, a part of the 9th verse: "Out of darkness into his marvellous light;" the theme of the discourse being, Life and Light in and through Christ. Christ raises man from physical and spiritual death. There is a spiritual as well as a bodily resurrection. "He that believeth on him that sent me hath everlasting life," said our Saviour. That he here refers to the spiritual resurrection, or conversion of the heart, is evident from what he immediately adds: "Marvel not at this," the conversion just alluded to—"for the hour is coming in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his will, and shall come forth." The words of the Apostle Peter from which the text is taken were addressed to those who had passed from spiritual death to spiritual life. "You hath he quickened (or made alive) who were dead in trespasses and sins," the Apostle Paul wrote to the Christians at Ephesus. Darkness is the emblem of sin, and sorrow, ignorance and death. Light is the symbol of life, wisdom and holiness. We pass from darkness into God's marvellous light, when we forsake sin and choose holiness; and we come out into the full light when we enter upon the glory of the life beyond the grave. "The Lord is Risen indeed" out of the darkness of the sepulchre of Arimathaea, into the marvellous light of the world of glory. But while we rejoice in this fact, let us remember that for no one, in the true sense, has Christ risen, who has not himself risen in some measure with Christ, out of his sin into the life of penitence and obedience to the Saviour—out of nature's darkness into God's marvellous light.

In the evening the Sunday School had a very interesting Easter Concert exercise, the service being in the upper part of the house.

It is hoped by the parents of the children that attend the school in this place, that Miss Smiley will be reinstated to her position as assistant to Miss Emery. Miss Emery has got the school under good discipline, and as she has had a very flattering offer from another place we hope the committee will retain the services of Miss Emery and Miss Smiley.

SKATING RINK NOTES.

On Monday evening last the Peabodys met the Bay States for the last time in a league game. The game was called at 9 o'clock by referee O'Malley. The first rush was taken by Keene of the Bay States and at once the visitors settled down to business and after a play of 1m. and 55s. Foye secured the goal. The second rush was taken by Keene and the ball was driven into the Peabody's goal but struck the netting and rebounded to the floor. The Bay States claimed the goal, but as the ball did not remain in the cage it could not be given to them. Waterhouse secured this goal in 4m. and 45s. Felton secured the third rush and after a play of 2m. Waterhouse secured the goal. The fourth rush was taken by Felton, and during this goal Murray and Sullivan did some fine work, but Woods of the Bay States secured this goal in 2m. and 50 s., making two goals each. At this stage of the game excitement ran high and the Peabodys were heartily cheered. The fifth rush was taken by Felton, but the Bay States soon secured the ball and commenced to work it around the home club's goal, but by the fine playing of Morrill it was prevented from going in. Murray now secured the ball and brought it dangerously near the visitors' goal, but was prevented from putting it in by Riley who drove it away. Now it was time for Billy Felton to get in some of his fine work. He secured the ball from the side of the rink and ran it the entire length, putting it in the visitors goal, and winning the game. The time of this goal was 4m. and 45s. After leaving the floor the Bay States began to "kick" and claimed that the Peabodys rollers were doctored, but there did not seem to be any reason for the charge. The Bay States came over by horse cars.

On Thursday evening the Gloucesters play their last league game here.

The well known Somerville polo team was at the rink last Wednesday night and played a game with the Peabodys. There was only a small audience present as their visit was not generally known. The Peabodys won in three straight goals, Charles H. Simonds of Salem referee. The time was 14 m., 11m., and 2m., respectively.

The first hat, cap and necktie party was held at the rink last Thursday evening and there was about sixty on the floor and a small audience was present. Continuous music was furnished by the Salem Brass Band. George M. Foster, Wm. F. Sawyer and Walter Pray were the judges; and prizes, which were for the three ladies having the handsomest cap and bow, and to the gentlemen having largest necktie, and largest cap and hat, were awarded as follows: First prize a pair of clamp skates, Miss Emma Saul; second, order for a dozen card photographs, Mrs. S. G. Southwick; third, twelve admission tickets to the rink, Miss Nellie Gibbons. For gentlemen, for largest hat, meerschaum pipe, F. E. Allard, of Salem; for largest necktie, order for spring hat, Geo. Boynton; largest cap, twelve admission tickets, Geo. Boynton.

Some of the ministers think roller skating has a tendency to promote backsliding.

The third game in the series between the Peabodys and Bay States was played in the Chelsea rink last Thursday evening, and resulted in three straight to the Bay States. Time 2m. 45s., 3m. 25s., 1m. 30s. Chas. O'Malley was referee.

There was a game of polo at the rink Fast morning between the Active and Enterprise teams of Salem, which was won by the Enterprise 3 to 1. They were little fellows and didn't seem to mind hitting each other's shins.

The Marblehead Light Infantry and Salem Mechanic Light Infantry had a contest at polo at the Salem rink recently and was won by the Salem boys. They have each won a game, and the third will be played at the Peabody rink.

The stage at the Siege of Paris building is to be removed by Manager McCully and thus the skating surface at the Willows Rink will be considerably enlarged and made into a complete circle.

The Salems have our hearty congratulations. They have well won the title "champions," and we think when we say that they are the best club in the league we do the others no injustice.—Rink.

The Salems, Somervilles, Tauntons and Cambridges of the New England Polo League; Gloucesters, Bay States and Peabodys of the Massachusetts league, and the old Paris team have announced their intention of competing in the Soldiers' Home carnival polo tournament. These teams are the strongest, not only in the state, but in the country, and the question of superiority is a mooted one, which will be decided in the approaching contest.

The Bay State team will not make their head-quarters at the Prospect Skating Academy, Cambrideport, at the close of the league season as reported, but remain at the Bay State Rink.

Last Saturday at the rink, two teams one from Dugans and the other from Treadwell's currying shop, played a polo game for a purse of $25, which was won by Dugan's team 3 goals to one. Charles Phelan referee.

An amateur game of polo was played at the Rink last night between A. B. Clark's and the Bleachery teams. The latter won by a score of 3 to 0.

"The Bay States have protested the Peabody game of Monday, on the ground that the Peabodys' skates were doctored, and permission to examine them was refused. The matter will be settled at the league meeting Thursday." We trust the charge will not prove true. To win a game by such means is contemptible, and the club caught doing it should not only forfeit the game, but be expelled from the league.

Sucked in on Oranges.

When I threw up the curtain my first morning in Jacksonville, and looked out in the park in front of the hotel and saw green trees of all kinds, orange trees filled with ripe yellow fruit, shade trees outside the walk with oranges on, and ladies with parasols, I began to look around for the South Pole. It was an enchanting sight to a man right fresh from a sleigh ride in Milwaukee, and I got out into a couple of pants pretty quick and went out to wallow in all this verdure. I wanted to roll in the grass. I went down stairs without waiting for any elevator, rushed through the office, forgetting all about breakfast, and began to walk about the park and the town. The oranges didn't look right to me. I couldn't see how they could grow there in the streets right within reach of every little nigger coon in town, without being stolen. In the North, the sourest crabapple that ever broke a man's jaw or puckered up a pretty mouth would not be safe a moment as exposed as those oranges were, and I could not believe that boys in the South were more honest than boys in the North. Then I got to thinking, and made up my mind that the oranges were tied on the trees with pieces of wire, and were intended to deceive Northern people. I thought it was a mean deception, and I made up my mind to expose it to the world. I asked a colored man if there was any objection to a man picking an orange and he said he, reckoned not. So I reached up and got hold of one and picked it. I looked for the wire string, but it was an actually growing orange, and I had more faith in Florida than ever. I shall always believe that the colored man smiled when he saw me take out my knife and cut a piece out of that orange. Any way, he turned his back when I started the piece of orange towards my mouth. Many of my readers will remember my mouth as it was when I lived at the North. It was a pretty decent sort of a mouth to stub around home with. A plain, every-day sort of a hole, with teeth and tongue and lips, when I took that piece of orange in. Ye Gods! The orange was as much sourer than vinegar as vinegar is sourer than honey. And bitter! Aloes and rhubarb and quinine combined would be molasses beside that orange. My lips began to curl up and, draw around under my left ear my teeth became loose and rattled around like dice in a dice box, and my tongue clove to the roof of my mouth. One eye opened so wide that the eyeball looked like the face of a six shilling bull's-eye watch, and the other closed spasmodically and winked so, a colored nurse girl who thought I was winking at her got up off a bench and hauled the baby wagon away, and the baby cried as though a pin was sticking in it, on account of the expression on my face. I reached around to my pistol pocket for a hankerchief to cover my face until I could unscrew my mouth and get it back in front of me, and the colored man thought I was going to draw a pistol and started off on a run. Well, if I had a picture of my face when I took a mouthful of that orange, they could sell them by the thousands in dime museums as the wild man of Borneo. And that is the reason oranges are safe growing in the streets. They are too sour to eat and a boy will not steal anything he cannot eat—Peck's Sun.

The School Committee held a meeting last evening and appointed C. R. Bill instructor of music for the ensuing year, also Jas. H. Thomas as truant officer and to take the census of the school children. They also voted to purchase some hand grenades for the different school houses, and that the afternoon session of the schools should begin at 2 o'clock.

"WHICH WAY?"—That every article used for the same purpose is of equal value no one admits. As in all natural productions, so in the manufactured; all have their degree of merit, and Soap is as conspicuous in its variety as anything else. But in this, as the demand for the Pure and Reliable increases, so does the value of the productions of Curtis Davis & Co., especially their "Welcome" and "Unequalled Extra" brands, being practically recommended by other manufacturers, who imitate them in every conceivable way. But, while this compliment may be appreciated, what can be said in favor of such competition, or the character of such goods and their makers? No one should be deceived, as the original has the name of Curtis Davis, in full, either on the bar or wrapper, and it is their purpose to let their reputation stand on this class of goods.

Again the police have made a successful raid on the Washington House, kept by Mrs. Hayes. Last Friday evening the officers visited the place and after a careful investigation found a quantity of beer in an upper room; to one of the barrels was attached a rubber pipe fifteen feet long, which run down between the ceilings out to a sink in a store room, and a faucet was attached to the pipe, a panel having to be removed to allow its use. It was an ingenious arrangement and must have been planned by "Billy" before his pleasure trip.

It may not be hereditary, but it is a noticeable fact that when parents are given to reading, the children are almost sure to follow their example. There is a vast difference in families in this respect. In some houses one weekly paper is an abundance of reading matter for a whole family, while in others the amount spent for books and papers exceeds the taxes paid on the property they inhabit. It needs no argument or illustration to convince an unbiased mind which of the two families exert the greater influence for good in their neighborhood.

The new postal law provides that in places of over 4,000 inhabitants served by one office, may have a special delivery; that is, letters bearing a ten-cent stamp may be delivered by a special messenger from 7 A. M. to midnight, The recipient shall acknowledge receip in a pass book as with telegraph messages, and the postmaster may use four-fifths of the receipts to pay the messenger service. Here will be a chance for some live young man who will be appointed by the postmaster to make a fair living. He could well use a bicycle in such work.

A petition is in circulation in Georgetown for the removal of the present Postmaster and the appointment of another.—Haverhill Banner. We soon expect to hear of a similar petition in Haverhill where Bro. The changeable weather this winter has given many persons cold in the head. Cold of this kind may often be cured, at least in the incipient stage, by sniffing camphor. A lump of camphor-gum, or a little spirits of camphor, will serve the purpose. A small lump of the gum is easily carried about, and it should be sniffed with a long inhalation, s often as possible, for a day or two. The relief is speedy.

Telegraph companies print in small type on the back of their message a notice to the effect that they will not be responsible for mistakes in transmission unless the sender will pay for having the dispatch repeated. It has been decided that this notice is not sufficient. The attention of the sender must be particularly called to it in order to relieve the company of responsibility.

All the bridal couples that come to Boston upon their wedding trip stop at the Adams House now-a-days, where, curiously enough, the numbers of the bridal apartments are 6 and 7. "Rather early in the day for a newly wedded pair to be at sixes and sevens," observed a very witty lady who makes her home at the said house.

Poet's Corner.

The Closing Scene.

[Pronounced by the Westminster Review to be the finest American poem ever written]

Within this sober realm of leafless trees,
The russet year inhaled the dreamy air,
Like some tanned reaper in his hour of ease,
When all the leaves are lying bare;

The gray barns, looking from their hazy hills,
O'er the dim waters widening in the vales,
Sent down the air a greeting to the mills,
On the dull thunder of alternate flails;

All sights are mellowed, and all sounds subdued,
The hills seemed further, and the streams sunk low,
As in a dream the distant woodman hewed
His winter log, with many a muffled blow.

The embattled forests, erewhile armed with gold,
Their banners bright with every martial hue,
Now stood like some sad, beaten host of old,
Withdrawn afar in Time's remotest blue;

On slumberous wings the vulture tried his flight,
The dove scarce heard his singing mates complaint,
And, like a star slow drowning in the light,
The village church vane seemed to pale and faint;

Then sentinel cock upon the hillside crew—
Crew twice, and all was stiller than before—
Silent, till some replying warder blew
His alien horn, and then was heard no more.

Where erst the jay, within the elm's tall crest,
Made garrulous trouble round her unfledged young,
And where the oriole hung her swinging nest,
By every light wind like a censor swung;

Where sang the noisy masons of the eaves,
The busy swallows circling ever near—
Foreboding, as the rustic mind believes,
An early harvest and a plenteous year;

Where every bird which charmed the vernal feast,
Shook the sweet slumber from its wings at morn,
To warn the reapers or the rosy east;
All was now songless, empty, and forlorn.

Alone, from out the stubble, piped the quail,
And croaked the crow through all the dreary gloom;
Alone the pheasant, drumming in the vale,
Made echo to the distant cottage loom;

There was no bud, no bloom upon the bowers,
The spiders wove their thin shrouds night by night,
The thistle down, the only ghost of flowers,
Sailed slowly by—passed noiseless out of sight.

Amid all this, in this most cheerless air,
And where the woodbine shed upon the porch
Its crimson leaves, as if the year stood there
Firing the floor with his inverted torch;

Amid all this, the center of the scene,
The white-haired matron, with monotonous tread,
Plied the swift wheel, and with her joyless mein,
Sat like a fate, and watched the flying thread.

She had known Sorrow—he had walked with her,
Oft supped, and broke with her the ashen crust,
And in the dead leaves still she heard the stir
Of his black mantle trailing in the dust.

While yet her cheek was bright with summer bloom,
Her country summoned and she gave her all;
And twice war bowed to her his sable plume—
Re-gave the sword to rust upon her wall;

Re-gave the sword, but not the hand that drew
And struck for liberty the dying blow;
Nor him who, to his sire and country true,
Fell 'mid the ranks of the invading foe.

Long, but not loud, the droning wheel went on,
Like the low murmur of a hive at noon;
Long, but not loud, the memory of the gone
Breathed through her lips a sad and tremulous tone.

At last the thread was snapped—her head was bowed!
Life dropped the distaff through his hands serene;
And loving neighbors smoothed her careful shroud
While Death and Winter closed the autumn scene.

There is only one thing left to do, says an exchange, to render complete the craze in amusements, and that is progressive euchre on roller skates.

Selected Story.

A Heart Too Tender.

BY LILY CURRY.

‘ That or death!’

‘ You really love him, then?’ I said. I could not see her face, for she had turned from me, and the room was dusky with the lateness of the afternoon. I could tell, however, that she was twisting her hands together in a nervous way. She was a pretty little creature and I would have been glad to see her happily settled for life. I had tried always, in my own poor fashion, to be her friend—always since the first day I had seen her, seven years before. But she had always had trouble to bear, and why, I could not understand, knowing her life was blameless and of pure motive.

‘ You really love him,’ I repeated reflectively; for I knew her answer without listening to it. ‘ Remember,’ I continued, striving not to speak unkindly, ‘ remember your experience. Remember all you have passed through. At first your husband, whom you thought you loved, but whose ways—yet let that pass; he is dead and gone, heaven forgive him! After your husband's death came Ray. You would have crawled upon your knees in the streets for Ray, I believe; he seemed so mild and gentle. He bought you a cheap engagement ring. Next he absorbed all the little money you possessed; then he suddenly disappeared. It was cruel but you did not lose your mind. Fletcher followed; you would have married Fletcher, but that a previous wife or two turned up to brand him bigamist. Do you remember the night you walked the room with that agony? Still you survived. Grafton was a gambler, Carleton a drunkard. And yet you were fated to fix your affections on one, then on the other. It is your misfortune, not your fault, to have a heart too tender. It is your great misfortune, irremediable. I have tried to guard you—but somehow it has been of little use.’

She had not interrupted my slow speech; but now that it was ended, she answered with a sigh.

‘ Yes, you have a right to remind me. But I would rathet forget the past, its burdens and mistakes. For they were mistakes, and though I suffered so at the time, I even think I could forget them now. There is one thing I must tell you. Until I met Randall Fielding, I never knew the meaning of the word love. And if anything should happen to deprive me of his affection, I shall either die or go mad.’

‘ Tell me about it again,’ I said dispassionately, seeing that she spoke no idle threat. ‘ Tell me without reserve.’

‘ Yes,’ she gently acquiesced, ‘ I will tell you. I came to tell you directly I knew you had returned.’

A thrill of pity shot through my heart for the poor creature, still young and frail of body. I almost wished that I could change places with her for a time—that I could plant myself in her poor little parlor and color the photographs at which she earned her daily bread, while she should know my placid existence, my strong serenity, my never-ruffled streams of life. I tried to scan her features in the dimness of the room. Tried hard to see if the sensitive lips quivered, the deep gray eyes were tear-suffused.

‘You have been away a month,’ she began, ‘ and this has all happened in that space. Love comes so suddenly I never knew before. And strangely, too, love comes. It is learned in the twinkling of an eye. Oh, you do not know, you cannot comprehend.’

‘ No,’ I said fervently. ‘ I do not know. Thank God!’

Her voice grew tremulous.

‘ He loves me; we are to be married very soon. He is much older than I—he is more than forty. He first came to have some work done; a photograph of his daughter—’

‘ His daughter!’ I interrupted sharply. ‘ His daughter! He is a widower? You to be a stepmothe?’

‘ Listen,’ she answered patiently. ‘ A daughter, who died in infancy. Yes, he is a widower, but he has never loved but me. The woman he married was unworthy. She ran away from him. He is free now—and he loves me.’

‘ He never loved but you,’ I repeated. ‘ Then why the child? Still if the child be dead you run no risk. I don't know how you feel, but I would never marry a man who had had a child by another woman. But let it pass. I hope that he may make you happy. He is not poor.’

‘ No he is not poor; we can be very comfortable.’

‘ I am glad to hear it; I suppose I have only to wait for the marriage announcement. Randall Fielding and Adele Bentley. Is he handsome?’

She answered with a flash of spirit.

‘ He is handsome in my eyes. What others think I do not care. I have brought his picture for you. It does not flatter.’

I lighted the gas that she might show me the face of her lover. She unwrapped the photograph with tender pride, and gave it into my hands.

It was a pleasant face; I could not wholly blame her. A dark and pleasant face, with laughing eyes.

‘ I hope you may be very happy.’ That was all that I could say.

She took back the picture, pressed it to her lips and refolded it in its tissue paper covering.

When she had done this, she stood there in silence, as if she had fallen into some exquisite dream of recompense.

To the hour of my death I shall never forget how she looked standing there. The outlines of her body were long and graceful; the gaslight over her head made soft her features and cast deeper shadows around her eyes. A tremulous ecstatic smile hovered about her lips. Of a sudden she seemed to me most beautiful—with the beauty of fragility.

‘ Adele!’ I cried, ‘ do not stand; you're not strong. Sit down at once.

She came slowly out of her reverie.

‘ I must go now,’ she answered. ‘ You wish me well, I know.’

With an indefinable impulse I went close and took her hands. ‘ I wish you every joy. I hope you may be very happy!’

‘ Very happy!’ she echoed dreamily. ‘ Goodnight.’ And before I realized it, she had gone.

What are premonitions? Are they identical with misgivings, the unwelcome, uncanny offspring of experience and distrust?

A week later Adele said to me:

‘ I pray that I may never have a daughter. I would not chance her being cursed as I have been, by suffering. I would not feel the awful possibility that another woman might live to ask for bread and get stones to weep her heart away in tears of blood.’

‘But you are happy at last,’ I cried.

‘ Ah yes!’ She melted into a smiling mood. ‘ Perfectly happy.’

* * * * *

I saw Randall Fielding that evening for the first time. He came to take Adele home. He impressed me as a good-natured soul, and extremely fond of his betrothed. He did not, however, appear as one capable of intense feeling. It seemed even possible to me that he might be marrying Adele because she was pretty and dainty and loving, and because he wanted a home. For myself I have little faith in the love part of a man's second marriage. Perhaps I am too cynical.

A fortnight passed. And now I knew the day they should wed, very quietly—no guests invited—only myselt.

The afternoon previous—that last afternoon—Adele came to me for a last little visit.

I could not find any reason for the peculiar tenderness in my heart toward her that day Tenderness and pity mingled there until I could have wept without the slightest effort. I could not have felt more strangely had I known she would go to her death upon the morrow. Love or death, where lies the difference after all? And so a great yearning grew in my heart as we sat side by side in the firelight. And Adele's plaintive voice sounded piteous as a death song.

She went away at last alone. Fielding did not call for her. They had not so arranged it. I hated to have her go. It seemed to me we might not meet again. I held her hand close at parting.

‘ Tomorrow,’ she gave me a parting injunction, ‘ at two. Come earlier to help me dress.’

And still I detained her.

‘ You are very happy, Adele?’

‘ I am happy enough to die.’

‘ Goodbye, then, and may heaven bless you dear.’

I watched her disappear in the early darkness of the March evening; watched until I could no longer see anything. Then I went back to my firelight.

‘Happy enough to die!’ I said to myself. ‘Do happy people want to die? And all because she is about to fetter herself for life with what? Who is this man, this Randall Fielding, Adele, that you should make an idol of him? Is he so very noble, or great of mind or heart? To me a very ordinary being, not very tall and rather stout, looking as if his food were easily digested, his nights untroubled.

‘ What is any man, Adele? Animate clay! Would that you could see as I see, but for an instant, and walk forever after disenchanted.’

I had a dream that night. I am a strong believer in dreams. To me a dream of water or of a young child bodes trouble, distress.

I dreamed I saw Adele running with a young child in her arms, far off toward a tempestuous sea. The wind blew bitterly; the sky was purple with anger. I strove to overtake her, but she fled from sight, and I knew she had plunged into the sea.

I awakened sick at heart. Could there be new trouble in store for her? Oh, merciful God! I prayed, rather let her die!

Nevertheless, I set about preparing to attend her wedding.

* * * *

The clock had just ceased striking the hour of noon. I was brushing my hair before the mirror, when suddenly—suddenly my arm fell at my side, my heart stood still for a second. In the mirror I seemed to see the bloodless face of a ghost, who stood behind me. And the face was also that of Adele. With a gasp I turned swiftly to face the apparition.

Was it then no spirit, but Adele herself? She spoke to me in a steady voice, but her face was ashen as a corpse, and she held out to me a letter.

‘Read that,’ she said, and she stood like one in a dream.

I shall never forget how the word of that message seemed to burn themselves into my heart.

I cannot ask forgiveness. But you will forgive, you are so good and gentle. . . . It has been a terrible mistake, and I acknowledge that I am to blame. I have deceived you. She is still living, and I was as much to blame as she, perhaps more. Last night she came back to me, and now I must see you no more. Believe me, I have loved you, but now she has come back, and the influence is strong, and perhaps it is my duty. I do not know that I shall live with her again, but you and I must meet no more.

‘May heaven punish him!’ That was all I could say.

But still Adele stood motionless. Her stony face was horrible to look upon.

‘ Adele, you must forget him; you must hate him.’

She paid no heed to me.

‘I have thought,’ she said presently, in the same quiet voice with which she had first spoken, ‘I have thought, that I should like to see him once more—face to face. I should like to hear this from his own lips. That would be all. Will you help me?’

‘What shall I do, Adele?’

“Go to him with a written note from me asking him to come to me. Go at once.’

I agreed and hastily made ready for the street.

‘I have written it,’ she said; ‘the message is prepared. Give it to him with your own hands. If he agrees to come and so promises you, come to my room at once and tell me. If he says nothing, do not come until after two o'clock. By that time I shall be more composed. Promise me this.’

I promised earnestly, thanking heaven that she bore up so well and would probably live it down in due time.

I took the sealed message and hastened to Fielding's home.

He was not gone away. He came reluctantly into the parlor. I remember thinking he had a cowardly look on his face, a look of apprehension. I remember how calmly he opened the note and read it through. I remember wishing desperately that I were a man just for that moment that I might seize him by the throat and beat the life out of him.

‘Have you any message to send by me?’ I asked sternly. ‘ I do not know what she has written, but if you will say to me that you will go to her I will precede you and let her know.’

He shook his head.

‘No,’ he said; ‘you need carry no word, unless this, that I hope she may forgive me.’ He took out his handkerchief and touched it to his dry eyes. ‘I have done wrong,’ he said. ‘I acknowledge it.’

I spoke desperately then.

‘ No, I cannot take her that message. For the love of heaven go to her! I cannot bear such tidings.’

He shook his head.

‘I cannot go to her,’ he said, and bowing, passed out of the room.

I went into the street again feeling dazed. How should I tell her? For in my heart I had hoped against all reason or judgment that it might yet go well.

I remembered then that she had desired me not to come till after two if he would not see her again.

I returned home and waited.

When it was time I set out feeling sad and dreary as I had never before felt in all my life.

Would she be calm and brave and put away his treacherous memory forever? I hoped so.

I found her lying face downward on the floor of her chamber. Her arms were outstretched above her head as if in utter exhaustion. The room showed all her preparations for the wedding. The pretty dress was spread upon the bed; in a vase were lilies and white roses. The bonnet and the dainty handkerchief, the gloves and the laces lay side by side.

‘Come, Adele,’ I said in a choking voice as I bent to lift her; ‘come away from all this—to my home.’

The touch of her hand made me start. It was cold, limp. I lifted her as a dead weight; her head drooped heavily; her lips were parted. Merciful heaven! What deadly scent of drug was here?

‘Adele!’ I shrieked and put my hand upon her heart.

But it was stilled forever.

And there I knelt and gave thanks to heaven that she had passed.

Endeavoring to Put a Little Business Sense Into a Preacher.—Sam Rathbun, a Galveston grocer, meeting Reverend Powers, asked him:

“ How is your church coming on ?”

“ Poorly, very poorly. The debt is steadily increasing. I have had no coal this winter. My landlord has given me permission to select another dwelling. My salary has not been paid for the last six months. I am actually suffering for a pair of new shoes.”

“ The trouble with you preachers is that you have not got any business sense. Now, I can give you a hint how to make lots of money, so that the church will grow like a green bay tree, on a legitimate basis, and you never need miss another meal or wear any more old clothes.”

“ What is your plan ?”

“Utilize your advertising facilities. If you will allow me to hang up a sign on the pulpit to the effect that I give a pound and a half more sugar to the dollar than any other grocer, I will give you twenty-five dollars a month. If you will shove my business cards in all the hymn books I'll pay you ten dollars more, and if you will let me hang up advertising cards all over the church telling people where they can get the boss five cent cigar and Texas molasses that has no glucose in it. I will let you put as many mottoes as you want to in my store, such as ‘Get the behind me, Satan.’ ‘What is home without a mother ? and other Scriptural texts.”

“Sir, this is trifling with holy things. I would not listen to such a proposition for a moment.”

“ Of course it is, but you would charge fifty cents for a chance at one poor little oyster drowned in five gallons of milk at a church fair. You preachers have got no real good sense. If you would mention in your sermon that my fine cut chewing tobacco is in everybody's mouth, I would print your hours for holding church services on the paper bags I send out, and we would both be helped, but I suppose that's sinful, too. That would fill your church in no time and you might do a power of good in saving sinners; but you can't see it, although you instigate feeble minded females to peddle out colicky lemonade at twenty cents a glass at a festival. Just think over it. By the time your landlord has had another conference with you on spiritual topics, perhaps you will be willing to mention in your sermon that I give five long candles for a quarter, and then you can get ten dollars' worth of groceries from my store, and no questions asked.”—Burlington Hawkeye.

NOTES

I think there is a wrong impression around the county concerning Mrs. Hayes, wife of "Billy." One would think from reading the daily press of the county that Mrs. Hayes was a hardened criminal, who was openly defying the law. On the contrary she is a rather pretty, unassuming and as modest appearing lady as one often meets. When she appears in the court room, or on the street, she is always neatly attired and very lady like. While she has been convicted in the lower court of keeping liquor, which is perfectly proper, as the judge should hold all for the higher court where there is a shadow of a case, yet I think there is not evidence enough to convict her in a higher one. She has been trying to keep her home and family together since the departure of her husband, and has had to depend on his old employes, whose advice may not have been any help to her.

I heard a good one on your "Sparks" reporter the other day and will give it just as I heard it. Last year he sold tickets for the Union Ball, for which a certain sum was to be paid him. When the bills were being settled it was found there was quite a large deficiency, and being a fireman himself, he volunteered to turn in to the general fund what was coming to him, which was accepted and he received no pay. This year he performed a like service for the firemen and at their meeting they voted him "the same pay he received last year." I trust he will put in his bill and have it allowed.

One morning last week as I gathered with others at the railroad station to take the train to Boston, I noticed a police officer with drawn "billy" standing near his prisoner who was quite an unoffensive looking man and was securely handcuffed. The officer was a stranger, and as our business men viewed the couple, I noticed they walked nervously about the platform, while young "gammins" stood around the corner of the depot not daring to come too near the stern limb of the law, who never for an instant let his eyes leave his prisoner. On inquiry I found that the couple came from Lynnfield, that as they had no "lockup" there his prisoner had been locked up in our police station over night. I suspect our officers told the rural officer that his man was a desperate character and that accounted for his great vigilance.

I notice that some crank is painting mottoes on many of the large rocks on the outskirts of the town and marring the beauty of the landscape. Most conspicuous among them is, "Prepare to meet your God." There is a law against defacing a man's property in this way without his permission.

Report sayeth that one of our constables who has masqueraded as a detective before now, received word a short time ago that a tramp had stolen a satchel from a well known party in Lynnfield, and had started for Peabody, treading the railroad ties on his way. Visions] of a glorious capture floated through his mind and he could hardly decide whether to take his man to the police station or chain him to a tree and bring his brother officers to see his prize. At any rate he hunted up an old lantern and started off up the So. Reading track. After passing the "Six Sisters" he hid himself behind a rock, and although the night was bitter cold he sat there four long hours with drawn revolver. But his waiting was unrewarded, nor has the rubicund visage of the tramp shown up in this vicinity. This life is one of disappointments.

I see they are again having meetings at our alms house. There was one good brother, so they tell me, who used to preach there everySunday and would drive his horse into the barn and hitch him to the hay mow, and while the brother was filling the inmates with comfort and cheer for their future, that old horse was providing for the present with a will that showed he knew what good hay was when he had half a chance. On these occasions it was customary to provide a dinner for the preacher also. Under these circumstances there is never any trouble about supplying the pulpit.

I was passing a dry goods store in town the other day where there were several articles of ladies' wear, etc., exposed to view in the window, when my attention was drawn to a dispute between two boys who were pointing at a wire thing displayed there. One said it was a goal used at the skating rink, and the other that it was a coop to keep chickens in. I assumed a wise Sunday school look and said: "Children, you musn't dispute, that is a wire bustle." "What are you giving us," came from two throats as I hurried away.

It is a well known fact to all who have ever travelled over the So. Reading branch that they still stick to the old fashioned wood stove for heating purposes and that the stove is in the center of the car. A short time ago one of our leading business men came down that way, and having very sensitive nasal organs, complained bitterly to conductor Skinner that the car was full of coal gas. This was too much for the good natured conductor, and he pointed to the pile of wood back of the stove and went out on the platform to laugh.

THE DRAMA.

This is the last week of William Redmund and Mrs. Thomas Barry at the Boston Museum. The last act is one of the most absorbing in its interest in the line of modern romantic drama, and both Mr. Redmund and Mrs. Barry make the most of the situations of the play. Mr. Redmund's Casimir is an impersonation that holds the admiration of all his former admirers and has gained for him new friends, while Mrs. Barry's performance is as effective and stirring as her warmest friends could wish. "A Midnight Marriage" will be acted at the Museum by the Redmund-Barry company only throughout the present week.

The excellent acting of the Union Square company—soon, unfortunately, to cease to be—is by all odds the chief attraction in the reigning production of "A Prisoner for Life" at the Park Theatre. Miss Sara Jewett, Miss Maud Harrison, Mr. Joseph E. Whiting, Mr. J. H. Stoddart and the other excellent actors whose names have been associated with so many triumphs at the Union Square, do entire justice to Mr. Nathal's melodrama. All the stage effects are now seen to the best advantage. "A Prisoner for Life" will be offered at all the performances of the week at this theatre, including the anniversary night; when a unique souvenir, with photographs of the Union Square company, will mark the occasion.

Mr. Hoyt's latest comedy hit is to be seen this week at the Bijou Theatre. No pains will be spared to make the production of "A Tin Soldier" in every way complete. Mr. Hoyt brings on the stage in his new work the guileless plumber and his cohorts; the servant of the family, known to every householder as perpetually "on the borrow" with divers other character personages, each of whom, like his "Rag Baby" people has some counterpart in real life. Whether "A Tin Soldier" satisfies the female love of all that's military as well as holds up the plumber and the coal dealer to fame is a matter which may well be left to Bijou patrons, the present week to determine. This new success, under Mr. Eugene Tompkin's management, and produced under the direction of the author will introduce an excellent comedy company. Rachel Booth and Marion Elmore are deservedly popular; in her own line, Amy Ames is capital. "A Tin Soldier" will be prettily staged. The season in Boston is limited.

Two of Mr. Charles H. Hoyt's successes will be seen in Boston next week.—"A Parlor Match" at the Park, and "A Tin Soldier" at the Bijou.

"Pique" with the Boston Museum Stock Company, will be Manager Field's revival on Monday of next week.

A genuine boom—that of "A Midnight Marriage" at the Museum. The advance sale for this week is great.

Augustine Daly's company including Ada Rehan, Virginia Dreher, Mrs. C. H. Gilbert, John Drew, James Lewis, Charles Leclerq, George Parkes and other favorites, begin an engagement at the Boston Museum, May 4, in "Love and Crutches." In the course of their season here will be offered also the reigning success, "A Night Off." It is not unlikely that a few performances may be given of the old comedy, "She Would and She Would Not."

There can be no question that "Siberia" has made a great popular success in Boston, at the Globe Theatre. The reputation of the playwright, the recollection of his other successful dramas, and the news of the hit which this play has made in other cities attracted a very large audience to the Globe Theatre Monday evening. The house was filled from pit to dome, and the enthusiasm of the spectators at every striking scene after the first act showed plainly enough their appreciation of the drama. An important comedy role incidental to the piece is that of Trolsky, a philosophic servant to David, who goes to the mines "a spurious hero" under unjustified suspicion of being a Nihilist. This part is taken by Mr. M. C. Daly, whose excellent acting last evening kept the audience laughing whenever he was on the stage. The role of Vera, the flower-girl, with whom he is in love, was coquettishly taken by Miss Frankie McClellan. The acting of Miss Emma Vaders as Marie, particularly in the scenes where she is supposed to have lost her reason, deserves commendation. The scenic effects are fine, and the piece will hold the boards for two weeks.

A glance at the furniture emporium of W. C. Packard & Co., in Salem, is always full of interest, but it is especially so at the present time. From top to bottom the store is filled with all the choicest novelties of the season—the richest patterns, the most elegant designs. The establishment is metropolitan in every respect. There are no stores this side of Boston that can show any larger variety or any better goods—and it compares favorably with the best in the large cities of Boston or New York. Mr. Packard's taste in selection gives his patrons the best varieties in the market. Nothing in the way of novelty escapes his notice; and many if not most of the finest goods are manufactured under his supervision. Every customer is told exactly what the articles for sale at his establishment are. There is no misrepresentation allowed. The result is, that the large and increasing trade of Mr. Packard are regular patrons—made so because of honorable and fair dealing, and perfect satisfaction with the result of their purchase. The window on the west side is, at this time, the object of much attention and we are informed that every article therein was made at this establishment. The parlor set of crushed plush and mahogany is probably as fine a set as can be seen in any mansion in the old city of Salem. Attention has been given on the lower floor to the wants of the little ones, by the providing of the finest and best assortment of baby carriages it has been our fortune to see. The firm are making a specialty in these articles, and are offering a real rattan carriage, made in the best manner, for $8.84—a carriage never before offered for sale by any party less than $14. Other and more expensive styles are sold in proportion, and there is nothing lacking in Mr. Packard's assortment to please the most fastidious. The upholstery department is, as usual, a leading one here, and it will be confessed by our lady readers, if they will examine the stock, that nothing has been shown in Salem so rich and attractive—and yet at so astonishingly low figures. In upholstery plushes, galoons, cretonnes—every thing desirable is there, even to the extent of patterns which can be found in no other place this side of New York. Up stairs is shown all the parlor goods, and in the front part is arranged a room for the inspection of visitors elegantly fitted up as a parlor, as a sitting room, or other rooms. It is changed every week. Different styles of furnishing, different goods, everything to make a variety, and to show the endless changes which can be made from the large stock of this emporium. We assure our readers they can make no mistake in visiting this store, and making their purchases. Everything is warranted just as represented. The new advertisement this week in another column, gives our readers still further information. and we commend its perusal to them.

The Peabody Press.

JOHN P FERNALD, ALBERT VITTUM,
Editors and Publishers.

MR. FARNHAM'S report of the Trustees of the Peabody Institute, last year, compared the Trustees, in their relation to the Lyceum and Library Committee, to the drum major of a band. The explanation of this was, that the entire management of the Lyceum and Library was entrusted to that Committee without any voice on their part. It had been held that the members of that Committee should be other than the Trustees. Of late years, however, some of the Trustees have been chosen by themselves to serve on that Committee. And while last year there were two such, this year there are four. In the proportion of increase it will not be many years before the Trustees wili not only be the "drum major" of the band, but the band itself.

There is or should be a good reason for the election of a certain number of Trustees as members of the Lyceum and Library Committee. Through them the Trustees should know what is being done; and they should know it, too, otherwise than from the report which is made to them annually by the Chairman of the different Committees. Through them they should know the qualifications for their work of the Committee whom they have appointed, and how well and faithfully it has been done. They should know what members are interested to do the best for the Library and Lyceum, and what members, if any, rarely attend the meetings and give little if any thought to the work. In short the Committee whom they appoint should be a working Committee. The Trustees should know this fact, and if they have not such a one it should be judiciously rectified.

As the matter stands to-day, is this the case? Is any report made to the Trustees other than the regular one at the last meeting of the year? Is there any discussion, at the appointment of the Lyceum and Library Committee, of the qualifications of the proposed members? Is there any report by the Trustees who have been on the Lyceum and Library Committee, as to the work of the Committee the previous year, with a view of ascertaining which of the previous years' Committee it is wisdom to retain and which to decline to elect? On the contrary are they not elected without any reference to any of these things? Is not favoritism and the payment of this or that political debt too often the only requisition?

We are led to these remarks by the action of the Trustees this year in declining to elect one of the most valuable members of the Lyceum and Library Committee—Mr. S. E. Cassino. This gentleman was one of the Library Committee, and, as is known to many of our readers, is himself a book publisher. Some of his leading publications have met with a large sale, and although comparatively a young man, he has already gained an enviable reputation among the trade. His knowledge of the business was of much value to the Committee last year, not only in the selection of works, but in obtaining for the Library a larger trade discount on the books purchased than had been done by any Committee previously. But did the Trustees, as a body, know this? Did they try to know it, or any point of real value to them in the selection of the Committee for this year? One thing we presume they did consider—that considerable fault had been found with the lecture course the past year, and Mr. Cassino was chairman of that Committee. This is a manifest injustice. It is true he was chairman of the lecture Committee, but he had as associates gentlemen who had been on the Lyceum and Library Committee for years, and on the lectureCommittee, also, many years. These gentlemen are, equally with Mr. Cassino, responsible for any failure to suit the public, if such it be.

We do not suppose Mr. Cassino will thank us for this notice, but we know he will pardon us on account of the necessity of mentioning him to show the methods pursued by the Board of Trustees. The whole thing is wrong. Some change ought to be made, either in the mode of election, or in considering more thoroughly the result of their action. It was thought advisable last year to elect more new members to this Committee than usual; this may be well enough, but it is evident that it was overdone. The same may be said, we think, this year. In our judgment it would be a feasible thing for the Trustees to elect the Lyceum and Library Committee in the same manner, as to number, as they themselves are chosen, viz: to elect each member for six years and choose only two new members each year. This would allow the Committee to be of some service to the Institute and the public, and give them some incentive to become familiar with the wants of the Institution and public as well.

WE NOTED the fact, some weeks since, of the somewhat remarkable registration of women in the town of Woburn, and of their intention of taking advantage of the privilege afforded them to vote for members of the School Board. The result last Monday week, at the election, shows not only the wisdom of the step, but it sets an example which could be well followed in every town and city in Massachusetts.

Woburn is, in many respects, like Peabody. Its business is the same, its population is made up of similar elements. Liquor has been sold freely there—with the continued opposition of a large temperance party. It is unnecessary to state that it is, and has been for years, a democratic town. So much so, that a strict party ticket has prevailed even in town offices. Everything in town affairs has been run by that party, including the control of the minor offices. For some years past the town has been controlled by a clique or ring in that party, to the disgust of so sterling a democratic sheet as the Woburn Advertiser. This has not made it all sunshine for the party in power. Yet they have been enabled to keep in control, despite the opposition of some of their party, until this year, when they have met with a complete and overwhelming defeat.

The control of the ring extended to the School Board. And the majority, seeing their opportunity, took occasion last year to drop certain of the female teachers in the town—many of whom had seen service years in the schools and against whom no complaint could be made. Their places were filled with the friends of this ring, with little reference to their qualifications. It was no wonder that indignation should be aroused. The minority of the Board protested, but in vain. So little harmony was there in the Committee that a minority report was laid before the public.

The ladies of the town, who are never slow in matters of this kind, took the trouble home to themselves. They had been given the privilege, by the State, of having something to say about the education of their children. Under the lead of a few diligent workers, a registration of nearly 300 was brought about—nearly all of whom appeared at the polls and helped elect a School Board which is an honor to the town. There were five members to be elected—two extra on account of removals from town and resignations—a majority of the Board. The new members are all clean men. So close was the election that without the aid of the ladies the opposition ticket would have prevailed.

Here is an instance, which is not ideal, but real, of the advantage to a town of the vote of the women for School Committee. When a town becomes so much controlled by any party, that offices like that of the superintendence of the education of our youth shall be distributed as party spoils, it is time to call a halt. The education of the children of the State is one of the bulwarks of liberty. The superintendence of such education is a great responsibility. The members of this Board should be in no sense party representatives. They should be representatives of the best and broadest and fullest ideas of education. They should never be men who are not in sympathy with the public school system of the State.

Unfortunately for many cities and towns where parties are unequally divided, the power which is in control is more than often ruled by a spirit of revenge. It cares nothing for fitness—only for the reward of its favorites and the perpetuation of itself in power. Carried too far, as was the case in Woburn, a reaction is sometimes possible. The credit of a portion of this is due to the ladies of that town. Further than this, the citizens' ticket was partially successful in electing a Board of Selectmen, and to the surprise of many of the citizens, Woburn voted "No License." This is surely an overturning—with what result in the future remains to be seen.

We think, however, the ladies should not wait for an emergency like this to exercise the privilege of controlling the education of their children. In most places a goodly registration would give them the balance of power in the election of members of School Committee. They could say to any party, "Thus far shalt thou go and no farther." They could make it impossible that unscrupulous men should be elected; men who can see no good in a teacher who does not belong to their set, or their church. They will also pave the way for a more extended privilege of suffrage than is given them now by the State.

Messrs. John G. B. and Samuel Edwards, of Salem, have purchased the grocery stock and business of Mr. C. C. Pettingell, on the corner of Federal and North streets and will enter upon the business about April 20th. They are reliable and enterprising young men, and we trust will receive a liberal patronage.

MUSICAL NOTES.

The closing concert of the Salem Schubert Club for the season was given in Plummer Hall, last Thursday evening. The principal numbers were a Cantata, "The Feast of Adonis" by Jensen, and "The Tale of the Viking," by Geo. E. Whiting. The soloists were Miss Helen M. Howland, Messrs. Clarence E. Hay and W. J. Winch, who in addition to the solo work in the Cantatas, favored the audience each with a selection of their own, and the Club also sang two part songs without accompaniment. The Cantata by Whiting is a work of much merit and it was rendered by the club in an agreeable manner. It must be said that the work of the club was not equal to the last concert. They were not familiar enough with the music to give that interpretation which was a particular cause for remark at the last concert. They lacked precision of attack in many cases, and the parts were not as evenly balanced—there seeming to be a lacking of tenors, and we noted the absence of some members whose faces have become familiar to the audiences of the Schubert Club.

The soloists were all heartily welcomed. Mr. Hay gave a spirited and effective rendering of Gounod's Vulcan's Song; so finely done that a repetition was demanded, a very unusual thing at these concerts. Mr. Winch sang Blumenthal's Requital, and could find no fault with his reception. As the old leader of the club it could not be otherwise; and it was several moments before he could finish his acknowledgments to the audience and the Club, and go on with his song. Mr. Winch is at his best in songs; his rendition is careful and always shows study, but his modulations are invariably from pianissimo (when he uses the falsetto) to fortissimo. Miss Howland was unfortunate in her selection, which although it met with favor from the audience, did not do justice to her ability. The solos in the "Tale of the Viking" were more artistically rendered; her phrasing and method were admirable, and she was free from a slight nervousness which was apparent on her first appearance. Her voice was full and powerful, with a deal of expression in many of her notes, and was always true. We shall be glad to hear more from her in the future.

We notice that the Club have departed from their custom of printing the words of the part songs and Cantatas, a departure which does not add to the pleasure of the audience.

The closing concert by the Salem Oratorio Society was given in Mechanic Hall, Salem, Monday evening, at which time Handel's "Utrecht Jubilate" and Spohr's "Last Judgment" were performed. The charm of the evening's concert was the work of the Oratorio Society. The choruses in both parts were far more enjoyable than the numbers assigned to the soloists, and as finely rendered. We never have heard the Society sing as well—and that is giving them a deal of praise, all of which they deserve. They sang in entire harmony with every movement of Mr. Zerrahn's baton; all the lights and shades of the different passages were interpreted carefully and conscientiously—something rarely to be observed in so large a chorus. Particularly was this noticeable in the opening chorus of the "Last Judgment" which was repeated several times, and in the chorus in connection with the quartette, "Blest are the departed," which was one of the best things of the evening. The work of the Society must impress every one with the deserved reputation earned by them, and with the remarkable ability of Mr. Zerrahn as conductor.

The soloists were Fanny Kellogg, soprano; Miss Mary Howe, contralto; Messrs. W. J. Winch, tenor; and D. M. Babcock, bass. Miss Howe's rendition of the solos in the Jubilate was simply charming; and she was easily first among the soloists of the evening. It was a matter of regret that she had so little to do—only appearing in the concerted numbers in the "Last Judgment." Mr. Babcock was the same conscientious artist as ever; and in what he had to do gave great pleasure to the audience. Mr. Winch's best effort was in the duet "Forsake me not" with the soprano. In the solo numbers his intonation was not always true. Miss Kellogg's voice was lacking the power which was once hers; though her phrasing and articulation were worthy of praise. The quartettes were finely done. In short, the solo artists seemed to appear the best, with the single exception of Miss Howe, in these numbers. The use of the organ was a welcome addition to the choral numbers, and we are inclined to think the majority of the auditors prefer to hear it at an Oratorio. The Society are to be congratulated at so successful a close to their season's work, and the public are to be congratulated on being privileged to enjoy the work of a society so well managed and conducted.

The new Symphony Club, under the leadership of F. C. Record, will give but one concert instead of two, as proposed, on account of the lateness of the season. It will be given in Plummer Hall.

The repertory for the farewell engagement of Adelina Patti, Nevada, Fursch-Madi, Scalchi and Her Majesty's Italian Opera company at the Boston Theatre for the week of April 27, will be unusually attractive. La diva will be heard with Scalchi in "Semiramide," and for her adieu will appear for the first time here as Maria in Donizetti's "Figlia del Reggimento," Emma Nevada is to sing in "La Sonnambula," "Mirella and "Lucia." A noteworthy event will be the production of "Der Freischutz," with Fursch-Madi as Agatha.

The boy choir of St. Stephen's church, in Lynn, will give a concert in the Rockville church, to-morrow, Thursday evening. They will be assisted by Miss May C. Barrelle, contralto, a sister of Dr. Barrelle, who is well known here. It will be a fine concert. The choir of St. Stephen's church is justly celebrated for its fine music under the leadership of Edward K. Weston, and it will be worthy the attention of our readers. Many from this part of the town should go up and they will be well repaid.

Owing to the illness of Miss Hayden, who was expected to sing in the Barton Square Church choir, Salem, also in the Unitarian choir in this town, in place of Miss Felt, Miss Marguerite Hall, the daughter of Mrs. Edna A. Hall, the well known vocal teacher, kindly volunteered to fill her place. The congregation at both places had the pleasure, therefore, of hearing Miss Hall ing "O rest in the Lord" from the Oratorio of Elijah, and in the duet "I waited for the Lord" from Mendelssohn. Next Sunday, Miss Dalton expects to be absent, and Miss Hall will substitute for her and Miss Hayden is also expected to sing. Miss Hall will sing Handel's "Angels ever bright and fair," and Miss Hayden will also sing a solo. This will be done both in Salem and at the Unitarian church here.

Next Sunday will be Confirmation at St. John's Church, and the Bishop will be present and preach at 10 A. M. The following music will be rendered by the choir under the direction of Charles A. Clark, Esq., 10 A. M.:

Kyrie	Haydn 2nd

Margaret Mather, with J. M. Hill's supporting company, will positively appear in Town Hall, Thursday evening of next week, in "Lady of Lyons." Seats will be on sale at Spaulding's Monday morning, April 20th, at 10 o'clock. It is Miss Mather's only appearance in this vicinity in this sterling comedy—a play which though seen many times never tires when well performed. It is not everybody who cares to see Miss Mather in Macbeth, or Romeo and Juliet, or her heavier plays. But there is no one not interested in the character of Pauline. And by many critics it is considered her best impersonation. The largest audience of the season greeted her last year—this will be no exception to the rule. Secure your seats early—the prices will be the same as last year.

Mr. A T. Newhall entertained a large meeting of the West Peabody Farmers Club, last Friday evening, with an account of his visit to California and return. The speaker was very entertaining. He said he had visited most of the places of note in twenty-eight states, and detailed the peculiarities of the people and the beauties and defects of the country through which he passed. He spoke plainly of the filthy condition of Chinatown, in Calafornia, and thought there was no place that he thought compared with our own New England homes.

The annual meeting of the Baptist Society was held on Mon day evening the 13th. Pyram D. Perkins was chosen moderator; Abraham C. Osborne, society clerk; standing committe—Pyram D. Perkins, Isaiah Chute and Charles A. Nevers; Treasurer, Daniel Woodbury; Collector, Alden F. Rowell; Music Committee, Daniel Woodbury and Eri Littlefield. The financial condition of the Society is very satisfactory, the receipts having met the expenditures.

We learn that Mr. F. C. Ferguson will occupy the house on the corner of Tremont and Central streets recently occupied by the late Eli Burnham.

FATAL ACCIDENT.

As the 12 o'clock train from Danvers into Boston, over the B. & M. western division, passed through West Peabody, the engine struck the milk team of a Mr. Brown, containing two boys by the name of Brown and Resolute Ingraham a 15 year old son of J. Fred Ingraham, who was on the way home from the trial at the police court. The two Brown boys jumped from the wagon in time to save themselves, but young Ingraham was not so fortunate and was struck by the train, being thrown some distance and receiving injuries which proved fatal within a short time after the accident. The accident happened at the crossing of the Boston & Maine near the cider mill of J. Shed Needham. The Selectmen had presented a petition to the railroad company requesting them to establish a flag station, some time a go but nothing had been done about it. Dr. Pike was sent for, but as later news came that the boy was dead, Dr. Osborne, the medical examiner, was sent in his stead. The boy was the oldest son of J. Fred Ingraham, and his sudden death will be a severe blow to that gentleman. Mr. Ingraham was present at the trial. The accident was witnessed by a son of J. Shed Needham, who immediately ran and picked up the boy, who had been thrown a great distance and it is thought struck a rock. The only bruise to be seen was on his chin. He was taken in a wagon and conveyed to his home, about a mile and a half distant, and medical aid summoned from Danvers and Peabody, but life was extinct before their arrival. Mr. Ingraham was at home when the sad intelligence was received. The horse was not injured, but the wagon was completely demolished.

Rev. Albert Gould gave the following statistics of his three years' work in Clinton, Sunday before last, it being the close of his pastorate there:—Received on probation, 33; received from probation, 8; now on probation, 22; baptisms, 18; members received by letter, 29; removed by letter, 34; removed without letter, 32; deceased, 5; presen membership, 144; marriages solemnized, 25; funerals attended, 33.

The postoffice department has recently issued a circular to postmasters notifying them that in case money orders are issued by them remaining unpaid, they must hunt up the senders and notify them. There now remains in the United States Treasury to the credit of the money order office $1,250,000 belonging to the unclaimed money orders.

The Boston & Lowell road offers shareholders of April 1 the right to take 7660 shares of new stock at par ($100), in the ratio one new share for one old one of the par value of $500, or five old ones of the par value of $100, the privilege to run to May 5, and the books being closed from April 1 to April 9. The present stock of the company is $3,792,000.

This is the time for whitewashing. A good article can be made by slakening two gallons of white lime in five gallons of hot water in which one pound of rice has been boiled until it has all dissolved. Cover closely while lime is slackening. Add one pound of salt, use hot.

No one can afford to miss seeing the great painting of the Battle of Gettysburg on exhibition daily from 9 A. M. to 11 P. M., at the Cyclorama building, 541 Tremont street, Boston. The picture is pronounced by the best critics as a meritorious and marvelous work of art.

What about your old currant bushes? Have you cut the old wood and thrown some wood ashes or manure around and among them? If you wish to have arge, fine fruit, as everybody should, you must do it. Currant is among the most healthful and indispensible fruits we have.

A horse attached to a light wagon, left standing near the engine house on Lowell street last Saturday, started at a lively rate to get a drink at the fountain near the flag staff, and collided with another team, the wheels locked and both teams were slightly damaged.

The ladies of the Baptist Church have just fitted up one of the small vestrys to be used for a ladies' parlor, and it has been neatly furnished with a new carpet and furniture of modern and pretty design. The ladies have long felt the need of such a room and will no doubt enjoy it.

The Dalys, in "Vacation," at the town hall, Monday night, were very pleasing to the audience which gathered. The play brought the house "down" several times during the evening, with its comical situations. It was a first-class performance.

The Boston & Maine Railroad will run an excursion to the Soldiers' Home Carnival and the exhibition of the Battle of Gettysburg, to-morrow, Thursday. Tickets to Boston and return from this town 50 cents, being good on any regular train.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

We desire to call the attention of our readers to the new advertisement of F. D. Tarleton, who has been in town some weeks — having purchased the Dry Goods establishment of Mrs. Russel, the "Boston Store," so called, No. 42 Main street. Mr. Tarleton is a young man who has had eight years experience in one of our largest metropolitan stores, and knows his business through and through. He intends to keep a well selected stock of small wares, domestics and dry goods, which he will sell at the lowest possible price. He sells the Sibley shirt for gentlemen, and it is one of his specialties; at 50 cents, 75 cents and $1.00. These are warranted to be the best in the market and Mr. Tarleton will take pleasure in showing them to any of our readers. In fact all goods will be cheerfully shown. Mr. Tarlton will be glad to see any of our readers in his store, and they will be shown equal attention whether they wish to purchase or not.

Rev. J. N. Shipman, of Plainville, Conn., the new pastor of the Baptist Church, preached his first sermon last Sunday. The church was finely decorated with beautiful cut flowers and potted plants. On the front of the pulpit was the word "Welcome" made of flowers and a ground work of ferns with a floral base made a pretty contrast, while on either side, calla lillies and potted plants. The new pastor expressed his pleasure at the cordial reception he had received and trusted the spiritual welfare of the congregation would be advanced under his pastorate. Mr. Shipman is a graduate of Madison University, Hamilton, N. Y. He was born in the state of Vermont. He received a call and was ordained to the ministry at Moosac, Conn., in 1879, where he has labored until called to the Baptist church here. He preached from Phillipeans, 2:13-14.

The state having voted $500 for the second company of the Andrews Sharp Shooters toward putting up a monument on the grounds occupied by the company at the battle of Gettysburg, plans and models have been issued and the contract for building it has been placed with the Boston Marble & Granite Company of Worcester. It will be made from White Concord Granite and cost $525, and will stand on a boulder, and singularly enough the very spot where Postmaster Ward was shot. Mr. Ward has a model of the monument, the design being a sharp shooter standing behind a boulder looking out for the enemy. These models will be sold at $2.00 each and the profit will go toward paying the expenses of the committee who attend the dedication. It will be on exhibition at Spaulding's.

Edwin Downs, formerly of this town now of Hebron, N. Y., was recently married to a girl 15 years old, he being 28. They had been married only a few days when the young wife possessed herself of about $200 of her husband's money, and took the train for Albany to spend the honeymoon and her husband's surplus cash as best suited her mind. The disconsolate Downs at last account was striving to ascertain her whereabouts before his pile had all been wasted.

The Salem Athletic club will give their first exhibition at Town Hall, April 27, and they are making a great effort to have it a success. Among the matches arranged for is a boxing match between Marine of Boston and Patrick McManus of Salem, and among the others who will wrestle, spar and swing clubs, are Sullivan, of Marblehead, Hennesy and Gorman, of Salem, Jack Barry, of Peabody, and the champion light weight of New England will wrestle.

The Peabody High School boys have organized a base ball nine as follows:— J. Clothey, captain and catcher; W. McCarthy, pitcher; Fred Shaw, Arthur Abbott, J. Murphy, L. Newhall, Nathan Poor, A. Galeucia, Harry Poor, Hazen A. Quint, with W. Motley and W. Murphy as substitutes. This team will play in the High School league formed by the Salem, Beverly and Peabody schools. The first game will be between the Peabodys and Salems, at Peabody, May 2.

The appointments of the Methodist Conference are announced. Rev. C. N. Smith returns to Peabody and among others are the following of interest to Peabody people: Highlandville, Boston, F. Furber; Natick, J. O. Knowles; Pierpont St., Gloucester, S. B. Sweetser; Reading, Daniel Steele; Salem, Lafayette St., W. P. Ray, Wesley Chapel, W. P. Odell; Tapleyville, W. M. Ayers; So. Hadley Falls, E. S. Best; Williamsburg, W. G. Leonard; Marlboro, Albert Gould.

A new and handsome hearse has just been purchased by Thomas Fallon, undertaker of this town.

Last Sunday night the grocery store of Daniel Brown at West Peabody was entered by forcing a shutter and the thieves had collected a quantity of plunder in bags for removal when the owner discovered them. The police arrested two young men named George Sullivan and Walter Birmingham. The case came before Judge Merrill this morning, S. C. Bancroft, Esq., appearing for Sullivan. There was a large number of witnesses and the evidence briefly was as follows: Daniel Brown said he was on his way home between eleven and twelve o'clock and seeing a light in the store investigated it, and saw two parties jump from the window; one he thought might be Sullivan; he started to catch him but the fellow turned and fired a pistol at him, and a conversation ensued, of not much account. After notifying the police he returned to the store and found that seven or eight dollars in money, besides other things had been taken, and in two grain bags ready for removal was a quantity of tobacco and cigars. A knife and two large hard wood canes were found inside. Resolute Ingraham and Mr. Shannahan were called, the former to identify the knife, which he failed to do, and the other testified that he saw Sullivan and Birmingham go past his house and shortly after return. Sullivan and Birmingham were put on the stand and told a straightforward story of their whereabouts during the evening and night. They sleep at J. F. Ingraham's factory, six in a room, and two of them were away that night. They retired about 8.30 and Sullivan slept till 5.30. They never owned a pistol nor never used one. They denied all knowledge of the robbery. Martin Cuddire and Daniel Condon testified to being roommates of the accused, and that they were in bed at 10 o'clock, and also when they woke up the next morning. There were several other witnesses who testified to the good character of the prisoners, and their counsel made an able argument for their discharge. Judge Merrill thought while he might be justified in holding for the Grand Jury with what evidence he had, he did not think they would be convicted of the crime and he should discharge them.

Mrs. Hall, wife of Paul Hall, who keeps a shoe shop on the corner of Chestnut street, met with a painful accident at her home on Aborn street last night. She was in dishabille, rubbing some camphor on her side and chest and leaning over the stove, from which she had removed the cover, and some of the camphor dropping into the stove blazed up and set fire to the camphor on her person. Her bowels, breast and hands were terribly burned, but she managed to put out the flames before her husband who was in another part of the house could reach her. Dr. Shanahan was called and remained with the sufferer nearly all night, and a telegram was sent to the family physician at Haverhill. A consultation will be held this afternoon and the extent of the injury determined. Mrs. Hall is comfortable at present writing.

If our readers want to find the place where they can get some good potatoes—not an easy thing to find at this season—we can recommend them to Messrs. Halloweil & Smiley on Caller street. They have not the largest store in town, but they are doing a large and growing business. They sell goods on the square—for cash, and we advise our readers to patronize them. They will get the full value of their money every time.

The Traveller reports that committees of all the roads entering Boston on the northerly side are "pract'call agreed upon a general plan," which contemplates the construction of a large and fine station on Causeway street, between the Fitchburg and Eastern stations, and directly opposite Canal street, on the ground now occupied by the Boston & Maine Company for freight purposes.

The parents of Wm. J. Hayes living on the corner of English and Tremont streets have reported to the police that their son has been missing since April 4. He is about 19 years old and a morocco dresser by trade. When he left home he was dressed with a navy blue shirt, dark blue pants, greenish mixed coat and soft felt hat. He has the mark of a cross in India ink on the back of his right hand.

The shipments of leather from Peabody and Salem for the week ending April 11, were 5515 rolls, 1838 sides, 141 bundles, 40 barrels, 101 bags of leather; 15 bundles and 3 barrels of skins. Saturday's shipments were the largest for many months, there being 2031 rolls of leather besides the bags, barrels and bundles of leather and skins.

We have received a copy of the Evening Chronicle, published by C. A. Lee, of Pawtucket, R. I., editor and proprietor of the weekly Gazette and Chronicle. It is a neat sixteen column sheet and contains all the news of the day, together with all the local news. We wish you the best of success, Bro. Lee.

DR. LIGHTHILL,

OF 115 BOYLSTON STREET, BOSTON,

Can be consulted at the

Essex House, Salem,

Every Thursday afternoon and evening,

From 2 until 9 P. M., on all Chronic, Obscure, and Difficult Diseases.

His Specialty embraces the cure of

CATARRH,

Throat Affections, Bronchitis, Asthma, Consumption,

DEAFNESS,

Discharge from the Ear, Eye Diseases, and Affections of the Blood and Nervous System.

CONSULTATION FREE.

FROM REV. E. W. WHITNEY,

Formerly Pastor of the Universalist Church, Peabody, Mass.

For several years I have been troubled with Catarrh, which seriously interfered with my public speaking, and which baffled all my attempts to get permanent relief. Experienced surgeons operated upon me, and I was under the care of a Boston physician for two years, but obtained no lasting benefit. I applied various medicines, but failed to get relief. I was lead, by the advice of friends, to consult Dr. Lighthill. My faith was at the lowest ebb, but I am happy to say that after a few months' treatment no trace of my old trouble appears, and I have every reason to believe that the cure is permanent. I cordially recommend Dr. Lighthill to all who may be afflicted in a similar manner.

E. W. WHITNEY,

Peabody, Mass., June 27, 1879.

AN INTERESTING CASE.

A statement of Mr. Clement A. Thorndike, of the firm of L. A. May & Co., 127 Union street, Lynn, Mass.

To the Public:—Having been raised almost like one from the dead by the skillful treatment of Dr. Lighthill, and to benefit similar sufferers, I make this public statement of my case. For years I was troubled with Catarrh in my head, seriously affecting and almost destroying my nasal bone; the discharge was very profuse, requiring constant blowing and hawking for relief; gradually the irritation passed into my throat, producing hoarseness and a hacking cough, and finally it affected my bronchial tubes and lungs, leaving me a victim to consumption. The cough now became distressing and almost constant, and debilitating night sweats made their appearance. I lost flesh and became greatly emaciated. I consulted medical men and used various remedies, but all efforts for relief utterly failed. In that condition, and greatly disheartened and discouraged, I applied to Dr. Lighthill, whose able and thorough examination of my case proved to me that I was in the right hands. Convinced that he fully understood my condition, and, inspired with new hope, I placed myself under his care, and very soon experienced the benefit of his treatment. One after another of the symptoms of Catarrh left me. I gained in strength and weight, my cough and night sweats disappeared, and now I am only too thankful and delighted to be able to call myself well again. Hoping that this statement may give new courage and confidence to such as may suffer as I have,

I remain, respectfully,

CLEMENT A. THORNDIKE.

Lynn, June 18, 1881

CATARRH CURED.

FROM REV. E. C. BUTLER,

Beverly, Mass.

I most heartily recommend any one afflicted with that troublesome disease, Catarrh, to Dr. Lighthill. I have full confidence in him. His treatment has had the most gratifying results in my own case, which was severe and of long standing.

E. C. BUTLER,

Beverly, Mass., Oct. 29, 1879.

CURE OF DEAFNESS.

FROM RT. REV. T. F. HENDRIKEN,

Bishop of Providence, R. I.

My Dear Dr. Lighthill: Permit me to thank you most heartily for your kindness to the Sisters of our Convent. I had no idea when I consulted you on Sister Demonica's deafness that you could so quickly restore her back to hearing, but she tells me that she hears now better than she did before. For this, and your kind and successful treatment of my own deafness, I thank you. Now I would be glad to have you refer your patients to me. You know I can recommend you as a physician and surgeon, thoroughly accomplished in those departments of medicine in which you practice. I owe you a debt of gratitude, and would be glad to pay it.

Very truly and sincerely yours

Rt. Rev. T. F. HENDRIKEN.

A complete and permanent cure of

ASTHMA.

REPORT FROM MR. C. F. BOYNTON, 31 MILK STREET, BOSTON, ROOM 35.

TO THE PUBLIC.

After having spent large sums of money, and found no relief, I was induced to apply to Dr. Lighthill, at 115 Boylston street, for treatment, having suffered from asthma in the worst form for six years, and I wish to say, for the benefit of others suffering as I did that DR. LIGHTHILL'S TREATMENT HAS MADE ME A WELL MAN, and I now can enjoy life, when before it was a dread to me. This cure was performed on me over a year ago, and I can confidently pronounce it a permanent one. I hope all afflicted with that dreadful disease will avail themselves of Dr. Lighthill's skilful services, for I feel morally sure he can cure them.

GRAND SPRING ANNOUNCEMENT.

PARLOR, LIBRARY, CHAMBER, DINING ROOM AND HALL

FURNITURE.

We would invite inspection of our New Styles now on exhibition in all our departments. Carrying as we do the largest and most comprehensive stock of Household Furniture and Upholstery Goods, [in all grades], in Essex Co. We are confident it is for the interest of all close buyers to call and examine our immense stock and learn our prices. We have spared no pains or expense in securing everything that is desirable in style, quality and effect in our selections for our Spring Trade. Our facilities for the manufacture and display of our stock in our large and well lighted ware-rooms are unequalled by any East of Boston, and the large increase of our business is sufficient guarantee that our efforts to serve the people in this vicinity have been appreciated.

PARLOR FURNITURE DEPARTMENT.

In this department we mention a few of our designs. Our new Lenox Suit is a very neat design; the frames are of solid Mahogany, overstuffed in coverings of best Silk Plush in three colorings,—the prettiest thing out.

Our No. 145 Suit is a heavy and rich overstuffed Suit, covered in Yelour Squares with silk Plush trimmings, with heavy fringe. Another, our Solid Comfort Suit, a very easy and graceful Suit, in coverings of best long nap, French Plush. This Suit is in five or seven pieces, and should be examined to be appreciated. No. 125 Suit is a new design for a stuff over suit, covered in best quality Mottled Plush in four colors. This is a medium price Set and very attractive and comfortable. No. 147 is a Mahoganized Cherry Frame Suit, a handsome suit of six pieces. Consists of Sofa, Gent's Chair, Corner Chair, Window Chair, and two Reception Chairs, in Silk Embossed Plush Coverings. This is a great favorite. Price $110. An Antique Suit of six pieces is No. 135 Frames of mahoganized Cherry, carved frames covered in Embossed Plush; price $100. Our No. 140 Suit is a richly carved Walnut frame, suit in odd pieces, coverings of best Sultan Crushed Plush. These suits we have marked at $95, and are bargains. Two new styles in Divan Suits in solid Mahogany frames in the "Chippendale style," suitable for the Library or Reception room. Many other styles which we have not room to mention.

A great variety of Odd Pieces, Divans, Corner, Side and Reception Chairs, also the celebrated Morris Chair, in Mahogany, Cherry, Walnut and Ebony Frames, $25, 30 to 38. Over stuffed and Extension Couches, (with or without backs), very comfortable, in Cretonnes and other coverings.

In our Medium priced Suits our space will not allow us to mention but two or three. Our new Group Suit is in Walnut frames, seven piece suit; covering of embossed Plush in any color. Price $75, cheap at 95. Another is our No. 86 Suit, overstuffed—a fine set, and these we are selling for the low price of $65—similar suits sold in Boston to-day from $80 to 90. Other styles in Plush and fancy coverings from $45, 50, 55, 60.

In the lower price Suits we have fifteen different styles in Hair Cloth and Fancy Coverings, from $33, 38, 40, 50 to 80. We have styles and prices to suit all.

CHAMBER FURNITURE DEPARTMENT.

Our stock is larger than ever before, and includes sets in all woods and all grades and includes no less than (56) fifty-six different styles, from which to make selections. In Mahogany Sets prices will range from $150 to 300.

BLACK WALNUT CHAMBER SETS,

$35, 40, 45, 50, 53, 55, 60, 65, 75, 80, 90, 100 to 250.

CHERRY SETS.

We are showing some very pretty styles from $110 down as low as $35, 40, 45 and 50.

ASH CHAMBER SETS,

in prices at $25, 28, 30, 32, 35, 40, 43, 45, 50, 55, 65 and 75.

PAINTED & ENAMEL CHAMBER SETS,

$14, 18, 20, 21, 23, 25.

Our stock of Chamber Furniture for variety of style and wide range of prices is unsurpassed. Don't go to Boston and pay 10 to 15 per cent. more for same quality and in many cases inferior goods, when you can have all these goods delivered and set up in your homes without cost of freight or damage to goods.

DINING ROOM FURNITURE,

Side Boards in Walnut, Cherry and Ash, Pillar and common Extension Tables in all woods, Dining Room Chairs in Leather or Cane Seats, in Mahogany, Oak, Ash, Cherry or Walnut; Hall Stands, Hall Chairs, Settles, Hanging Hall Racks, Book Cases and Desks in large variety.

UPHOLSTERY DEPARTMENT.

Silk and Mohair, Plushes in all grades, $2 to 5 yard. Jute Velours, Foreign and Domestic Tapestries, Turkish Satins, Wool Satines, Damasks, Raw Silk Portieres, Velour Curtains, Madras Lace and other Curtains in pairs or by the yard. French and English Cretonnes 32 in., French Momie 50 in., Curtain Poles, brass trimmed in all woods, complete for 34 cts. and upwards. Brass Poles all sizes, also Sash Rods in 1-4 in., 3-8, 1-2, 1 in., 1 1-2 and 2 in sizes. Curtain work of all kinds made and designed by experienced workmen.

Upholstery work of all kinds done on the premises. Furniture re-covered and made as good as new.

Children's Carriages.

We are headquarters for the sale of Children's Carriages in Essex County carrying all the desirable styles of the Wakefield Rattan Co., Haywood Bros. & Co. and the New York and Philadelphia Manufacturers. These take a wide range in price, running from $5, 7.50, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 15, 18, 20, 21, 24, 25 to 42. We would call special attention to our new Rattan Carriage, "The Little Gem," a carriage that fills a long felt want in the carriage trade, that of combining utility, style and Low Price; this carriage we have had manufactured to our order, and ordering in immense quantities have succeeded in placing this carriage on the market for the extreme low price of $8.84. Carriages not so good as this are retailed at $12 and 14. Ask to see "The Little Gem." We invite all to visit our warerooms and examine for themselves the quantity, quality and prices of our goods before purchasing. All goods warranted as represented.

No. 76 State St., opposite Kilby, Boston;

Secures patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Copies of the claims of any patents furnished by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded at Washington. No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions. R. H. EDDY, Solicitor of patents.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse."

CHAS. MASON, Commissioner of Patents.

"Inventors cannot employ a person more trustworthy or more capable of securing for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office."

EDMUND BURKE, late Com. of Patents.

BOSTON, Oct. 19, 1870.

R. H. EDDY, Esq.—Dear Sir: you procured for me, in 1870, my first patent. Since then you have acted for and advised me in hundreds of cases, and procured many patents, re-issues and extensions. I have occasionally employed the best agencies in New York, Philadelphia and Washington, but I still give you almost the whole of my business, in your line, and advise othehr o employ you.

Yours truly, GEORGE DRAPER.

Is There No Place?

BY C. E. S.

Is there no place where wearied hearts
can rest?
Where troubled hearts can find that soothing balm
Which is the portion of the truly blest,
And those of spirit calm?

Why is it some must walk beneath the rod,
And never seem to see the light of day?
But still in darkest night must onward
plod,
Without one cheering ray?

Yet we must not despond, but ask again
For God to help us in our great despair;
And try with all the pow'r of thinking brain
To drive away our care.

A DOG THAT TRIED TO BE A GLAZIER.—A few days since "Hero," the fine St. Bernard dog belonging to the Superintendent of the Salem Lead Company, broke one of the panes of glass in his kennel. He at once went to the kitchen window and attracted the attention of Mrs. B., and the servant, and by "dog signs" pointed out the mischief, and appealed to them in mute language to go out and mend it. Failing to persuade them, he undertook the job himself. Picking from the ground with his teeth the piece of glass which had fallen out, he made several attempts to put it in place, but, having no experience as a glazier, he gave up trying and calmly awaited the return of his master. The damage was then repaired and "Hero" was happy.

The spring months are undoubtedly the best in which to purify the blood and strengthen the system, because at this time the body is most susceptible to the beneficial effects of a reliable medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla. The feeling of debility, languor, and lassitude, caused by the changing season, is entirely overcome, and scrofula and all humors are expelled from the blood by the powerful reviving and purifying influences of Hood's Sarsaparilla. Do not delay. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla now. It is made by C. I. Hood & Co., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass. Sold by all druggists. 100 Doses One Dollar.

NOT A TRACE.—Dr. D. F. Penington, D. D. S., 536 West Fayette street, Baltimore, Maryland, states that he has personally used the Red Star Cough Cure and in his family, and has found it a prompt and sure remedy for coughs and colds. No bad results of other cough remedies. Not a trace of opium or morphia.

There seem to be three "oldest churches in America"—one at Tadousac, on the St. Lawrence, one at St. Augustine, Florida, one at Espanola, New Mexico. Each has its champions, and the writer of a paper in the forth-coming May Harper's, on "Espanola and its Environs," naturally favors the latter. The paper itself, written and illustrated by Birge Harrison, is an interesting study of that old Mexican town and of the pueblos in its vicinity.

THE ROOT OF THE EVIL.—To thoroughly cure scrofula it is necessary to strike directly at the root of the evil. This is exactly what Hood's Sarsaparilla does, by acting upon the blood, thoroughly cleansing it of all impurities, and leaving not even a taint of scrofula in the vital fluid. Thousands who have been cured of scrofula by Hood's Sarsaparilla, testify to its wonderful blood purifying qualities. Sold by all druggists. (B)

MAYO'S

Compound Vegetable Anæsthetic.

A safe and pleasant substitute for gas and ether.

Discovered by Dr. N. K. Mayo of Boston, April 1883, subsequently administered by him in nearly two thousand cases, producing perfect slumber, being applicable to the child, the delicate sentitive woman as well as the hardy man. No ill effects have followed its use in any case, it acting rather as a vegetable tonic.

It controls the patient one-fourth longer than gas giving us time to remove from three to twenty teeth. It is with great confidence we have introduced it into our practice, giving very successful results.

HUDSON RIVER R. R.

CONDUCTOR MELIUS SAYS SOMETHING OF INTEREST TO ALL TRAVELLERS.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Feb. 22, 1884.

Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.:

Dear Sir: I have used your medicine, called DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, for Indigestion and Dizziness, to which I was subject at times, and know from experience that it is worthy of all that can be said of it for disorders of that kind. Respectfully,

W. S. MELIUS,
69 Harrison Street.

That DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY is extensively used along the line of the Hudson River Railroad, is shown by the following from Tarrytown. The writer is none other than Mr. DeRevere, the Station Agent of the Hudson River Railroad Company at Tarrytown, a man well known in that community

Tarrytown, N. Y., Feb. 22d, 1884.

Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.:

Dear Sir:—For a long time I was troubled with severe attacks of Dizziness and Blind Sick Headaches. I thought it was due to impure blood and a disordered state of the system. I was advised to try FAVORITE REMEDY. I did so, and have been completely cured. It's the best thing I ever heard of for any disorder of that nature, and I've recommended it to many with like success.

A. DEREVERE.

DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY is not confined in its sphere of usefulness to one state or locality, but is hailed as a boon by hundreds in every state, as the following letter from Millville, N. J., will show:

Millville, N. J.

Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.:

Dear Sir:—I had been a sufferer from Dyspepsia from the time I was sixteen years old. I had consulted various physicians, but could find no relief; therefore had almost given up in despair of ever recovering my health, when DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY was recommended, which I tried and have been cured. It's the best medicine I ever knew of, and worthy of the greatest confidence.

MRS. S. C. DOUGHERTY.

MALARIA.

As an anti-malarial medicine

DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S

FAVORITE REMEDY

has won golden opinions. No traveler should consider his outfit complete unless it includes a bottle of this medicine. If you are exposed to frequent changes of climate, food and water, Favorite Remedy should always be within your reach. It expels malarial poisons, and is the best preventative of chills and malarial fever in the world. It is especially offered as a trustworthy specific for the cure of Kidney and Liver complaints, Constipation and all disorders arising from an impure state of the blood. To women who suffer from any of the ills peculiar to their sex Favorite Remedy is constantly proving itself an unfailing friend—a real blessing. Address the proprietor, Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y. $1 bottle, 6 for $5. by all druggists.

Book Notices.

An article of very great interest to every farmer is promised for the May number of Harper's Magazine, on "Jersey Cattle in America," by Hark Comstock. Portraits are given, from direct photographs, of a number of the most notable butter-producing cows of this stock, one of which, "Alphea," owned by Col. R. M. Hoe, produced under unforced tests over twenty-nine pounds of butter a week; while her granddaughter, "Eurotas," owned by Mr. A. B. Darling, produced seven hundred and seventy eight pounds of butter in eleven months and five days. The writer, who is one of the best authorities on this subject, gives an interesting sketch of the means taken in the Channel Islands to keep the breed pure, the laws having for a hundred years back excluded all foreign cattle except such as were imported for meat, which had to be slaughtered at the port of arrival; and his remarks on the present state of the stock and its prices in this country are of practical value.

Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine for May opens with a vigorous article by Emily Pierce on "The Church in Mexico,' in which the history and present position of the Roman Catholic Church in that country is graphically described. The wanderings of the Children of Israel in the Wilderness for forty years form the subject of the fifth article on Bible History.' This article has nine illustrations. "Flowers at Funerals," by the Rev. Edward A. Rand, is a short but interesting discussion of the subject, and "Fagged and Fresh," by Leigh Norval, will please by its tender sentiment. The three serial stories are continued. Many of the illustrations are particularly appropriate to the Spring season, which, though long delayed, will surely come. The miscellany is, as usual, abundant and interesting. Published by Mrs. Frank Leslie, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

Ballou's Magazine for May has a second very acceptable illustrated article on India, very apropos at this time, as a war between Russia and England is imminent, on account of the continual pushing of the former nation. It will be read with interest. Then comes the thrilling yarn of "Lewey and I; or, Sailor Boys' Wanderings," by Wm. H. Thomes, author of "The Belle of Australia," and "On Land and Sea," two very popular books. The story is growing in interest, and promises well. This is not a romance, but a remarkable collection of facts. The rest of Ballou's is devoted to short stories, poems, wit and humor, and illustrations, and all for the price of 15 cents per copy, or $1.50 per year. Address, Thomes & Talbot, 23 Hawley St., Boston, Mass.

The April number of The Bay State contains several interesting papers, among which we mention a sketch with fine portrait of Charles Carleton Coffin, the widely known "Carleton" of the Boston Journal, one of the foremost journalists in the country; Shem Drowne and his handiwork; Divorce in Massachusetts; Old Dorchester; Col. John B. Clark, with portrait, of the Manchester (N. H.) Mirror, and Denman Thompson—all very entertaining. To the local character of the contents of the Bay State is due its rapidly growing popularity among intelligen people, and besides, everything found in it, is fresh, racy and readable. The Bay State is published by John N. McClintock & Co., Boston.

The editions of The Century Magazine are now so large that it has become necessary either to go to press at an earlier date or to postpone the day of issue. The latter alternative has been accepted. The April number, the edition of which was 225,000, was delayed until the 25 h of March. The May number—edition, 250,000—will be issued on the 1st day of May, thus inaugurating with the first number of the thirtieth volume a change which has long been considered desirable by the publishers, and which it is believed will be heartily commended by the public. Future numbers of The Century Magazine will be issued on the 1st day of the month of which each bears date.

The current number of the Season is filled with good things in every department. The fashion plates from the latest London designs outline the choicest patterns, and are almost indispensible to the dressmaker or our lady readers who are interested in knowing what is best and newest. Patterns for everything—designs for needle-work and embroidery, with full directions and fashion reports and gossip make up the best number of the year. Published by the International News Co., New York City.

DESTROY THAT SIGN.—One may feel that he's getting old, but he naturally dislikes that anything about his appearance should advise others of the fact. Yet nothing does this so effectually as thin and falling hair. No woman wants to marry a man, and business firms hesitate to employ a man who shows this fatal sign. Parker's Hair Balsam is worth to you, in this regard, more than its weight in diamonds. Use it, and have plentiful and glossy hair. Many have had every trace of grayness removed and bald spots covered by using a single bottle.

SPARKS.

Saturday evening at 8.40 o'clock an alarm of fire was started by some one on Main street, and was taken up by the bell on the central station and the bell on the South Church. The apparatus from the brick house started out heading up Foster street, thinking by the thick smoke which hung over that street, that a fire was in progress, but not finding anything there, turned and went down Main street as far as the line only to discover that the alarm was false. Hose 2 and 3 got down to the old monument, and No. 4 started for the Square. Engineer Folsom had a narrow escape from serious injury while assisting to hitch up old "Charlie" the horse of Hose 1. The horse had one of his tantrums, rearing up on his hind legs and winding up by falling to the floor on top of Mr. Folsom but luckily caused him no injury, beyond squeezing his breath out of him for a few minutes. The whole scene did not occupy over two minutes and the Hose went out first. The horse works well in everything except the hitching out. For the last two or three months the horse has acted perfectly until Saturday night. No blame can be attached to anyone for the behavior of the horse and the only way to cure him is to sell him before he injures anyone. The shaft of the hose carriage was broken in the fall.

The insurance on the Clerk factory has been adjusted for $1809, and on the machinery for $718.50. The loss on the stock of J. A. Davis was adjusted Monday, and the insurance settled at $464.50, through the agency of O. B. Chadwick & Co. The insurance on the stocks of Quirin and of L. Beebe & Sons was settled in Boston. Work will be pushed on rebuilding the burned building.

A large and interested crowd of spectators stood on the city lot at Perkins park, Brockton, Thursday afternoon, to witness the trial between the Harden and Hayward hand grenades, and which was made to prove the superiority of one of these fire extinguishers. Members of the fire department and city officials were present, and with the others, saw the two buildings which had been erected for the purpose, fired and extinguished. It seemed to be the general verdict that the Harden grenade was somewhat quicker in extinguishing the wood fire than its rival, though all agreed that the Hayward grenade excelled in subduing the hot blaze which came from the kerosene conflagration. The entertainment served to while away an idle Fast day hour for many who perhaps otherwise would have died of ennui.

President Gray of the New England Insurance Exchange was in town Monday afternoon, looking after the interests of the Exchange.

Slight fires were plenty Saturday, there being one in a house on Washington street, and a grass fire around the house of Silas Smith on Lowell street, set by children, and another near the house of Elizabeth Wilson on Andover street, and prompt work was required to prevent their getting into the buildings.

Last Saturday afternoon Mabel Buxton, daughter of Mr. H. S. Buxton, living on Andover street, had a narrow escape from being badly burned. She was putting out some burning grass when her clothes caught fire and but for the prompt action of her mother, who was also somewhat burned in putting out the flames, we might have have had a more sad accident to chronicle.

At the meeting of the Board of Engineers held last Wednesday evening, James E. Millea and James Jeffers received honorable discharges from the fire department.

A piece of two and one half inch suction hose has been purchased for Steamer 2, to take the place of the larger hose when working at a hydrant. It is thought that this will do away with the jumping of the engine when working.

4100 feet of hose was wet at the Clerk fire.

The News reccommends gongs for the steamers. Steamer 2 made application some time ago to the Engineers to have one put on their machine, and it was referred to the committee on repairs, but nothing has ever been heard of it since.

The Selectmen will appoint the Board of Engineers at their meeting Saturday.

Most of the new lists for the next year are made up.

The fire reporter of the Waltham Record was present at the skating rink last evening. He was in full regulation uniform and was present to report the polo game for his paper.

Samuel Standley, the gipsy horse dealer, had a pair of horses at the engine house this morning which he wished to sell to the town for the use of the fire department.

The department has turned out in answer to seven alarms since the first of January, five of them being working fires, one false, and one put out without theaid of the department, although hose was laid. Z.

The proprietors of the South Church held their annual meeting last Monday evening: Richard Smith was elected Moderator. Standing Committee, F. Osborne, H. H. Proctor and C. C. Pike; Secretary, Arthur F. Poole; Treasurer, A. F. Clark; Music Committee, S. E. Cassino, George H. Poor, J. K. Cole.

About 7000 people leave Boston on the Old Colony Railroad each day. The increasing traffic necessitated a better ticket office, and the old one has been enlarged and improved until it is considered a model. Mr. George L. Keyes who made hosts of friends as superintendent of the Nantasket Beach road, is in charge of it.

Look at the new advertisement of F. W. Lucas & Co. It will pay to read it. Mr. Lucas makes a specialty of goods for the fine trade. He carries all the New York boots, all the choicest things to be found either in Boston or New York. At the same time it must not be imagined that Mr. Lucas carries no other than fine goods. He carries everything to be found in a first class boot and shoe store, and he will not be undersold for the same quality of goods.

Do our readers know that on Frank Cousins' Bargain counter, at the Bee Hive, Salem, there is always to be found something worth their notice? The goods are changed every day, and it will be well to always visit his store. The goods are not always advertised. He does not wish to give the prices away for the benefit of other dealers. But there is always something choice and really a bargain. See if we are not correct.

SKATING RINK NOTES.

Last evening ended the league games here, the Woburns being the last club to play with, and they were strengthened by securing Seeley, Bolan and Hargrave making a very strong team. The manager of the Woburns saw that their only chance for taking third medals was in securing a stronger team and for that reason secured the above noted players. But Manager McCully also was up to time and secured the services of Cotter and Smith, late of the Walthams, who played in Sullivan and Waterhouse's positions. The largest party was present that ever attended the rink, fully 1100 people, many coming from Woburn, expecting of course to defeat our boys. The best of order prevailed and both clubs were loudly cheered on entering the skating surface. At 9.05, referee O'Malley blew his whistle and the following men took their positions:

Peabodys.		Woburns.
Cotter	Rushers	Pierce
Felton		Seeley
Morrill	Goal	Kirk
Murray	Centre	Kennedy
Phalen	Half-back	Hargrave
Smith	Cover point	Bolan

The first rush was won by Tommy Cotter who sent the ball at a terrific rate towards the Woburns goal, but was quickly stopped and soon returned, and for the space of 2m. and 15s. there was some sharp playing, when Phalen by a beautiful side blow goaled it for the home club, and they were greeted with loud applause. To swell the noise, several boys had fish horns, and the way they blew them was a caution. After the referee had announced the official time of the goal, manager McCully requested that the blowing of horns be suspended. The referee also said that he wished that no one would blow a whistle during the play, and wished that they would keep as quiet as possible. The second rush was won by Pierce of the visiting club. During this goal Seeley, Cotter and Bolan distinguished themselves by some very fine plays, as also did Morrill. Kennedy by a lucky blow sent the ball into the Peabody's cage in 5m. 15s. The third rush and goal was won by Cotter, who sent it into the Woburns goal in the short space of 3s., and was greeted with great applause. The fourth and last rush was won by Cotter who had secured all but one of the rushes. The ball was sent towards the Woburns goal, but it was soon returned to the opposite end, Seeley making some of his fine runs, but was met every time by Cotter and after a play of 5m. and 30s. the rubber was soon caged by Cotter, winning the game for the home club.

In Cotter and Smith the Walthams have two of the best players in the country, who in their short stay here made a host of friends. Our boys played as they never played before and showed that they can play polo, and if they only had the chance of more practice, no doubt would have taken a better position in the league. On Friday night the return game will be played in Woburn and a large party of friends will go with them.

It is understood that Cotter receives a purse by securing a goal on the rush, and he had made several this winter.

The Woburn Club was accompanied by a large number of friends from that town.

A young lady named Bresnehan was struck in the face by the ball last evening and somewhat injured.

The gentlemanly reporter of the Waltham Record was at the rink last night. Had he made himself known the boys would have shown him the town.

Young America can't be suppressed. When Manager McCully said last night he didn't want to hear any fish horns, one was blown as soon as he got through speaking.

The Peabodys play a game of polo with the Woburns next Friday night.

There will be a fancy dress carnival at the rink Tuesday evening, April 28.

The Peabodys and Gloucesters met at the rink last Thursday evening in their third game of polo. A fair sized audience was present, many being from out of town and the fine playing of both sides was liberally applauded. Andrew Jackson, of Lynn, was referee. The game was a rough one, as are all games played with the Gloucesters. Felton of the Peabodys got the first rush, and the Gloucesters the goal in 5 m. 10 s. Doe, of the Gloucesters, got the second rush and that club secured the goal in 1 m. The third rush was secured by the Peabodys and the goal to the Gloucesters by Morrill, the Peabody goal tender, accidentally kicking the ball into the goal. Time 5 m. and 5 s.

The St. John's C. T. A. Society polo team visited Marblehead last Thursday evening, and after a play with the Father Mathew team of that town, withdrew the game, owing to the decision of the referee.

Perry, of the Gloucesters, had his finger broken by a polo stick at the rink last Thursday night.

The concluding game in the series between the Peabody and Gloucester polo team was played at Gloucester last Friday evening. The first goal was won by the Gloucesters in 8 m., the second in 1 m. 10 s. and the third in 2 m. 15 s., making three straight for the Gloucesters.

About the meanest thing you can say to a member of our Polo club is, that he plays a shinney game.

Roller skates, pretty girl; crack in floor, giddy whirl. Dull thud, broken arm; anxious parents, much alarm. Bones set, many hollers; doctor's bill twenty dollars.

The Odds and Evens played a game of polo at the rink last Wednesday evening, and resulted in a victory for both sides. The clubs consisted of business men and clerks who had but limited experience up to that time. But the experience gained there, will make it even more odd if they are able to play again for a fortnight.

The windows of the Naumkeag Clothing Co., are filled with a choice assortment of goods for the spring trade, and Mr. Gallup is ever on the alert for the wants of his large trade. No one knows better what his patrons need; and he always has it and at the lowest prices. By fair dealing this house is second to none in the country. People are pleased with their purchases and return again and again, without a thought of any other store. This is a trade worth having.

Have our readers noticed the fine cut of a gent's shoe, which is in Wellman Osborne's advertisement this week? It is the shoe Mr. Osborne sells for $3, and is warranted in every respect to be fine goods, well made, and a good fit. It will pay those of our readers who are in Lynn to look at Mr. Osborne's stock of goods. They will be astonished at many things they will see.

A Singer's Mode of Life.—Singers have the reputation of being capricious, because they are exacting in matters of food. The average landlord thinks that what is good enough for one of his guests is good enough for all, making no exception of the artist. Mme. Patti has encountered this landlord, so she travels with her own chef, who prepares her meals for her. This is not caprice; it is a necessity. It is not that she wants such a variety of elaborately prepared food, but that she wants what she has to be thoroughly nutritious and digestible. If she suffers from indigestion it affects her voice. Colds are not the singer's only enemies. Ill prepared and unsuitable food is as injurious to her voice as a draught of cold air. A celebrated professor in Rome told Charlotte Cushman that there were three things neccessary for a prima-donna to do—eat, sleep, and sing. Not a very intellectual programme, you say; and I quite agree with you. When a singer is singing, she has to live the most regular and systematic life. She eats her dinner at three o'clock in the afternoon, or four at the latest, and it is two or three hours before she goes to the theatre, and another hour and a half before she sings, or four hours in all between eating and singing. After the opera she may eat the little supper that is so highly prized by all "professional" people, not because of its conviviality, for it must be very simple and light, but rather because it can be eaten with the knowledge there is plenty of time for digestion. Sweets, highly spiced food of any kind, and nuts, must be carefully avoided by the singer, and even icewater is one of the worst things for the throat. It should never be drank just before singing, for it leaves the singer as hoarse as if she had caught a violent cold. She cannot drink, yet the exercise of singing makes her want something to moisten her throat with. Different singers use different drinks for refreshing the throat, according as their experience has taught them. I have found beef tea to be of great service. I have known some singers to use a gargle. Le Franc, the tenor, famous for his high C, used a salt and water gargle, The singers of a past generation depended a great deal upon sulphur, and so do those of to-day, only they take smaller doses. They take it homœpathically. Patti, I am told, puts a great deal of dependence upon hepar sulphur. I use it, too, and so do other singers who are homœpathists for they find that prevention for their ailments. Nine hours a day—or never less than eight—are necessary for a singer to sleep, for her nervous force is heavily taxed. She must "make her exercises" for a certain length of time every day, for—to pharaphrase Lizt—when she fails to practice one day, she observes it herself, and when she fails for two days her friends observe it, and when she fails for three days, the public observe it.—Clara Louise Kellogg in the Critic.

It is announced that the time will soon be here when the festive schoolboy takes his "sneak" and steals away to the banks of some babbling brook, and tempts the giddy sucker with a dried up angle worm and a piece of red flannel.

A neatly executed ten dollar counterfeit bill has recently been passed on several Boston tradesmen and lodging house keepers by a fellow who is described as being about 27 years of age, of light complexion, and medium height. The counterfeit consists in the alteration of a two dollar Treasury note with a Jefferson head. This is done by pasting the figure "ten" over the figure "two" in the right hand corner of the note, and changing the letters "wo" in "two" in the printed part of the bill to "en." This latter part of the counterfeiting is in some of the bills made by erasures and in others by pasting the words "ten dollars" over "two dollars." Wherever the word "two" appears in the printed part of the bill, it is erased or changed. A close inspection of the bill readily shows the alterations. He was last heard from in Lynn, look out for him.

Chicken Coop.—An incident told by an Inspector of Schools, shows the importance of a careful oversight of the ventilating apparatus. Upon visiting a school-house the inspector noticed the impure air of the rooms and questioned the janitor on the cause, but was unable to discover the exact reason. The janitor took him to the basement, where he saw four furnaces in operation and where he also noticed the odor of chickens. The peculiarity of the circumstance caused him to investigate further, and he found that the air box had been converted into a coop, carefully boarded up. The hens were having a snug little time, but the inspector thought he had found foul air, indeed.—Boston Journal.

Commenting on the statement of the Boston Journal that, in view of the reappointment of postmaster Pearson, postmaster Tobey might confidently expect to be his own successor, the Waltham Record says: "The country journals within suffering distance of the Boston postoffice will hold up their hands in holy horror at the possible reappointment of his Incompetency Postmaster Tobey. The difference between the two postmasters is that one commenced at the bottom and has worked the top, while the other commenced at the top and can't hold on.

Poet's Corner.

Romance and Reality.

BY CLARA B. COFFEY.

I think of that beautiful summer
So many long years ago,
When the lilies bloomed by the brookside,
Where the blue-eyed violets grow,
When Earnest, my brave young lover,
Came courting me in the eve,
When he whispered soft words in my ear
And I thought he could never deceive.

Ah! we planned out our future so golden,
With love in a cottage, you see,
Where we would live happy on nothing
And be from all sorrow set free;
And we talked of the balls and the drama
And the people we meant to snub,
And how he would stay home at evening
And not go, like some, "to the club."

When none but words the most loving
Should fall from the lips of each—
To tell the truth we were both young fools,
For we thought this was all in our reach.
Well, in due course of time we were married,
And then we began to find
That love in a cottage will do well enough,
If there's plenty of money behind!

But the prospects are not very pleasant
Unless so, because without doubt,
You get into debt, want stalks through the door,
While love through the window flies out.
Then it soon got to be in the evening,
He'd be restless, and worry and frown;
At last would exclaim: "I am sorry, my dear,
I must see a man that's uptown."

And as for the balls and the drama,
I have not been to one in five years,
My dramas I find in the wash-tub
My balls are dissolved in my tears.
Ah! this is a world of wonder,
And our lives but a game of chance,
And I'm sitting alone in the house,
Mending the old man's pants.

Abi in Pace.

BY LILLA N. CUSHMAN.

It is too late! your soul can never, no never, mate with mine;
No more I walk in thraldom—you have ceased to seem divine;
The love I madly pined for, it was Dead Sea fruit, at best—
Had I tasted, I should ever have wandered seeking rest.

I loved you once!—what matter? I have seen far worthier men;
You have no more right to question, or ask me how, or when
My spirit burst its fetters;—you have ceased the right to know
How I reached the height above you, while you still must grope below.

Did I love you? I was human; you taught me how to love—
Pledging by all things sacred in earth and heaven above,
That your hopes in me were centered,—that all things else might change—
Aye! though death should us dissever, he could not our hearts estrange.

If I fell by wayside weeping, what matters it to thee!
You thrust me from you blindly, and the world proclaimed you free;
Yet over your pathway lingers a cloud that darker grows—
Others may deem you happy, but one heart the falsehood knows.

Am I happy? what avails it if I should tell you "yea?"
It could never change my future, no more than if 'twere "nay."
Though the lesson cost me dearly, 'tis graven on my heart,
And I feel 'tis wiser, better, we should henceforth walk apart.

Common Deeds of the Common Day.

BY H. BURTON.

Never a word is said,
But it trembles in the air,
And the truant voice has sped,
To vibrate everywhere;
And perhaps far off in eternal years
The echo may ring upon our ears.

Never are kind acts done
To wipe the weeping eyes,
But, like flashes the sun,
They signal to the skies;
And up above the angels read
Now we have helped the sorer need.

Never a day is given
But it tones the after years,
And it carries up to heaven
Its sunshine or its tears;
hile the to-morrow stand and wait,
The silent mutes by the outer gate.

There is no end to the sky,
And the stars are everywhere,
And time is eternity,
And the here is over there;
For the common deeds of the common day
Are ringing bells in the far away.

Woman Suffrage.

ARGUMENT IN FAVOR OF THE REMONSTRANTS.

From a paper written by Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney, and read before the Committee on Woman Suffrage, at the "Hearing" of the remonstrants, March 9th, 1885.

The external arguments on both sides the modern woman question have been pretty thoroughly presented and well argued. It seems needless to repeat or recombine them; but in one relation they have scarcely been handled with any direct purpose. Justice and expediency have been the points insisted on or contested; they have not gone back far enough; they have not touched the central fact, to set it forth in its force and finality. The fact is original and inherent, behind and at the root of the entire matter, with all its complication and circumstance. We have to ask a question to which it is the answer, and whose answer is that of the whole doubt and dispute.

What is the law of woman life?

What was she made woman for and not man?

Take this for the starting point; it is the key.

Within, behind, antecedent to all result in action, are the place and office of the woman—by the law of woman life. And all question of her deed and duty should be brought to this test. Is it of her own interior, natural relation, putting her at her true advantage, harmonious with the key to which her life is set? I think this suffrage question must settle itself precisely upon this ground-principle, and that all argument should range conclusively around it. Judging so, we would find, I think, that not at the polls, where the last utterance of a people's voice is given—where the results of character and conscience, and intelligence are shown,—is her best and rightful work; on the contrary, that is useless here, unless first done elsewhere. But where little children learn to think and speak,—where men love and listen, and the word is forming,—is the office she has to fill, the errand she has to do. The question is, can she do both? Is there need that she should do both? Does not the former and greater include the later and less?

Hers are indeed the primary meetings; in her nursery, her home, and social circle; with other women, with young men, upon whose tone and character in her maturity, her womanhood and motherhood join their beautiful and mighty influence; above all, among young girls—the "little women," to whom the ensign and commission are descending—is her undisputed power. Purify politics? Purify the sewers? But what if, first, the springs, and reservoirs, and conduits could be watched, guarded, filtered, and then the using be made clean and careful all through the homes; a better system devised and carried out for separating, neutralizing, destroying hurtful refuse? Then the poisonous gases might not be creeping back upon us through our enforced economies, our makeshifts and stop-gaps of outside legislation. For legislation is, after all, but cut-off, curb, and patch; an external, troublesome, partial, uncertain application of hindrance and remedy. What physician will work with lotion and plaster, when he can touch, and control, and heal at the very seat of the disease?

For good or for evil, woman mothers the world. Not all are called to motherhood in the literal sense, but are called to the great, true motherhood in some of its manifold trusts and obligations. "Noblesse oblige;" you cannot lay it down. "More are the children of the desolate than of her who hath a husband." All the little children that are born must look to womanhood somewhere for mothering. Do they all get it?

Indeed the whole cause on trial may be summarily ended by the proving of an alibi, an elsewhere of demand. Is woman needed at the caucuses, conventions, polls? She is needed at the same time elsewhere? Two years of time and strength, of thought and love, from some woman, are essential for every little human being, that he may even begin a new life. When you remember that every man is once a little child, born of a woman, trained—or needing training—at a woman's hand; that of the little men, every one whom takes and shapes his life so, comes at length the hand for the helm, the voice for the law, and the arm to enforce the law—what do you want more for a woman's opportunity and control?

Woman has got off the track; she must see that first and replace herself. We are mothering the world still; but we are mothering it in a fearfully wide measure, or, all wrong.

We are not to organize the world, or to conquer it, or to queen it. We are just to take it again and mother it. If woman would begin that, search out the cradle—of life and character—and take care of the whole world of fifty years hence in taking care of them, calling upon men and the State, when needful, to authorize her action and furnish outward means for it,—I wonder what might come, as earnest of good, even in this our day, in which we know not our visitation?

And here again come allowance and exception for what women can always do when this world-mothering forces an appeal to the strength and authority of man, women have never been prevented from doing their real errands in the world, even outside the domestic boundary. They have defended their husband's castles in the old chivalrous times, when the male chivalry was away at the Crusades. They have headed armies when Heaven called them; only Heaven never called all the women at once; but when the king was crowned, the mission done, they have turned back with desire to their sheltered, gentle unobtrusive life again. There has no business to be a standing army of women; not even a standing political army. Women have navigated and brought home ships when commanders have died or been stricken helpless upon the ocean; they have done true, intelligent, patient work for science, art, religion; and those have done the most who have never stopped to contend first, whether a woman, as such, may do it or not. And when a woman does these things, as called of God,—not talks of them, as to whether she may claim to do them—she carries a weight from the very sanctity out of which the steps, as woman, that moves men unlike the moving of any other power. Shall she resign the chance of doing really good things, of meeting grand cries by making herself common in ward-rooms and at street corners, and abolishing the perfect idea of home by no longer consecrating herself to it?

If individual woman may gain and influence individual man, and so the man-power in affairs,—a body of women, purely as such, with cause, and plea, and reason can always have the ear and attention of bodies of men; but, to do this, they must come straight from their home sanctities, as representing them,—as able to represent them otherwise than men, because of their hearth-priestesshood; not as politicians; bred and hardened in the public arenas.

There must needs be exceptional women, perhaps; there are and will be, time and errand and place for them; but Heaven forbid that they should all become exceptional.

The voice which has of late been so generally conceded to women in town decisions as regarding public schools, is an instance of the fittingness of relegating to them certain interests of which they should know more than men, because—applying the key-test with which we have started—it has direct relation to and springs from their motherhood. But can one help suggesting, that if the movement had been to place women, merely and directly, upon the committee, by votes of men who saw that this work might be in great part best done by them; if women had asked and offered for the place without the jostle of the town-meeting, or putting in that wedge for the ballot, the thing might have been as readily done, and the objection, or political precedent avoided?

It is not the real opportunity, when that arises or shows itself in the line of her life-law, that is to be refused for woman. It is the taking from internal power to add to external complication of machinery and to the friction of strife. Let us just touch upon some of the current arguments concerning these external impositions which one set is demanding and the other entreating against.

If voting is to be the chief power in woman's hands, or even a power of half the moment that is contended for, it will grow to be the motive and end, the all absorbing object with women that it is with men.

The gubernatorial canvass, the presidential year—these will interrupt and clog all home business, suspend decisions, paralyze plans as they do with men, or else we shall not be much, as thorough politicians, after all. And if we talk of mending all that—of putting politics in their right place, and governing by pure principle instead of party trick, and stumping and electioneering—we go back in effect that acknowledgement that only in the interior work, and behind politics, can women do better things at all; which, precisely was to be demonstrated.

Think simply, of election day for women. Would it be so invariably easy a thing for a house-keeper to do, at the one opportunity of the year, or the four years, on a particular day, her duty in this matter? It is easy to say that it takes no more time than a hundred other things that some do; but setting apart all the argument that previous time and strength must have been spent in properly qualifying, how many of the hundred other things are done now without interruption, postponement, hindrance, through domestic contingencies? or are there a hundred other things done when the home contingencies are really met by a woman? A woman's life is not like a man's. That a man's life may be—that he may transact his out-door business; keep his hours and appointments; may cast his vote on election day; may represent wife and children in all wherein the community cares for, or might injure him for them—the woman, some woman must be at the home post, that the home order may go on, from which he derives that command of time, and freedom from hindering necessities, which leave him to his work. And so, as the old proverb says, while man's work is from sun to sun,—made definite a matter to which he can go forth, and from which he can come in,—a woman's work of keeping the place of the forthgoing and incoming, is never done from the very nature and ceaseless importance of it.

Must she go to the polls, sick or well, baby or no baby, servant or no servant, strength or no strength, desire or no desire? If she have cook and housemaid they are to go also; probably on election day, which they would make a holiday, they would, as at other crises, of birth, sickness, death, house-cleaning, which should occur in no first-class families—come down upon her with their appropriate coupd'etat, and "leave"; making the State-stroke in this instance of scoring three votes two dropped and one lost, for the irrepressible side.

But the argument does not rest upon any such points as these. It rests upon the inside nature of a woman's work; upon the need there is to begin again to-day at the heart of things and make that right; upon the evident fact that this can be done none to soon or earnestly, if the community and the country are not to keep on in the broad way to a threatened destruction; and upon the certainty that it can never be done unless it is done by woman, and with all of woman's might. Not by struggles for new and different place, but by the better, more loving, more intelligent, deep-seeing and deep-feeling filling of her own place, that none will dispute and none can take from her. We are not where woman was in the old brutal days that are so often quoted; and we shall not, need not, return to that. Christianity has disposed of that sort of argument. We are on a vantage ground for the doing of our real essential work better than it has been done ever before in the history of the world; and we are madly leaving our work and our vantage together. The great step made by woman was in the generation preceding this one of restlessness—the restlessness that has come through the first feeling of great power. It was made in the time when women learned physiology, that they might rear and nurse their families and help their neighborhoods understandingly; science that they might teach and answer little children, and share the joy of knowledge that was spreading swiftly in the earth; political history and economy, that they might listen and talk to their brothers and husbands and sons, and leaven the life of the age as the bread in the mixing; business figures, rules and principles that they might sympathize, counsel help and prudently work with and honestly strengthen the bread-winners. The good work was begun in the schools where girls were first told, as George B. Emerson used to tell us Boston girls, that we were learning everything he could teach us, in order to be women: wives, mothers, friends, social influencers, in the best and largest way possible. Woman grew strong and capable under such instruction and motive. Are their daughters and granddaugters about to leap the fence, leave their own realms little cared for,—or doomed to be, undertake the whole scheme of outside creation or contest it with the men? Then God help the men. God save the Commonwealth!

To-morrow night Miss Margaret Mather will appear at the opera house as Pauline in the "Lady of Lyons." This well known play of Bulwer's has a picturesque charm which pleases the popular fancy. This is particularly true with regard to the feminine sex. Although the title suggests the heroine as the dominant feature, the drama unfolds a plan of action widely at variance with this and projects the patrician lady upon the sense as a sort of noble incitement to the best development of the hero "Claude Melnotte." In the arrangement of nearly every story is a central figure the inherent character of which pervades with a controlling interest the beauty and force of every chapter, and finally arbitrates its virtuous destiny. In the story of this play the honors are divided and an average treatment would favor "Claude." Miss Mather, however, as has been demonstrated, is an actress of no moderate powers, and, no matter what the intent of the author, the character, if drawn to represent any leading interest, must under the creative touch of her genius, become a picture of life, distinct, beautiful and strong. Miss Mather lifts the part of "Pauline" above the conditions of the play and gives it an importance as far above the author's apparent spirit as the audience could wish through a delightful sense of present enjoyment. From the moment of her happy introduction to the humble home of the Melnottes to her wretched exit from the scene of her awakening no honest criticism can find a blemish worth mention. Easy, graceful and natural, gradually passing from a mirthful regard of what may be jest to the miserable sense of its seriousness, Miss Mather gives to this episode in the experience of a betrayed but loving "Pauline" a depth of feeling in subdued force as palpable and intelligent in effect as it is artistically fine in method. Altogether Miss Mather's "Pauline" is a portraiture free from any storm of passion or undue emotion, but touched by a natural warmth and artistic coloring which gives it the identity of soul and engenders a sympathy very unusual to the quality of this play. The Providence Journal of January 31 in its criticism of Miss Mather's Pauline then said:—"To say that the performance of the "Lady of Lyons" at the Providence Opera House, last evening, was a success is but to say something that, assuredly, every one expected. The house was literally packed. The performance of the Lady of Lyons was perfectly in keeping with the work that Miss Mather and her supporting company have already done this week. Miss Mather, as "Pauline" was very near perfection. She showed to particular advantage in the third act, but was throughout forcible and refined. Mr. Frederick Paulding as "Claude Melnotte performed the most difficult part in the play, and although at times he spoke unnecessarily loud, yet his impersonation was remarkably good. Five times was he called to the front, on four occasions in company with Miss Mather.

GOOD SOUND PREACHING.—The minister of a fashionable church in Harrisburg, who was being continually interrupted by the violent coughing of one of his flock, stopped suddenly in the midst of his sermon and requested the congregation to take up a collection for the purpose of supplying the noisy brother with a bottle of Red Star Cough Cure. This newly discovered anti-narcotic remedy is becoming extremely popular on account of its wonderful efficacy. Postmaster Adreon, of Baltimore, endorses it highly, and the Commissioner of Health of the same city certifies officially that it is a most valuable and effective discovery.

Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier and regulating medicine, is characterized by three peculiarities, namely:

1st: The combination of the various remedial agents used.

2d: The proportion in which the roots, herbs, barks, etc., are mixed.

3d: The process by which the active medicinal properties are secured.

The result is a medicine of unusual strength and curative power, which effects cures heretofore unequalled. These peculiarities belong exclusively to Hood's Sarsaparilla, and are

STREET
GOSSIP,
AS GLEANED
BY NOTES
Mulcahy

Last Thursday night with the rest of a virtuous community, I paid my quarter to witness a game of polo between two female polo teams, at our rink. I noticed that the various religious denominations were represented as usual, and it was a red letter day for the boys and they occupied the front row. Not one was missing when the roll was called. I noticed your Rink reporter present, but he took me to one side and gave me a cigar, saying, that he was only induced to go by an imperative order from the "boss" and a free ticket. He told me further with tears in his eyes, that he received a hint that if he failed to do his duty his salary would be cut down $1000 per annum. And when he thought of his seven motherless children and their consequent sufferings, he decided not to displease his commander-in-chief and—waste the ticket. I had hardly got my position, when I noticed that beside me stood one of the town officials, whose duty of course compelled him, much against his will, to be present. I next turned my attention to the center of attraction, the female teams. Their costumes were the regular thing, neat but not gaudy, well filled, but not too long. The referee seemed to be a very modest young man, and would blush whenever the fair players spoke to him. I should judge he was selected for his modesty, as I noticed that instead of fixing a skate when it broke, he would call a skate boy and then go take a drink—of water. The game was a dizzy one, the ten brunettes would strike the ball after the style of a woman throwing a stone at a hen, and with fully as accurate a shot. The audience seemed to think the time to cheer and encore was when one of the "darlings" fell down and got up rubbing the hamburg edging on her knee. Oh! it was a great day, and I hope your Rink reporter will do it justice.

I suppose it is too bad to give the police away too often, but I got the following on pretty good authority. A short time ago, three of the "finest" were spotting a suspected liquor shop, and better to enable one of them to see, without being seen, he was hugging up close to a dwelling house, when a window above him opened and a bucket full of slops were thrown upon him by the occupant who was unconscious of his presence. He did not dare to retreat for fear of being discovered and had to grin and bear it. They decided to keep the adventure to themselves, but somehow it leaked out.

I wonder if our local lodge of Odd Fellows is aware that the sixty-sixth anniversary of Odd Fellowship occurs April 26th, and that the grand sire and grand master each have requested its celebration. I havn't seen anything in the PRESS about it, and I was wondering if any celebration had been arranged.

One of our business men who had been "bored by certain insurance agents disposed of one of that silver tongued fraternity very quickly, the other day. The talking machine had come in with his statistics, etc., which shows all the good points in the business and said: "Are you insured Mr.—". "Yes, sir." In what company do you carry a risk." "In the Lord's," was the laconic reply. The picturer of grim death with a bland smile asked, "Do you keep your premiums paid up." "None of your d—m business," came the astonishing reply, and the painter of the "sunny side for a second husband and the remainder of "the family" sadly departed.

There is one thing that in my opinion has been carried to excess in this town and that is, every time an entertainment is arranged for, to send out a lot of children to sell tickets from door to door. There are many who buy them simply because they don't like to refuse the child of a friend, and many times when they can ill afford too. A short time ago, a social club connected with one of our churches, sold tickets in this way, the mother directing the child where to go to sell them. The child returned and said that Mrs. So and So would not take one. "Well, she is awful close and stingy," remarked the mother in the presence of her child. A few days later the remark was repeated to a child of the woman who had felt she could not afford to buy tickets, and it reached her mother's ear. It was a cutting remark and the sensitive mother will feel next time compelled to purchase a ticket to save her reputation.

THE DRAMA.

Excepting on Saturday next, which has been set apart for the grand Vincent testimonial performances, the attraction at the Boston Museum, the present week, will be Augustin Daly's "pique." It will have the advantage on the occasion of the present revival of a cast extraordinarily strong. Mr. Barron is to play Captain Standish, and Mr. Hudson will be seen as the mill owner of the iron mill. The young millionnaire will be impersonated by George W. Wilson. Annie Clarke, of course, is to appear as Mabel Renfrew. Miss Thompson plays the Mary Standish role, Mrs. J. R. Vincent will be Aunt Dorothy, and Miriam O'Leary the waif, Raitch.

There are a few people—a very few, however,—who cannot enjoy rollicking fun, even when it comes, naturally enough, in the course of a merry skit that satirizes men and things as they exist in the world. Such folks might sit through a performance of Hoyt's "Tin Soldier" at the Bijou and never yield for a moment to the contagion of honest mirth which is in the air. But they would be in the most hopeless kind of a minority. "A Tin Soldier" will be acted throughout the present week only on the Bijou stage. In point of dialogue it is one of the brightest pieces of work that Mr. Hoyt has given the stage and merits the favor accorded here as elsewhere by the public.

"A tidal wave of merriment" is the way Evans & Hoey characterize the success which they introduce to the Park Theatre this week. The piece, "A Parlor Match," is one of Mr. Chas. H. Hoyt's hits. McCorker, "literary man," otherwise book agent, and Old Hoss, travelling collector for an auction room, play important parts in the piece, being personated by Charles E. Evans and William Hoey respectively. Jennie Yeamans takes a capital role, Innocent Kidd, and it may be taken for granted leaves nothing undone to please an audience. The "spiritualistic" satire and other points in "A Parlor Match" are said to be unique in effect. Daniel Hart and Frank J. Campbell, Mattie Ferguson and Emelie Edwards are included in the company, whose engagements is for the current week only.

Once again to the fore comes "Napoleon" Haverly. He brings to the Boston Theatre this week his new aggregation of burnt-cork performers. The list of talent includes the best of his European and American minstrel organizations. There are also noteworthy special accessions. Chief among these is the famous Cragg family of acrobats from England. They have made a great sensation everywhere. Their intricate and difficult performances, indeed, have been pronounced unparalleled. Among the troupe are Duncan, with his ventriloquism; Martin Hogan, tenor, late of the Carl Rosa company, and Raymond Shaw, the male alto—the two latter engaged especially in England. A large orchestra will take part. The singing choir is to be remarkable for numbers and character. "London Lights," announced as a salamantic black-visaged melodrama, will close the long and interesting programme of the present week, to which the Haverly engagement is limited.

W. F. Owen, a comedian and character actor, well known and much liked here, has been engaged for the Boston Museum stock company next season.

Estelle Clayton will bring to the Park stage next week, "Favette," now in prosperous course at the Union Square Theatre, New York. The company includes Frederic De Belleville, William Davidge, W. Constance Murielle, Ida Muelle.

William Davidge, the elder, now with Margaret Mather's company, celebrated his seventy-third birthday on Friday last.

At the Madison Square Theatre, in New York, on the 13th inst., was produced a beautiful society play called "Sealed Instructions," written by a young American widow, Mrs. Julia Campbell Verplanck. The interest in it was sustained from the rising of the curtain to the end of the play, without so much as an instant of dullness. The dialogue was bright and the acting spirited. The tableaus at the close of each act were striking and effective. Every one of them was encored. The scenery was perfectly beautiful. Considering how many failures there have been in dramatic literature the pronounced success of this effort of a beginner is highly creditable to her.

DESTROY THAT SIGN.—One may feel that he's getting old, but he naturally dislikes that anything about his appearance should advise others of the fact. Yet nothing does this so effectually as thin and falling hair. No woman wants to marry a man, and business firms hesitate to employ a man who shows this fatal sign. Parker's Hair Balsam is worth to you, in this regard, more than its weight in diamonds. Use it, and have plentiful and glossy hair. Many have had every trace of grayness removed and bald spots covered by using a single bottle.

JOHN P FERNALD, ALBERT VITTUM,
Editors and Publishers.

VOTERS AT town meeting, last month, noticed upon the walls of the Town House, in large letters, placards worded something as follows: "The Old Board of Selectmen are in favor of a change in the Board of Engineers." The meaning of this was incomprehensible to the ordinary voter. Few of the voters who were attracted by it seemed to change their votes; the matter of the Engineers seemed to be of little moment and as far as could be noted by the average voter, little notice was taken of the placard except to wonder at its meaning.

The events of the last few days have disclosed its significance. It was plainly enough known by the Board of Selectmen and by the parties who put up the notices, what it meant. They could interpret the handwriting on the wall. And if the placards did not induce voters to stand by the "Old Board" in sufficient numbers to elect them, those who have been persistently in favor of the Engineers appointed, voted and worked for the "Old Board" of Selectmen. It therefore becomes a pertinent question whether the appointments made last Saturday were not in accordance with an agreement made before the opening of the polls.

The dropping of the Chief Engineer, who has seen so long a term of service, as well as an almost entire change in the rest of the Board, leads the average citizen to ask the reason for it. It would not be expected that so radical a change would be made without just cause. It would be expected that reasons of no uncertain nature should be given for the removal of a Chief Engineer of such repute as Chief Littlefield. Has he been unfaithful to his duty? Has the management of fires under his long term of service been such, that property has not been protected? Is he a man who loses his head at a fire, or is he a man in the habit of getting under the influence of liquor at such times? To ask these questions, any or all of them, is to answer them. The only reason we have heard given by the Selectmen for the change made is that certain parties "desired a change." If there are others, we should judge the Selectmen would desire that it should be known, that the impression might be corrected that the reason given above for the change is all that is needed.

Let us look for a moment at the position in which the Selectmen have placed themselves. Of course everyone knows the origin of the whole trouble to be the fire at the Upton factory, and the investigation which followed. The investigation and report of the Committee exonerated the Engineers and Fire Department from all blame as to management—which was criticised. It was admitted that the Firemen did all they could, and the Board of Selectmen gave testimony, by its chairman, at the investigation, in favor of the Engineers and Firemen. Now they say to the Chief and other Engineers "we are not satisfied with your management," "we agree with those who found fault at the Upton fire," and they say this, too, against the report of the Insurance Committee.

They say, too, that the discipline in the fire department which was enforced directly after the Upton fire, in the matter of intoxication, was a mistake. No such discipline should have been allowed. And this, too, in the face of the report of the commissioners, who commended the changes made.

We have never believed the stories of any serious intoxication at the time of the Upton fire, but we think the course taken by the Engineers has been commended by our citizens generally and by the firemen themselves. And there was nothing brought out at the investigation showing incompetency or mismanagement on the part of the Engineers or firemen. On the contrary, several fires since have shown the contrary—that both Engineers and firemen were worthy of great praise.

If, therefore, there can be no charge of incompetency against the Chief,—and here is where the brunt of the matter must come,—why was he dropped? We must agree with the Selectmen in the only reason they give: that "certain parties desired a change." How do the firemen, how do the voters of the town like this reason?

We wish to be understood with regard to the new appointees. There is no objection that can be urged against them as competent firemen. The point of the matter is, why was the change made? It is not a change that is satisfactory to the firemen,—we have seen few citizens who consider that such a radical change was either wise or prudent. And why was the fifth man left? Was he the only Engineer competent and capable—so much superior in wisdom and coolness to the other four who were dropped?

We fear the Selectmen have allowed their judgment to be blinded in a manner which they will have cause to regret. They certainly cannot have the consistent support of the "Law and Order League" in the removal of a strong prohibitionist and no-license—that man the Chief Engineer. They cannot expect the support of the Republican party, who mainly elected them this year—for all the new Engineers are, we believe, of the opposite party. They will of course have the support of the 38 men who petitioned for the present appointees. And with this they are doubtless satisfied.

A HEARING is being held by a Committee of the Massachusetts Legislature on the question of the limitation of the charges of the telephone companies, and their regulation by law. Judging from some investigations made into the workings of the Bell Telephone Co., by a correspondent of the Commercial Bulletin, the Committee will not have far to go to find ample reason for reporting a bill in favor of such limitation. It has already been done in some instances. And we are heartily in sympathy with any attempt to bring about such a result in this State.

The State is also asked to grant permission to the Bell Telephone Co., to increase their stock to $30,000,000.—We quote from the Commercial Bulletin: "The strongest argument which is presented in favor of this enormous capitalization is that it is required for the construction of lines for long-distance telephoning. But the company presented very similar reasons for the increase of their capital to $10,000,000 in 1880. The whole tenor of their claim was that the increased capital was for maintenance of wires and the development of the telephone system in the interests of the public. The legislative committee reported in favor of their petition for $15,000,000; and the legislature cut it down to $10,000,000 and then passed the bill.

But scarcely any of this $10,000,000 has been used for the purposes for which it was alleged to be required. The wires are nearly all owned by the New England and other sub-companies and the work of construction is carried on by them.

And this is the company which stated in 1880 that it required $15,000,000 for purposes of construction and maintenance! What reason is there for believing that if $30,000,000 should now be granted it will not use it nearly all in stock watering, as it did in 1880!

A gentleman who is interested in this subject and who has taken pains to inform himself in regard to the facts also states that "the committee on mercantile affairs in 1880 was promised that telephone rates should not be raised;" and yet the rates have been doubled since that time.

A sub-committee of the committee on mercantile affairs has been appointed to examine the books of the American Bell Company, and it is to be hoped the duty may not be performed in a perfunctory manner. The fact which was brought out by Wm. B. Gale, Esq., at the hearing of last week that the patents of the American Bell Company, which had been put in as $6,500,000 assets in 1882, were put in as but $3,500,000 assets in 1883, and by some strange process of book-keeping, had become $6,500,000 liabilities in 1884, needs special explanation. In default of such explanation, the public will believe the item was transferred from assets to liabilities for the sake of hiding $13,000,000 of assets from public view.

There is need that something should be done. We hope the Legislature will take hold of it in earnest, and we especially trust that the rates for telephonic service may be fixed by law. We have rumors that there is soon to be another increase in this vicinity. In which case we imagine that more telephones will be taken out than was the case last year, and there have been a number of them taken out in this vicinity.

MUSICAL NOTES.

The Leslie Concert and Convention Co., who failed here in their attempt to organize a five days' Convention, met with a similar fate in Palmer. The Journal says: "An attempt was made to organize a five-days' convention, three lessons each day, for musical instruction, but as only two names was secured out of the 34 needed to pay the expenses, the affair was abandoned." In another column we find the following which may explain it: "The singing school closed on Tuesday evening with a social concert to the parents and friends of the pupils. The exercises consisted of choruses, glees and part songs, the rendering of which, without any special preparation, showed that the class had made good progress under Mr. Perkins' instruction. It is hoped he will come another winter and be greeted with a much larger class." The Leslie Convention Co., in our judgment, are working more for their own interest than for that of the musical instruction of the people, which latter is the claim they make. J. B. Watts, of old singing school fame, gave free instruction to the children of different towns, it will be remembered, but closed with a grand concert. The instruction amounted to nothing; the children were trained simply for that concert, and Watts pocketed the funds. This Leslie company give a free concert at first; then expect the public to join a class of a few days at a good price, the idea being held out that they desire to cultivate a musical taste, and form a convention. The point is that they desire to make money. That is all there is to it. But looking at it in a musical point of view, how much instruction can they give in the few days allotted? How many persons in a town like this, or like Palmer, can give the time of several hours each day, for several successive days, even were they so disposed? And who are the Leslie Convention Co., anyway? Nobody ever heard of them till they struck the town. And the fact that in Palmer a singing school under such a valued an instructor as Mr. Perkins closed successfully, shows that the people, if they wish musical instruction have a choice, and rightly too, where they are to obtain it.

Miss Minnie K. Felt, a member of the Barton Square Choir of Salem, and of the Unitarian Church Choir here, was married last Wednesday evening, at the residence of her father, to Arthur B. French, son of Abram French, the well known crockery dealer of Boston. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. McDaniel. The happy couple have gone to Chicago and the South for a wedding trip.

The concert to be given by the Salem Symphony Club is assigned for Thursday evening May 7th, at Plummer Hall. A few associate members tickets can be obtained by applying to the secretary, Mr. Arthur Stone, at the Museum Building.

Mrs. Clara Emilio Gilbert is supplying for Mrs. Bigelow in the First church, Salem.

Blind Tom, the famous pianist, has been placed under guardianship as a idiot. If many people could have their way about it, numberless other "pianists" would be placed under restraint.—Palmer Journal.

The singing at the Unitarian church last Sunday was unusually fine. Miss Helen Adelaide Russell was the soprano; Miss Marguerite Hall, of Boston, the contralto. Both ladies sung solos and a duet; the aria from Handel, "Angels ever bright and fair," being beautifully rendered by Miss Hall. A marked improvement was noticeable over the ordinary method of rendering the hymn tunes. Why is it that many choirs rush through a hymn tune, as if they were in haste to be done, with little thought of the expression of the words of the hymn? An ordinary hymn tune rendered with taste and expression, can be made as effective, by a choir who are disposed to give attention to it, as the most studied anthem.

Mrs. Vincent and the full Boston Museum Company will appear at Mechanic Hall on Monday evening, May 4, under the auspices of the Salem Police Relief Association—the proceeds to form a nucleus for a fund for pensioning veterans and disabled policemen, similar to the system in vogue in other cities. The sale of tickets will begin at Newhall's candy store on Saturday, April 25.

An inventory of the estate of Prescott E. Grant was filed in the sum of $13,496.69, in the Probate Court at Salem, last Monday.

The annual meeting of the Ladies' Benevolent Society for the election of officers will be held at the residence of Mrs. L. W. Thatcher, 28 Washington street, Tuesday afternoon, May 5th, at 2 o'clock.

About thirty-five or forty couples attended the masquerade at Essex Hall last Thursday evening, and represented a variety of costumes. These parties have been growing in popularity, under the management of Billy Flannagan and Chas. Stanton.

A well known gentleman looked over the Burnham property last Wednesday, before it was sold, with a view of buying it and making it over into a small concert hall and theatre. He did not consider it just the thing and will be on the look out for a place to build on.

As three fellows were passing the residence of H. K. Pevear's, on Main street, last Sunday afternoon, they picked up a little blue skye terrier dog and made off with it. As the fellows were recognized it will be better for them to return the dog and save further trouble.

A woman named Carney, living on Washington, street attempted to light a fire with kerosene recently, and an explosion followed which shook down the stove pipe. No one was hurt, but several were badly scared and all look upon it as a warning.

Gen. Daniel Pratt, G. A. T., celebrated his 76th birthday recently. He was born in Pratville, Chelsea, April 11th, 1809. He is now engaged upon the masterpiece of all literature, entitled "The Cosmogony of Nature," and hopes to see it in print ere he is fourscore.

Why wouldn't it provide a good, yet novel entertainment for Post 50, to collect from individual soldiers in this vicinity the war relics they may possess, for temporary use? Many would gladly pay ten or fifteen cents each to look at them, and such an exhibit would be unique.

About thirty of the friends of Mrs. Hannah Allen visited her last Friday evening, making it a surprise. The company brought their supper with them and the tables were set about eleven o'clock. During the evening Mrs. Allen was presented with a large willow rocker.

We regret to learn that Mr. Charles A. Haskell is about to leave town, having purchased a place in Newton. While he has been here he has made many friends. He has always been active in every good work, and is liberal and generous and will be a loss to the town in many ways

Rockport has held a special town meeting to see what inducements the town will offer Mr. Theophelus W. Walker to rebuild the cotton mill destroyed by fire at that place last December. A committee was appointed to confer with him. Mr. Walker is the owner of the Bleachery.

Last Thursday Mr. B. B. Humphrey on Washington street, while eating a piece of beefsteak, had a piece lodge in his throat. He visited the hospital in Boston, and an hour was spent in trying to dislodge it without success. After returning home he succeeded in removing it. It was a very irritating and painful accident.

The Stockholders of the Salem and Danvers Street Railway Company met Monday afternoon and voted to petition the Railroad Commissioners for leave to increase their capital stock from $60,000 to $100,000, also to proceed to the construction of the extension of the track from Danvers to Peabody.

And the little bird on leafless bough, he danced a jig in his glee; and he poured from his throat a constant flow of his frozen melody. "Oh, I'm the greatest of all," he sang, "the strongest in wind and limb, the champion bird of the whole shebang, for I'm the first robin of spring."

Prayer books are now made with bouquet holders on the outside, and it looks as if in a short time a bible would not be complete unless it had a plate glass mirror, with little compartments for hair pins, face powder and cologne on the back.

Rub your black walnut sewing machine tables, your cabinet organ, or any other piece of soiled furniture you may have, with a cloth moistened with kerosene oil, and you will quickly see an improvement; but keep it away from varnish.

Dr. Lighthill, 115 Boylston street, Boston, has among his patients, Mrs. Emery of Lowell, wife of Mayor Emery of the Merrimac House. Five years ago she was given up by the physicians and as a last resort applied to Dr. Lighthill. He took the case and to-day the lady is as well as ever. This is only one case in thousands. Dr. Lighthill is at the Essex House, Salem, every Thursday.

SKATING RINK NOTES.

Peabody has had a variety of polo games this season, but last Thursday night the climax was reached, when two female polo teams made their appearance before a large and dignified audience. Councilman Charles Henry Simonds, of Salem, was referee. The players called themselves the Newports and Nantaskets. They were distinguished by their color, as they wore blue and pink satin skirts, black jersey waists, with pink and blue bows, black stockings with clock work on the sides, high top boots with a bow. The skirts came just below the knee, and a white undershirt was worn. The captains wore a jocky hat and all had a pile of crimps and their hair down their backs. The little innocents commenced the play by the Newports getting the first rush and she succeeded in rushing into one of the Nantaskets, knocking her down. Her eyes snapped and she was just going to say "now I shan't play," when she thought she saw the ball, and struck at the center black spot; this caused her companions to rush to the spot and they all tried to knock that spot into the goal. The force with which they struck at a ball is shown when it is said they knocked it as much as eight inches at a time. After they had run up and down the rink for six minutes, (the time was kept by the clock) the goal was won by the Newports, and they were loudly applauded by the friends of the Salems who were present in large numbers. They did not seem to be familiar enough with the game to know that they had got to change goals, and the referee gallantly approached the best looking one, which wasn't saying much, and told her what to do. The second goal was very exciting. The beautiful belles stood holding their polo sticks as a dude holds his cane, and when they saw the ball coming they stepped out of the way and struck at the floor. The ball went over in the corner next the "boys" and they all made a rush for it, and it looked as if at one time the people paid their money to see a slugging match. One of the "robin red breasts" got struck on the fingers and she won the sympathy of the Telegram reporter by putting her hand under her jersey. The half-back was on her back half the time and when ever a foul was called they would all rush for a seat and sit down. At this critical point of the game, one of the "little butter cups" was struck in the mouth and she was sent to the dressing room in an ambulance, but the game kept right on, and she soon returned having wiped off the gore. The captain of one of the teams called out, "hug up" and the referee looked around wildly and calculated the heighth of the band stand as a place of safety, should he be attacked, as it was his nervousness caused him to give the goal to the Nantaskets on fouls, after a play of 35 minutes, although it is suspected that some one set the clock back ten minutes. The third goal was short and lively and the front row were glued to their seats as most of the girls gave their confusing act of loosing the ball under their skirts and then sitting down; one of them preferring to sit on the seat made a bee line for a plug hat, that the owner only secured to himself in the nick of time. This goal was won by the Newports in 4 m. and 45 s. The fourth goal opened and the girls commenced to play up in good style. They would get so excited when the ball went most in and missed that they would squeel right out. They had changed goal tenders, taking one with larger feet for the position, but this did not avail, as the Newports won the goal in ten minutes. With the exception of the Tough and Tender game, it was the only one of real scientific polo played at the rink this season.

The Peabodys played the Bay States at Chelsea last Thursday and in place of Sullivan played Rafferty, formerly of the Lynn G. A. R. team. It was one of the best games played at the rink this season. The first rush was taken by Keene. After playing 12 minutes Foye secured the first goal for the Bay States. Keene secured 2d rush and in 30 seconds Foye had sent the ball neatly into the netting. Keene took third rush. Waterhouse and Felton made a very pretty rush down the rink and did some clever passing in doing it. Waterhouse passed the ball out from behind the goal to Phalen, who caged it; time, 2 minutes. The fourth rush was taken by Felton, in two minutes Phelan made goal, two for Peabody. Keene took the last rush and Waterhouse secured the winning goal for Peabody in 1 minute 30 seconds. Rogers, Keene and Phelan had a tussle for the ball at the Peabody end of the rink, and the rubber was slowly worked up the side. After a time it rolled out among the feet of these three and was secured by Waterhouse. He rushed it down to the front of the Bay State goal, and with a quick sweep landed it in the netting.

Should Peabody get a slice of the championship cake, and have a good club next year, it may be possible to keep up the interest in polo another season.

Last Wednesday night, Felton and Murray, of the Peabody polo team, played with the Wakefields in a game between that club and the Maldens, and the former were successful. John Dempsey of this town was referee.

Manager McCully is contemplating a number of changes at the rink, among them a low gallery extending across the lower end and one side, to come out about even with the band stand. There will be one or two rows of seats and accommodation for about 150 more people.

A large number of the friends of the Peabodys went to Woburn to witness the polo game between Peabodys and Woburns. Owing to the absence of Cotter and Smith, the Peabodys played only five men, and the Woburns did the same. Felton secured the first rush and Phalen the goal in 3m., 30s. Peirce of the Woburns got the second rush and Bolan of that club the goal in 8m., 8s. Felton got the third rush and Bolan the goal in 2m., 30s. Felton also got the fourth rush and after 2 minutes' play, Bolan put it into the Peabody's cage.

Next Friday evening an exhibition game of polo will be played at the rink between the Peabodys and Bay States of Chelsea.

The Peabodys will be tendered another benefit when it is decided who wins the medals. If they come to town, they will be presented at the benefit entertainment by Secretary Kenney, of the Massachusetts polo leage, when the Peabodys will play an exhibition game with the Cambridge club.

The St. John's Polo Club have challenged the Father Mathew Club to play a game for $50 a side.

The rink at Salem Willows will probably be opened by H. N. McCully about June 11.

The Cambridge beat the Peabodys, 4 goals to 0 at Cambridge last night in a game of polo.

SALEM, April 17, 1885.

To the Honorable Board of Selectmen of the Town of Peabody,

Respectfully represents the Naumkeag Street Railway Company, that it is desirous, for the convenience of the passengers in the cars of said Company, that the double track already laid in Boston street, in Salem, be extended from the present terminus at the Peabody and Salem line through Main street in Peabody to a point nearly opposite Washington street, to connect with the double track already laid on Main street, to the Square in said Peabody.

NAUMKEAG STREET RAILWAY CO,
By Charles Odell, Pres.

At a meeting of the Selectmen of Peabody, April 18th, 1885, it was Ordered, that a hearing be had upon the foregoing petitions, in the Selectmen's Room, at the Town House, on Saturday, the 9th day of May, 1885, at 4 o'clock, P. M., at which time and place all persons and corporations interested in said petition may be heard; and that notice of said hearing be given by publishing an attested copy of the petitions and of this order, in the Peabody Press, fourteen days at least before the time appointed for said hearing.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

The sympathy of the entire community, which we can but faintly express in words, is extended to the family of Miss Alice Lee Chadwick, who died Sunday morning in Pittsfield whither she had gone in the hope of regaining her health. Miss Chadwick was compelled to leave her school in Somerville some time since, but it was expected that the mountain air of Pittsfield and vicinity, which is peculiarly invigorating, would restore her. She was a graduate of our High School, and very soon obtained a position as substitute in our schools. Her ability and aptness for this work was speedily recognized in her appointment to a good position in the Wallis School, which she only left to secure a more lucrative one in Somerville. Miss Chadwick was an enthusiast in her chosen work. In fact, it was doubtless this, which hastened her decease. It was her anxiety for her scholars at a fire in her Somerville school which brought on a severe cold which her system could not shake off. She never allowed personal pleasure to come between her duty to her scholars, in fact she was willing and anxious to sacrifice herself to the work of her school. It was this, combined with a natural fitness for teaching and a knowledge of human nature, which made her at once a favorite with her scholars, and her sudden decease will bring sadness to the hearts of many—her former pupils—both in this town and in Somerville. Everything that kind hands and the skill of physicians could do was at her service, but all was of little avail against the inroads of the disease, which seemed to have a fatal hold upon her. Her remains have been brought to this town for burial, and her funeral took place this afternoon from her late residence in Shaw's Court.

We understand that the Lowell Railroad, having secured control of the Northern Branch, hitherto known as the Boston, Concord & Montreal, will exert itself toward advertising Lake Winnipesauke and the surrounding country, a thing which has never been done before, but which is well worth doing, not only for the railroad, but for the travelling public as well, for it is really one of the beautiful regions of our country that can be made even more so by being rendered accessible. This magnificent lake, within three hours' ride from Boston, can be, should be, and will be with proper management, made one of the great centres of summer travel within a very few years.

The Selectmen have appointed the following measurers of wood and bark: Wm. S. Osborne, Jas. B. Newhall, Samuel Donnell, Bowman Viles, Arthur D. Morrison, Chas. W. Jenkins, Frank E. Ferguson; Measurers of Upper Leather, Oliver Emerson, Jas. S. Paul, Joshua Giddings, Augustus H. Sanger, Jr., William C. Beckett, Richard Kimball, Wm. A. Saunders; Sealer of Weights and Measures, George R. Norton; Weigher of Hay and Coal, Wm. Frye; Inspector of Milk, Thomas W. Peasley.

There was a delightful sociable and reception at the Baptist vestry last Thursday, arranged to get better acquainted with the new pastor, Rev. Mr. Shipman and his wife. A pleasing musical programme was arranged, and there was readings by talented young ladies. The new pastor very feelingly responded to an invitation to address the company, and said he hoped the future would be as pleasant as the beginning, and that his pastorate might be of benefit to all.

Last Friday, Mr. Isaac Nourse, of Middleton, met with a mishap while coming down Andover street on horse back. His horse took fright at a cow serenely "chewing her cud," and Mr. Nourse was thrown from the back of the animal and landed in a muddy spot beside the road. He was not injured, but his best friend wouldn't have recognized him as he picked himself up, so completely covered was he with mud.

Essex county has paid an annual tax of $205,000 for three years. Middlesex county pays $150,000; Bristol $104-000; Hampden, $81,000; Worcester $115,000; Berkshire $62,000; Norfolk $60,000: Plymouth $52,000; Franklin $27,000; Hampshire $38,000; Barnstable $12,000; Dukes $6900. The debt of Essex county has not been greatly reduced, and the bridges over the Merrimack furnish the heaviest share of the expenses, it is said.

J. G. Ryan, tailor of Salem, visited Lawrence jail Wednesday and measured "Billy" Hayes for a $50 suit of clothes. Billy sent for Ryan and told him that he was determined to dress just as well in prison as he used to out. He further said that he had many callers and was given all the liberties that he could expect. He says that he does not think he shall live long, and that the grave will soon be his home.

Yesterday morning, between 7 and 8 o'clock, a serious accident occurred at the residence of A. F. Clark, on Washington street. B. F. Woodbury began painting the house last Monday, and had finished one end and swung the staging on the front. He had in his employ three other painters, Harry Nichols, Augustus Howard and George Trask, who were on the swinging stage when Mr. Woodbury got upon it with a screwdriver to remove a double window directly over the front door. He had just stepped on when the center hook, which was fastened to the covering overhead, broke short off, dropping the ladders composing the stage and throwing all hands to the ground, a distance of about 20 feet. Mr. Woodbury landed on the brickwork below, striking on the back of his head, cutting a bad gash, and breaking his right leg between the knee and hip, and throwing his left ankle out of place. His right arm was injured. He was conveyed to his home on Wallis street and Drs. Pike and Foster attended to his injuries. Trask received a cut on his cheek, and a severe shaking up, as did Howard and Nichols; they escaped serious injuries by falling on the soft ground between the fence and the house, but the contents of their pails were emptied on their heads. The hook, which caused the accident, had a flaw in it, and was only held together by a piece of iron less than a sixteenth of an inch across. Mr. Woodbury was just getting into his busy season, but will now be confined to his bed all summer. Harry Nichols has had a number of just such falls, but has always managed to come out all right.

Mrs. Wm. Lake, of Topsfield, had a narrow escape from a serious accident on Wallis street last Saturday morning. She had got out of her carriage, to fix something about the harness, when the horse was frightened by the cars, and started to run away knocking her down, and she received a severe cut on her face and her arm was badly bruised. The horse was stopped after running a short distance.

Remember that J. M. Hill, the manager for Margaret Mather, has leased the Union Square Theatre in New York for the coming season. He will play Miss Mather there in long runs of all her plays. It is doubtful, therefore, if she plays in any other than large cities next year, and it is probable that she will never again appear in Peabody. There should be a full house to-morrow night—a good one is already assured.

Mrs. Laura Howard, daughter of Mr. Edmond Clough, died at the home of her father on Elm street last Sunday, after a brief illness of typhoid pneumonia, at the age of 41 years and 8 months. Mrs. Howard probably contracted the disease while taking care of her mother who died of pneumonia only a few weeks ago. She leaves two small children.

A horseman says:—"The man who puts an over check on a large horse and then tightens it until the horse's nose is pointing into the sky, with a bright sunlight dazzling his eyes, causing the poor creature unmeasurable misery, should be prosecuted for cruelty to animals. The check rein should be prohibited, whenever it is such an instrument of cruelty as nine-tenths of them are made to be."

A handsome parlor car is being fitted up at the Boston and Maine repair shops, Lawrence. It is to be finished in Mahogany, will contain a Baker heater and have all the modern conveniences. It will be known as the "Magnolia," numbered 45, and is expected to be completed the middle of next month.

The Naumkeag Street Railway Company have petitioned the Selectmen for permission to straighten the tracks near the Warren National Bank and also ask permission to lay a double track from Boston street, Salem, to the Monument on Main street. The Selectmen will give a hearing at the town house on Saturday, May 9, at 4 o'clock P. M.

The Salvation army under command of Capt. Doolittle and Brother Shaw, held a meeting at town hall last Wednesday evening, at which about one hundred were present. There was not much interest in the meeting. The band sadly miss a leader like Capt. Bailey. There was not money enough taken to pay for the hall.

According to Bro. Shaw's tell, he had a hard time while stationed at Philadelphia with the Salvation Army. Nearly every night the army would be assaulted and their meeting broken up by a mob. Free fights would take place, and a large number of arrests be made nearly every evening. It was a hot place and hard work.

The prices of seats for Miss Mather are regulated by Mr. Hill. They are the same in every city and town where she plays. There is no deviation and no exception made. And the audience this year, as a rule, despite the hard times, are larger than last year. Miss Mather is no ordinary actress.

Mrs. J. H. Browne is in New York on a purchasing tour, and the ladies of Salem and vicinity will soon reap the benefit.

FROM REV. E. W. WHITNEY,

Formerly Pastor of the Universalist Church, Peabody, Mass.

For several years I have been troubled with Catarrh, which seriously interfered with my public speaking, and which baffled all my attempts to get permanent relief. Experienced surgeons operated upon me, and I was under the care of a Boston physician for two years, but obtained no lasting benefit. I applied various medicines, but failed to get relief. I was lead, by the advice of friends, to consult Dr. Lighthill. My faith was at the lowest ebb, but I am happy to say that after a few months' treatment no trace of my old trouble appears, and I have every reason to believe that the cure is permanent. I cordially recommend Dr. Lighthill to all who may be afflicted in a similar manner.

E. W. WHITNEY,

Peabody, Mass., June 27. 1879.

AN INTERESTING CASE.

A statement of Mr. Clement A. Thorndike, of the firm of L. A. May & Co., 127 Union street, Lynn, Mass.

To the Public:—Having been raised almost like one from the dead by the skillful treatment of Dr. Lighthill, and to benefit similar sufferers, I make this public statement of my case. For years I was troubled with Catarrh in my head, seriously affecting and almost destroying my nasal bone; the discharge was very profuse, requiring constant blowing and hawking for relief; gradually the irritation passed into my throat, producing hoarseness and a hacking cough, and finally it affected my bronchial tubes and lungs, leaving me a victim to consumption. The cough now became distressing and almost constant, and debilitating night sweats made their appearance. I lost flesh and became greatly emaciated. I consulted medical men and used various remedies, but all efforts for relief utterly failed. In that condition, and greatly disheartened and discouraged, I applied to Dr. Lighthill, whose able and thorough examination of my case proved to me that I was in the right hands. Convinced that he fully understood my condition, and, inspired with new hope, I placed myself under his care, and very soon experienced the benefit of his treatment. One after another of the symptoms of Catarrh left me. I gained in strength and weight, my cough and night sweats disappeared, and now I am only too thankful and delighted to be able to call myself well again. Hoping that this statement may give new courage and confidence to such as may suffer as I have,

I remain, respectfully,
CLEMENT A. THORNDIKE.

FROM REV. E. C. BUTLER,

Beverly, Mass.

I most heartily recommend any one afflicted with that troublesome disease, Catarrh, to Dr. Lighthill. I have full confidence in him. His treatment has had the most gratifying results in my own case, which was severe and of long standing. E. C. BUTLER,
Beverly, Mass., Oct. 29, 1879.

CURE OF DEAFNESS.

FROM RT. REV. T. F. HENDRIKEN,
Bishop of Providence. R. I.

My Dear Dr. Lighthill: Permit me to thank you most heartily for your kindness to the Sisters of our Convent. I had no idea when I consulted you on Sister Demonica's deafness that you could so quickly restore her back to hearing, but she tells me that she hears now better than she did before. For this, and your kind and successful treatment of my own deafness, I thank you. Now I would be glad to have you refer your patients to me. You know I can recommend you as a physician and surgeon, thoroughly accomplished in those departments of medicine in which you practice. I owe you a debt of gratitude, and would be glad to pay it.

Very truly and sincerely yours
Rt. Rev. T. F. HENDRIKEN.

A complete and permanent cure of

ASTHMA.

REPORT FROM MR. C. F. BOYNTON, 31 MILK STREET, BOSTON, ROOM 35.
TO THE PUBLIC.

After having spent large sums of money, and found no relief, I was induced to apply to Dr. Lighthill, at 115 Boylston street, for treatment, having suffered from asthma in the worst form for six years, and I wish to say, for the benefit of others suffering as I did that DR. LIGHTHILL'S TREATMENT HAS MADE ME A WELL MAN, and I now can enjoy life, when before it was a dread to me. This cure was performed on me over a year ago, and I can confidently pronounce it a permanent one. I hope all afflicted with that dreadful disease will avail themselves of Dr. Lighthill's skilful services, for I feel morally sure he can cure them.

C. F. BOYNTON,
Office, 31 Milk street, Boston; residence, 29 Mt. Pleasant St., North Cambridge.

GRAND SPRING ANNOUNCEMENT.

PARLOR, LIBRARY, CHAMBER, DINING ROOM AND HALL

FURNITURE.

We would invite inspection of our New Styles now on exhibition in all our departments. Carrying as we do the largest and most comprehensive stock of Household Furniture and Upholstery Goods, [in all grades], in Essex Co. We are confident it is for the interest of all close buyers to call and examine our immense stock and learn our prices. We have spared no pains or expense in securing everything that is desirable in style, quality and effect in our selections for our Spring Trade. Our facilities for the manufacture and display of our stock in our large and well lighted ware-rooms are unequalled by any East of Boston, and the large increase of our business is sufficient guarantee that our efforts to serve the people in this vicinity have been appreciated.

PARLOR FURNITURE DEPARTMENT.

In this department we mention a few of our designs. Our new Lenox Suit is a very neat design; the frames are of solid Mahogany, overstuffed in coverings of best Silk Plush in three colorings,—the prettiest thing out.

Our No. 145 Suit is a heavy and rich overstuffed Suit, covered in Yelour Squares with silk Plush trimmings, with heavy fringe. Another, our Solid Comfort Suit, a very easy and graceful Suit, in coverings of best long nap, French Plush. This Suit is in five or seven pieces, and should be examined to be appreciated. No. 125 Suit is a new design for a stuff over suit, covered in best quality Mottled Plush in four colors. This is a medium price Set and very attractive and comfortable. No. 147 is a Mahoganized Cherry Frame Suit, a handsome suit of six pieces. Consists of Sofa, Gent's Chair, Corner Chair, Window Chair, and two Reception Chairs, in Silk Embossed Plush Coverings. This is a great favorite. Price $110. An Antique Suit of six pieces is No. 135 Frames of mahoganized Cherry, carved frames covered in Embossed Plush; price $100. Our No. 140 Suit is a richly carved Walnut frame, suit in odd pieces, coverings of best Sultan Crushed Plush. These suits we have marked at $95, and are bargains. Two new styles in Divan Suits in solid Mahogany frames in the "Chippendale style," suitable for the Library or Reception room. Many other styles which we have not room to mention.

A great variety of Odd Pieces, Divans, Corner, Side and Reception Chairs, also the celebrated Morris Chair, in Mahogany, Cherry, Walnut and Ebony Frames, $25, 30 to 38. Over stuffed and Extension Couches, (with or without backs), very comfortable, in Cretonnes and other coverings.

In our Medium priced Suits our space will not allow us to mention but two or three. Our new Group Suit is in Walnut frames, seven piece suit; covering of embossed Plush in any color. Price $75, cheap at 95. Another is our No. 86 Suit, overstuffed—a fine set, and these we are selling for the low price of $65—similar suits sold in Boston to-day from $80 to 90. Other styles in Plush and fancy coverings from $45, 50, 55, 60.

In the lower price Suits we have fifteen different styles in Hair Cloth and Fancy Coverings, from $33, 38, 40, 50 to 80. We have styles and prices to suit all.

CHAMBER FURNITURE DEPARTMENT

Our stock is larger than ever before, and includes sets in all woods and all grades and includes no less than (56) fifty-six different styles, from which to make selections. In Mahogany Sets prices will range from $150 to 300.

BLACK WALNUT CHAMBER SETS,

$35, 40, 45, 50, 53, 55, 60, 65, 75, 80, 90, 100 to 250.

CHERRY SETS.

We are showing some very pretty styles from $110 down as low as $35, 40, 45 and 50.

ASH CHAMBER SETS,

in prices at $25, 28, 30, 32, 35, 40, 43, 45, 50, 55, 65 and 75.

PAINTED & ENAMEL CHAMBER SETS,

$14, 18, 20, 21, 23, 25.

Our stock of Chamber Furniture for variety of style and wide range of prices is unsurpassed. Don't go to Boston and pay 10 to 15 per cent. more for same quality and in many cases inferior goods, when you can have all these goods delivered and set up in your homes without cost of freight or damage to goods.

DINING ROOM FURNITURE,

Side Boards in Walnut, Cherry and Ash, Pillar and common Extension Tables in all woods, Dining Room Chairs in Leather or Cane Seats, in Mahogany, Oak, Ash, Cherry or Walnut; Hall Stands, Hall Chairs, Settles, Hanging Hall Racks, Book Cases and Desks in large variety.

UPHOLSTERY DEPARTMENT.

Silk and Mohair, Plushes in all grades, $2 to 5 yard. Jute Velours, Foreign and Domestic Tapestries, Turkish Satins, Wool Satines, Damasks, Raw Silk Portieres, Velour Curtains, Madras Lace and other Curtains in pairs or by the yard. French and English Cretonnes 32 in., French Momie 50 in., Curtain Poles, brass trimmed in all woods, complete for 34 cts. and upwards. Brass Poles all sizes, also Sash Rods in 1-4 in., 3-8, 1-2, 1 in., 1 1-2 and 2 in sizes. Curtain work of all kinds made and designed by experienced workmen.

Upholstery work of all kinds done on the premises. Furniture re-covered and made as good as new.

Children's Carriages.

We are headquarters for the sale of Children's Carriages in Essex County carrying all the desirable styles of the Wakefield Rattan Co., Haywood Bros. & Co. and the New York and Philadelphia Manufacturers. These take a wide range in price, running from $5, 7.50, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 15, 18, 20, 21, 24, 25 to 42. We would call special attention to our new Rattan Carriage, "The Little Gem," a carriage that fills a long felt want in the carriage trade, that of combining utility, style and Low Price; this carriage we have had manufactured to our order, and ordering in immense quantities have succeeded in placing this carriage on the market for the extreme low price of $8.84. Carriages not so good as this are retailed at $12 and 14. Ask to see "The Little Gem." We invite all to visit our warerooms and examine for themselves the quantity, quality and prices of our goods before purchasing. All goods warranted as represented.

A Dinner From The Bible.

FIVE COURSES WITH WINE AND MUSIC SERVED WITH SCRIPTURAL REFERENCE.

Somebody has been studying the bible for a novel purpose, the result of which is told in The Charlestown News and Courier, as follows:

As a curiosity the annexed bill of fare is worth preserving. Taken wholly from the bible a right royal Christmas banquet it would make. As will be seen the courses number five. The candelabra and music are specified. Each course is by its appropriate wine accompanied. Though in Palestine there is now no game, yet at this dinner quail and partridge are provided. With these the spiced wine of Canticle is prescribed. At such a dessert as this, with the sweet wines of the prophet Amos, a morden Amos would like to sit. Corresponding bills of fare from Shakespeare has been framed. This one from the scripture is unique. It is as follows:

PRELEMINARIES.

Spread a cloth of blue, and put thereon the dishes and the bowls, with the bread in the basket.—Num. iv, 7 and Levit. viii., 1.

Salt without prescribing how much, and all in a cruse.—Ezra vii, 22, and I Kings xvii, 12.

Bright shining of a candle giveth light.—Luke xi., 36.

Tell them who are bidden I have prepared my dinner.—Matt. xxii, 4.

They are strong of appetite.—Isaiah vii, 11.

Let us eat and be merry.—Luke xv, 23.

The feast was made for laughter, wine makes merry.—Eccles. x, 19.

Ye hear all kinds of music.—Dan. iii, 5.

Grace.—Give us this day our daily bread.—Matt. vi, 11.

SOUPS.

Pour forth the broth.—Judges vi, 20.

Feed me with pottage.—Gen. xxxv, 30.

Eat this roll.—Ezk. iii, 1

Use a little wine for thy stomach's sake.—Tim. v, 33.

FISH.

We remember the fish we did eat.—Num. xv, 5.

They gave him a piece of broiled fish.—Luke xxiv, 42.

Bring off the fish which ye have now caught.—John xxi, 10.

Every man at the beginning doth set forth good wine.—John ii, 10

ENTREMETS

Hare.—Levit. xi. 6.

Chickens.—Matt. xxi, 37.

Beside harts and fatted fowl.—I Kings iv, 23.

Kidneys.—Deut. xxii, 14.

The wine is red.—Psalms ixxv, 8.

Olives.—Micah vi, 15.

Give me a little water, for I am thirsty.—Judges iv, 19.

ROAST.

All manner of baked meats.—Gen. xi, 17.

Ye may eat of the roebuck. Deut. xii, 15.

Ye shall eat of the wil goat and wild ox.—Deut. xiv, 14.

Cause strong drink to be poured out.—Num. xviii, 7.

VEGETABLES.

Take unto thee wheat, lentils, and millet.—Ezek. ix, 9.

They brought parched corn and beans.—II Samuel. xv, 26.

Remember the leeks and the onions and the cucumbers and the garlic.—Num. ix 17.

GAME.

Partridges.—Jer. xvii, 11.

Two young pigeons.—Levi. v, 7.

And he brought quail.—Psalms cv, 40.

I would cause thee to drink spiced wines.—Can. xvii, 12.

Carry these ten cheeses to the captain.—I Sam. xvii.

WHAT YOU WANT TO KNOW.—Everybody wants an honest answer to this simple question:—What is the best medicine to regulate the bowels, cure costiveness and biliousness, help the digestion and give strength to the whole system? People ask us this every day. We answer, Parker's Tonic. It is pleasant to the taste. All the children like it. Mothers all praise it. It will save a thousand times its cost in every family.—Editor Western Argus.

MAYO'S

Compound Vegetable Anæsthetic.

A safe and pleasant substitute for gas and ether.

Discovered by Dr. N. K. Mayo of Boston, April 1883, subsequently administered by him in nearly two thousand cases, producing perfect slumber, being applicable to the child, the delicate sentitive woman as well as the hardy man. No ill effects have followed its use in any case, it acting rather as a vegetable tonic.

It controls the patient one-fourth longer than gas giving us time to remove from three to twenty teeth. It is with great confidence we have introduced it into our practice, giving very successful results.

HUDSON RIVER R. R.

CONDUCTOR MELIUS SAYS SOMETHING OF INTEREST TO ALL TRAVELLERS.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Feb. 22, 1884.

Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.:

Dear Sir: I have used your medicine, called DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, for Indigestion and Dizziness, to which I was subject at times, and know from experience that it is worthy of all that can be said of it for disorders of that kind. Respectfully,

W. S. MELIUS,
69 Harrison Street.

That DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY is extensively used along the line of the Hudson River Railroad, is shown by the following from Tarrytown. The writer is none other than Mr. DeRevere, the Station Agent of the Hudson River Railroad Company at Tarrytown, a man well known in that community.

Tarrytown, N. Y., Feb. 22d, 1884.

Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.:

Dear Sir:—For a long time I was troubled with severe attacks of Dizziness and Blind Sick Headaches. I thought it was due to impure blood and a disordered state of the system. I was advised to try FAVORITE REMEDY. I did so, and have been completely cured. It's the best thing I ever heard of for any disorder of that nature, and I've recommended it to many with like success.

A. DEREVERE.

DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY is not confined in its sphere of usefulness to one state or locality, but is hailed as a boon by hundreds in every state, as the following letter from Millville, N. J., will show:

Millville, N. J.

Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.:

Dear Sir:—I had been a sufferer from Dyspepsia from the time I was sixteen years old. I had consulted various physicians, but could find no relief; therefore had almost given up in despair of ever recovering my health, when DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY was recommended, which I tried and have been cured. It's the best medicine I ever knew of, and worthy of the greatest confidence.

MRS. S. C. DOUGHERTY.

MALARIA.

As an anti-malarial medicine

DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S

FAVORITE REMEDY

has won golden opinions. No traveler should consider his outfit complete unless it includes a bottle of this medicine. If you are exposed to frequent changes of climate, food and water, Favorite Remedy should always be within your reach. It expels malarial poisons, and is the best preventative of chills and malarial fever in the world. It is especially offered as a trustworthy specific for the cure of Kidney and Liver complaints, Constipation and all disorders arising from an impure state of the blood. To women who suffer from any of the ills peculiar to their sex Favorite Remedy is constantly proving itself an unfailing friend—a real blessing. Address the proprietor, Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y. $1 bottle, 6 for $5. by all druggists.

Book Notices.

It is a curious fact that one of the most famous poems in our language appeared originally in a magazine that seldom touches poetry at all, and the same periodical, after an interval of sixty-six years now brings out another poem very similar in theme. Bryant's "Thanatopsis" was first printed in the North American Review for September, 1817. The May number or the Review, just out, has a poem by Robert Buchanan on "The New Buddha." The critics found fault with Mr. Bryant's poem on the ground that it was un-Christian; it remains to be seen what they will say of Mr. Buchanan's. The question, "Has Christianity Benefited Woman?" is ably discussed in this number by Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Bishop J. L. Spalding. President J. L. Pickard writes on "Why Crime is Increasing," and David Dudley Field on "Industrial Co-operation," while Prof. Andrew F. West, of Princeton, contributes an article of great clearness and strength on "What is Academic Freedom?" James Payn, the English novelist, discusses "Success in Fiction," and T. F. Thiselton Dyer "Superstition in English Life." The new department of Comments keeps well up to the standard with which it started.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for May deals largely with original and timely articles. It opens with an article by W. A. Croffut, the well-known newspaper correspondent, entitled "The Birth of a New Party." Alvan S. Southworth describes "The New State of Congo," and its importance to the trade and commerce of the world. The Egyptian question comes in for its share in the article on Col. F. G. Burnaby, with portraits of Burnaby and his wife, views of his home and scenes in his career. The story element is well kept up. Garrett Walker's serial, "The Death mark," reaches its thirty-third chapter, and there are six short stories. All of these articles are illustrated, some of the pictures being very beautiful. There are several poems of considerable merit, and numerous short articles, interesting and timely. Published by Mrs. Frank Leslie, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

The April number of the Young Ladies' Journal is overflowing with good things for the ladies, there is every conceivable fashion and every thing of the latest style. Besides the fashions and fancy work there are several interesting stories and a larger number of selections. The magazine is an English publication and controlled in this country by the International News Co., of New York. It can be bought at Mrs. Gilson's.

Babyhood for April has among other good things a familiar talk with mothers about baby's day nap and nursery crockery, treatment of accidents and injuries, nursery helps and novelties, baby's wardrobe, etc. This magazine is edited by Dr. Yale and Mrs. Harland, and published in New York at $1.50 a year. It is a great help to young mothers in the care of children.

ODD FELLOWS.—Editor Turner of the Albany Guide, in a recent address before Hamden lodge of Springfield, at its forty-first anniversary exercises, said the following true things about the order: 1000 sick persons were visited every day last year; 59,557 were ministered unto at a cost of $1,369,000, or an average of $23.44 for each person, the expenses being $5500 per day. The families of 2914 widows were relieved, the money spent in this way being $168,032. The burial of 5211 members, a daily average of 14, took $350,279, or $76.22 for each. This item alone justifies the answer of a public man, when questioned why he took so much interest in the order, 'Because I never knew an Odd Fellow to be buried by the county or be granted a pauper burial by his lodge.' And it may be said that the general average cost of funerals in the order is not less than $93. There was spent last year $12-571 for the education of orphan children, and $38000 went for outside relief, the total sum for relief, being $2,015,881, or $5523 daily and $230 every hour. The receipts of the order in America were $5,320,-000, or $15,000 a day. These figures show what Odd Fellows can do in one small year, one little day, one minute, one hour. There are in the United States 1000 lodges of Daughters of Rebekah, and they spent for relief $13,000 last year. The total number of active Odd Fellows is 523,000.

WONDERS NEVER CEASE.—Prof. C. Donaldson, New Orleans. La., proprietor of Museums, who suffered eighteen years with rheumatic pains, states he has spent ten thousand dollars to get cured. After trying doctors, famous baths, electric appliances and legions of liniment without relief, he tried St. Jacobs Oil, which completely cured him. It is a wonderful remedy, he says, and he has sold his crutches.

Calcutta's trade amounted to four hundred million dollars last year.

SPARKS.

Saturday afternoon, at their regular meeting, the Selectmen appointed the following for Engineers of the Fire Department for the ensuing year: William W. Reed, William J. Roome, John H. Tibbetts, Samuel H. Buxton and Alfred E. Johnson. Engineer Reed is the only member of the present Board who was re-appointed. The new engineers are all firemen and men of experience, having been at the head of different companies in the department, and Wm. J. Roome has served on the Board of Engineers when the new house was first occupied. They will probably make a good board and will work hard for the good of the department. There were twelve candidates for the positions and the ballots were as follows:—

	Informal	Formal
D. S. Littlefield,	1	1
D. B. Lord,	1	1
William Mitchell,	1	1
William J. Roome,	3	3
John H. Tibbetts.	4	5
William W. Reed,	4	4
John A. P. Sumner,	3	2
B. B. Humphrey,	2	0
Samuel H. Buxton,	3	3
Charles G. Folsom.	0	0

Reed, Tibbetts, Roome and Buxton were elected on this ballot and a ballot was then taken for the fifth man, A. E. Johnson received 3 votes, Littlefield and Peirce, 1 each, and Johnson was elected. We have nothing against the new board, on the contrary we think highly of them as firemen, but we do think that the Selectmen have made a great mistake in making so radical a change in the Board at this time. It was expected that some change would be made, but it was a great surprise to the majority of our citizens upon learning the result. Petitions were presented to the Selectmen signed by about 124 firemen and citizens requesting that certain ones might be retained, and another containing 38 names, or 37, as one name is on twice, asking for the appointment of the very Board that the Selectmen appointed; but the Selectmen say that they took no notice of any petitions whatever. It certainly is a little funny that when it came to balloting for the Engineers, that the very names should come out on top, that were on the petition in opposition to the old Board. It makes us think that there was something in the poster displayed on town meeting day, that "The Old Board are in favor of a change in the Board of Fire Engineers," and had it been understood at that time, as it is now, it might have made some difference in the result.

Chief Littlefield will step down and out at 12 o'clock M., on April 30, after a continuous service of 41 years in the fire department of this town, having served on the hand engines in the old days, and being appointed on the Board of Engineers from the foremanship of Volunteer No. 4. He was elected Chief Engineer in 1871, and has held it ever since, conducting his department wisely and with credit to the town and himself. He retires with the respect of all the firemen under his command and with an honorable record. Assistant Engineer Folsom has been on the Board about eight years. Assistant Engineer Lord about the same time and Engineer Pierce for the last four or five years. They have been good firemen and hard workers. The reasons for the dropping of the old Board are not given, although rumors have been floating around ever since the Upton fire that there would be a change. The following are the signers of the successful petition:—J. B. Thomas, Wm. J. McCarthy, M. S. Clark, R. S. D. Symonds, B. B. Humphrey, A. F. Dodge, D. G. Upton, R. G. Buxton, C. A. Thomas, E. W. Abbott, T. H. Sawyer, George Upton, P. Mahoney, George Holman, Eagan & Kelley, John Linehan, Chas. O. Warner, George H. Clark, C. A. Batchelder, Wm. Sutton, L. B. Southwick, H. C. Torr, L. E. Allen, Edgar W. Upton, J. M. Lloyd, Thomas E. Wilson, Pemberton Bros., P. L. Winchester, H. P. Reed, F. T. Arnold, Thomas H. Jackman, E. F. Marsh, J. A. Lord, Jr., Samuel Symonds, George Upton, John Pinder & Son, George J. Winchester, Wm. P. Clark, Jas. N. Burbeck, Warren Shaw, Thomas E. Proctor, George H. Poor, A. F. Clark, W. T. Dole.

Foreman Charles H. Potter of Hose 4, who has been on the sick list for the last four months, walked up to the square Saturday afternoon for the first time.

An alarm of fire was rung in from box 21, at 7.02, Friday evening, caused by a slight fire at 280 Essex street, Lynn. The fire started in an unoccupied attic in the ell, and was probably caused by mice and matches. The attic was used only as a store room and the nests of mice were found. The building is owned by Perley King, of Peabody, and was occupied by a widow named Elizabeth Johnson. The whole amount of damage will reach $150. The department was on the spot in good time, but only the services of the extinguisher were needed.

It was Steamer 1 and not Steamer 2, that received the new piece of suction hose last week.

Last Friday a party of boys set fire to a lot of bedding spread to dry, in front of the barn on the William Bushby estate, at the corner of Central and Tremont street, and but for the timely discovery of the fire by some one passing, it would have got into the barn, which is occupied by Chas. H. Goulding as a stable.

The Chairman of Selectmen of Camden, Maine, was in town yesterday afternoon and closed up the bargain on the S. C. Bancroft hand engine, and the machine was shipped this afternoon. The engine was worked to show that it was in thorough order, at Tapley's brook yesterday afternoon.

New hydrants are being put in around town in place of the old Newport hydrants. To-day the one in front of the engine house is being changed.

Foreman Miller, of Hook and Ladder No. 1, was on Wednesday evening, while present at the dance of Hose 6, in Salem, presented with a large loaf of cake, frosted in handsome figures, with four standards supporting a tablet all in frost work, with Active Hose 6, Salem, on the tablet. This cake was presented to Hose 6 by Hose 5, of Salem, for getting first water on a fire in that city. It will be placed with the other trophies in the truck room.

Brush fires have been raging around us for the past week. Over 200 acres of woodland were burned over in West Peabody.

Meetings will be held by Steamer 1 and Hose 3, this evening.

There are all kinds of rumors as to the intentions of the new Board of Engineers, and on every corner can be seen little groups of firemen discussing the situation. The new board will probably organize some time this week. Papers for new companies are flying around lively.

Amos Corey engineer of Steamer 2, and Edward Flynn fireman of the same, have given in their notice, that they shall not run that engine only until new men can be appointed. Their business will not permit of it.

D. B. Lord and men were at work all Friday night connecting the reservoir, corner of Aborn and Boston streets, with the high service. This reservoir is in Salem, under the charge of the Salem fire department, and was formerly connected with the old log, but was cut off a few years ago. At the last meeting of the Salem Engineers it was decided to connect again, this time with the Peabody high service. z.

SOUTH PEABODY.

The concert at the church last Thursday night given by the St. Stephen's choir assisted by Miss Barelle, of Lynn, was deserving of a better house than was present. The singing of Messrs. Felt, Duffer and Johnson was highly appreciated. Also the singing of "The Lord is my Sheperd," by Master Williams, and "Angels ever bright and fair" by Master Reynolds, was very well received. Miss Barelle sang three selections which were very finely rendered. About twenty dollars will be netted for the society.

Wm. Mitchell has been granted a license to run a pool table.

Someone set fire in the woods in the rear of Cedar Grove Cemetery last Saturday, which burned over about thirty acres of ground. Mr. D. S. Roberts with assistants worked nearly all the afternoon putting it out.

The Geo. Upton estate are having a new dam built in the place of the one recently washed away at Upton's pond.

Mr. F. O. Needham has bought the old house on County St., owned by the town, and will have it torn down as soon as vacated.

The L. & B. R. R. commenced running on the half hour last Sunday for the first time this season, and they also have run open cars for the past two days.

An Important Food Reform.

PRODUCTION OF CHEMICALLY PURE CREAM OF TARTAR—TOTAL ELIMINATION OF ALL LIME IMPURITIES—NEW DISCOVERIES IN REFINING — A LONG STRIDE TOWARD PURE FOOD.

Discoveries of much importance on account of the relation they bear toward a more wholesome food supply and consequently upon the public health, have been recently made in the process of refining cream of tartar. Cream of tartar, as is well known, is a bitartrate of potassa purified from the crude tartar, or argol, which collects in a crystalline deposit upon the bottom and sides of wine casks during the fermentation of the wine. This tartar, in its crude state, contains lime and other impurities, which no process of refining known prior to that here described was able to entirely remove. It has been possible, it is true, to neutralize the lime to some extent by the aid of chemicals, and this method was resorted to in order to procure cream of tartar in small quantities for pharmaceutical purposes; but it was open to serious objection in view of the fact that the chemicals employed for this purpose were not always washed out but remained in quantities that were uncertain and prejudicial to its quality. The supposed impossibility of removing the lime has, accordingly, caused cream of tartar to be classed and sold as pure when it did not contain more than five per cent. of this impurity. The major part, however, of that used in commerce, or for culinary purposes, contains the tartrate of lime to an extent much greater than five per cent., not infrequently being found, upon analysis, debased to a degree equaling one-fourth or more of its entire weight.

In a report upon the subject of food adulteration made to the New York State Board of Health by Professors Chandler and Love, it is stated that of 27 samples of cream of tartar bought from dealers as pure, 16 were adulterated with various substances from 3 to 93 per cent. while of the remainder all contained tartrate of lime, some as high as 10.59 per cent.

The serious character of this adulteration is more readily appreciated when it is recollected how largely cream of tartar enters into the preparation of the food of every family. In connection with soda in baking powder it is the chief agent now employed for raising and making light and digestible all our biscuit, cake, and other pastry, and is besides, in many communities, superseding the old fashioned yeast for all leavening purposes, so that it is employed to some extent in almost every meal of which we eat. The amount of cream of tartar used in this country in a year in baking powder and otherwise in the preparation of food, is estimated at ten million pounds. If this were 90 per cent. pure—a high estimate—we would consume one million pounds or more of lime annually as a substitute for bread. So large a deterioration becomes appreciable in the deprivation of our food of a portion of its nutritive elements not only, but if, as is now supposed, this excess of lime taken into the system has a relation to the painful affections of the kidneys so prevalent in this country, its bearing upon the health of the entire community is too important to be overlooked.

The new process by which cream of tartar is produced 100 per cent. pure—that is, with the lime totally eliminated—by treating the crude material under pressure instead of using any chemicals whatever for the purpose, was the discovery originally of a German chemist, but has been developed and perfected by the Royal Baking Powder Company of this city, through whose efforts a few years since in behalf of a high standard of purity in food, the public was rid of the poisonous alum baking powders at that time so prevalent.

The determination of this Company to place upon the market only absolutely pure goods and the impossibility of doing this from the cream of tartar of commerce, made it apparent that some new method must be sought by which cream of tartar could be procured in large quantities, free from lime and chemically pure. The cream of tartar refiners of this country and Europe when approached upon the subject, declared such a result impossible, and declined to incur the expenditure necessary to make the trial. The Royal Baking Powder Company, accordingly, resolved to solve the problem for itself; and having secured the aid of the best chemists of Europe and America, proceeded with its investigations and discoveries until the result, after several years of labor and the expenditure of over half a million dollars in the purchase of patents, perfecting of processes, and the erection of buildings and machinery, was reached in the complete attainment of the end sought. The works (now owned by the New York Tartar Co.,) are located in Brooklyn, and exceed in size and capacity any other similar refinery in the world. They produce a chemically pure cream of tartar, which is now exclusively used for pharmaceutical preparations, and in the manufacture of the celebrated Royal Baking Powder.

The energy and outlay that have effected this, will undoubtedly be fully rewarded by the public which will chiefly benefit by the successful issue of the investigations. People are coming daily to more fully appreciate the value of pure and wholesome food. By the exclusive use of this chemically pure cream of tartar, the Royal Baking Powder is produced entirely free from lime, and absolutely pure, qualities possessed by no other baking powders yet made. A baking powder entirely free from lime or other impurity must not only contain more strength or leavening power and produce better food and therefore be more economical for use, but what is more important, possess qualties of superior wholesomeness.

Chemists and physicians have looked upon the experiments with much interest and regard their success as a matter of much importance.—N. Y. Tribune.

The Depopulated Highlands.

There are few Highland glens that do not contain traces of the banished population. In Lochaber, along the shores of Loch Arkaig, the home of the clan Cameron, the remains of what were once extensive townships may yet be seen. The celebrated Glencoe formerly teemed with a hardy population. Famous Glengarry is a sheep walk, and the powerful clan Macdonnell are now in Canada. Round Fort Augustus and far into the country of the clan Fraser is naught but desolation. In hundreds of straths in Ross-shire the wild heather has not even yet obliterated the green pastures, and the cultivated fields that once belonged to the MacKenzies and Munroes, and from whence the different battalions of the gallant Ross-shire buffs marched to conquer at Maidra, at Seringapatam, at Assaye, and Argaum. So late as 1849, when the present prime minister had already obtained political eminence, Hugh Miller attempted, but fruitlessly, to draw the attention of the British public to the work of destruction that was going on. He eloquently proclaimed that "while the law is banishing its tens for terms of seven and fourteen years, the penalty of deep-dyed crimes, irresponsible and infatuated power is banishing its thousands for life for no crime whatever." A large number of the dispossessed tenantry were sent to America; the remainder settled on the seashore, where they were cramped into small holdings, and have since lived. The tourist steaming along the wild coast of the western Highlands and islands may see perched on every cliff, in the most exposed situations and subject to the fury of Atlantic gales, the wretched hamlets that now contain the remnants of the Highland clans. Probably he will wonder how a population can at all manage to exist under such conditions. But there they are, elbowed to the very verge of their country. For large tracts of that country the proprietors even now can show no scrap of document, their claim to possess resting solely on the fact that it has never been contested. Created and looked upon, like the foxes, as mere vermin that interfere with sport, discouraged and thwarted in every direction, these people, notwithstanding their poverty and the hardships of their lot, have maintained unimpaired the noblest attributes of their race. Crime of any kind is almost unknown among them. Their moral standard is the highest in Britain, contrasting in that respect most remarkably with their lowland neighbors; and not a few of the leading British statesmen, lawyers, divines, and soldiers of the past eighty years first saw the light in these crofters' huts. Far behind the strip of inhabited littoral stretch the Blue mountains, the snug and often fertile glens from whence the clans were banished, now turned into silent wilderness, inhabited only by sheep and deer and an occasional shepherd or keeper. There are the vast tracts, rented by the American, Mr. Winans, as a hunting ground, to be visited by that alien for two or three months, and abandoned to solitude for the remainder of the year, where not even a native of the soil may plant his foot.—The Nineteenth Century.

Monotony of American Men.

A visitor from the new world can not but be struck with the absolute independence with which Englishmen live up to their own ideas, whether they coincide with the general current of opinion or not. On the other side of the Atlantic public sentiment rules with almost irresistible force; no erratic departures from the general law are tolerated; every man must conform to the rules of the majority. If you know one young man in the United States you know them all. They resemble each other with curious fidelity in dress, manner, and appearance. Their very thoughts, racy and original as they are, run in the same groove, and they give expression to them in the same crystallized forms of speech. This iron rule does not prevail to nearly so great an extent in Canada, but it exists with sufficient force to make the independence of the individual Englishman marked even to a Canadian. The old Indian generals who affect eastern modes of life in misty England, the retired sea captains whose talk is ever in nautical phrases of nautical matters, and other riders of hobbies innumerable, who have furnished materials to many authors, and amusement to many generations of readers, abound in England and help to render the land picturesque and attractive.

All these harmless and amusing eccentricities are almost ruled down into a dead level of monotonous uniformity in the new world. Perhaps I should except New York from this general statement. This, the greatest city in America, is the most cosmopolitan in its character. Men of all nationalities go to make up its vast population; it is less distinctly American than Philadelphia or Boston. Its young men, whether intentionally or not, closely resemble young Englishmen; indeed, all classes exhibit their own peculiarities uninfluenced by the repressing tyranny of general habits or opinions.—Cassel's Family Magazine.

The "Old Man" is dead. He was a dog. He lived, while he did live, in Louisville. He often rode with his master on horseback, and would mount before or behind, as bidden, and seemed to understand how to manage sheep as well as a man. On one occasion he was attempting to cross some lambs over a ditch, and not being able to make them take the water, seized them by the neck and led them across one at a time. This valuable canine was shot about a month ago by some reckless herder, the ball taking effect in his back. The poor animal suffered intensely for two weeks, and then died. —Louisville Courier-Journal.

Pastry Without Butter.—The American pie has been subjected to more unjust abuse from foreign writers than any other of our distinctive products, if we except the recent tirade against the American hog. And yet we cannot say that it has been altogether undeserved, because of the villianous compound, thick, hard and heavy, that is too often made to do duty as a "crust," and which by courtesy is called "pastry." Light, tender, flaky, and digestible pie-crust and all kinds of pastry can be made most readily by the use of Royal Baking Powder without any butter, or with half the usual portion, if preferred, or with a small quantity of lard or other shortening as desired. Pie-crust thus made is much more wholesome and digestible, because being more economical and easier prepared. In addition to saving all the butter if desired, one-third the flour is also dispensed with, as the crust is rolled that much thinner, the leavening qualities of the Royal Baking Powder swelling it to the requisite thickness. If drippings or lard be used the Royal Baking Powder removes any unpleasant taste, rendering the crust as short, sweet and pleasant as if made from the finest butter. Those who know the appetizing qualities of the genuine home-made American pie will rejoice that by the aid of Royal Baking Powder in the pastry it can be made quite as digestible as it is delicious.

The new eleven o'clock liquor law is likely to prove quite as much of a "dead letter" measure as many of its predecessors. While the law may require the saloon keepers to stop the sale of liquor at eleven o'clock, there is another law which allows all holders of a common victualler's license to keep their place of business open until twelve, and keepers of saloons are not apt to be men so good and lawful as to observe the letter even, much less the spirit of the law.—Exchange.

We have no doubt of the truth of the above remark, in the main. There is fully enough in the law as it stands at present to enforce. Many of the saloon keepers will be glad of the opportunity to close at eleven o'clock, others will not. And there is nothing clearer than that the police can not close the doors of the saloons before twelve o'clock, despite the law as stated above.

At this time when public interest centers in Gen. Grant a fine life picture is much sought after. We have received from J. H. Bufford & Co., of Boston, an elegant lithograph of Gen. Grant, which is pronounced perfect by those who have seen it. With the picture of Gen. Grant is a lithograph of the Washington Monument, showing the grounds and many public buildings, including the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, Arlington, Lee's residence, Observatory, Georgetown College, State Navy and War department, White House, Treasury department, and others.

The announcement that the real name of the author of "The Prophet of the Great Smoky Mountains" is not Charles Egbert Craddock, but Mary N. Murfree, will cause many readers of the May Atlantic to turn first to that story to continue it in the light of this discovery. The two chapters contained in this readable number are among the best pieces of writing yet given us by this author. Mrs. Oliphant's serial is continued, as is "A Marsh Island." Dr. Holmes turns over some new leaves in his delightful "New Portfolio," and the genial articles on "Madame Mohl and her Salon" are completed all too soon. There is some excellent poetry, and the usual Contributors' Club and Books of the Month close the number.

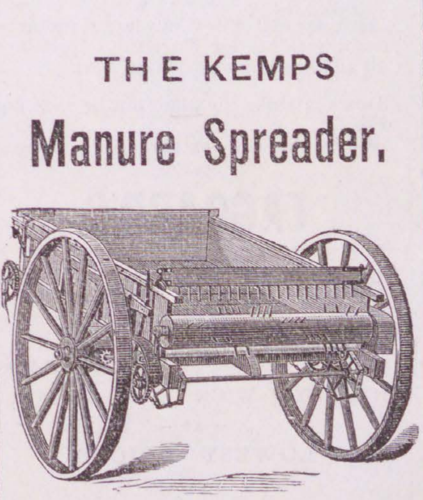
Manure Spreader.



The demand for Spreader is rapidly increasing every way, which is a good recommendation of its merit, and now is just the season you want to use one. It will do the work of five men and spread your manure much finer, so the first good rain will completely dissolve it and give to the grass and vegetable roots nourishment much quicker and more evenly, than when spread the old way, by the shovelful.

You can't afford to be without one.

We have them in stock, come and get one. Price, $100. We carry the largest stock of

At a meeting of the Jeffers Neck proprietors at Ipswich, Thursday, it was voted to extend the lease of J. B. Thomas, of Peabody, to gun on the Neck; five years, at $35 per year, and it was voted to take action against all trespassers.

Poet's Corner.

The Crazy Quilt.

"My darling wife, pray tell me
Why not in time for your cup of tea?"
And the lady told me, pensively:
"Sew, sisters, sew, sew with care;
Sew on the work of the ten-inch square,
A blue silk bit for the upper side,
And a pink silk bit not quite so wide;
A bit of plush of an olive green,
And small ish piece of velveteen;
A scarlet piece for the corner there
And a scrap of white, and here's your square."

My darling wife, pray, promise me
To be in time for our cup of tea."
And the lady answered, pensively:
"Sew, sisters, sew, sew with care.
Put in your time on the ten-inch square,
Send by the post and go by the car,
And bore your friends both near and far;
The attic search, and search the chest,
For grandma's dress and grandpa's vest.
Cut, sisters, cut, cut with care
Straight or zigzag, round or square."

"But, darling wife, do promise me;
To be in time for our cup of tea."
And still she answered, pensively
"Stitch, sisters, stitch, stitch with care,
Stitch on the work of the tench-inch
square.
A bonnet crown's a very good thing,
And a splendid 'find' is a bonnet string;
'Most anything is sure to fit;
For it's hit and miss, and miss and hit,
Or 'get up' a stitch that's all your own;
The trident stitch or the buttonhole,
And sew away by the perch or pole.
Cut, sisters, cut, sew with care,
Stitch ahead on the ten-inch square.
A yellow patch with a bit of blue,
A pumpkin brown with an old-gold hue;
And a lemon-orange-reddish glare,
You're sure to have to your ten-inch
square!"

Don't Judge A Man By His Dress.

ANNIE M. CURTIS.

O, speak not a rude word in greeting,
Nor turn from the lowly with scorn;
There's often a kindly heart beating
Neath raiment old-fashioned and worn.
Then strive while earth's ways here you travel
Some dull life to brighten and bless.
A kind word costs nothing; be civil,
And don't judge a man by his dress.

How many we meet here who never
Are strangers to sorrow and want—
A failure each earnest endeavor—
Whose share of earth's comforts is scant.
Not ours then to question or cavil,
As onward the weary feet press.
A kind word costs nothing: be civil,
And don't judge a man by his dress.

Who values the riches one gathers
If poverty's cry be in vain?
What measure you mete unto others
To you shall be meted again.
The mills of the gods may grind slowly,
Yet evenly, nevertheless.
Then reach a kind hand to the lowly,
And don't judge a man by his dress.

'Twere wise to be chary in scorning
The bearer of want's heavy load,
For wealth may take wings without warning.
There's often a turn in the road.
The proudest may find the level
Of those they would pain and oppress.
Then speak not in language uncivil,
Nor guage a man's worth by his dress.

Don't Be in a Hurry.

BY L. H. W.

Do nothing in a hurry: make
As much haste as you please:
For diligence gets through the world
With comfort, skill and ease;
But, if with thoughtless speed you act,
'Twill put you in a flurry;
So, mind my words—be cool and quick,
But don't be in a hurry!

When those who'd climb up Fortune's mount
(That hill so steep and tall!)
Attempt to scramble to the top,
They're sure to slip and fall,
While those who firmly plant each step
Her favor surely curry;
So lose no time in pressing on,
But—don't be in a hurry!

If (this to gentlemen) you love,
Why, hasten, I implore you,
To "pop the question" lest perchance,
Another does before you!
Yet first a question ask yourself—
'Twill save much useless worry—
"Does she love me?" If Doubt reply,
Then—don't be in a hurry!

And you, dear ladies, when you hear
(As all will do in turn)
The interesting "first appeal"
To pause, ere answering, learn.
Fear not by slight delay to lose
A lover; 'spite your flurry,
"Look ere you leap"—true love will keep.
So—don't be in a hurry!

Selected Story.

Paula's Romance.

BY GUINEVERE.

Two gentlemen were seated in the little amber-and-blue reception-room awaiting Miss Pearl Dupont's coming; one a blonde, faultlessly attired man of the world, the other dark, withal a trifle older, less handsome perhaps, but with a truer character written on every feature.

'I really believe that little Paula grows prettier every day,' said Roy Marchmont. 'Why, she is a positive little beauty, although too charming—'

'For her position, interrupted Ralph Winston, quietly.

'Pshaw, don't be a prig, Winston. Why should not a waiting maid b pretty as well as any one else?'

'Because their beauty too often proves a ban.'

His tone seemed to signify more than the mere words implied, and Roy Marchmont's face flushed a trifle.

'What do you mean?' he demanded.

'Just what I said, generally speaking; but in this case, Marchmont, something more. Paula Ware is pretty, but you know as well as I do that you care nothing for her beyond—'

'You are wrong. I like the girl exceedingly well.'

'Would you—marry her?'

Marchmont started, surprise, consternation, hauteur, all depicted on his handsome face; then he laughed lightly.

'Winston, are you jesting?'

'No, I am not.'

'Then you are mad. I marry a waiting maid, an ignorant, untutored girl! I marry Paula Ware! What induced you to put that query?'

'To test you, Marchmont, that's all. You have sought this girl's society, won her favor by flattery and smooth words and meaningless attentions, the worthlessness of which she cannot understand; you defend your cause when I would adjudge lightly, express freely your admiration and shall I say fancy? and then, in the next breath, scorn and ridicule her. It is not a manly part, Marchmont?'

'You are eloquent,' sneered the other. 'Servants are generally capable of taking care of their own interests.'

'Paula Ware is not like the other girls of her position. If she commits an error it is because of her ignorance; if she encourages folly it is because she does not understand. I am heartily sorry for her.'

It was at this juncture that Pearl Dupont's loveliness dissipated all gloomier thoughts from the minds of her visitors, and for a while Paula Ware was forgotten. But an hour later, on their way out, they met her in the wide, lighted hall.

It was not an accidental meeting, as Ralph Winston knew, for the waiting-maid's brown eyes and those of his friend met with a sort of mutual understanding.

Ralph had been making several observations lately. These meetings with Paula Ware grew more frequent as time went on; her brown hair with its golden gleams was worn no longer in the old plain way, but clipped, and waved over her forehead, and her dark, simple attire brightened by a cluster of artificial flowers or a knot of gay ribbon.

She was a little, slim creature, with an oval, childish face, brilliant coloring, and great, dark, lustre eyes, touching with their innocent, appealing expression that seemed to solicit sympathy and love.

Ralph's face unconsciously took on a stern look as he watched her, and Paula, seeing this in one swift glance, seemed to shrink from him involuntarily as though in fear.

Roy Marchmont had paused to exchange a few words, and ere he left had taken the pale rosebud from his coat and laid it among the brown braids.

Paula's eyes glistened with pleasure.

'Are you so fond of flowers?' he asked.

'Oh, yes, I love them dearly,' she said in her sweet, plaintive voice. 'They are like living things to me.'

And the bright face drooped sadly.

'I will send you some, since they please you,' said Roy, carelessly; but he smiled down into the grateful face upraised to his, and there was that in his glance that such men as Roy Marchmont can assure to give their lightest words the deepest significance.

'Marchmont,' said Ralph, when they were alone together, 'are you not going to far?'

'Don't let my affairs trouble you,' was the light answer, and that was the last time the subject ever came between them for discussion.

Roy Marchmont had a suite of rooms at an up-town hotel, and it was there that Ralph sought him on the morrow.

Two hours before his arrival Roy had decided to go to the club-house, and, seated at his desk, to pen a few lines to his friend, requesting him to join him there, he drew a note from his pocket and read it over, tossing it aside with a shrug of his shoulders.

Side by side it lay with the newly written missive, and, with his usual carelessness, it was the latter that Roy's white hands tore into strips to consign to the waste-basket, and the other, carefully sealed, was delivered to Ralph.

He read it over with a look of wonder on his dark face; again, and a sudden light seemed to dawn upon him.

It was that evening that he called again at the Dupont mansion.

'Miss Pearl,' he said, 'you told me last evening you were going on a Southern tour. Do you start soon?'

'Next week, Mr. Winston.'

'Do you intend to dismiss any of your servants? A friend of mine has lost her maid lately, and is anxious to have one who is competent to take her place. She mentioned the subject to me, and I thought of your departure and—'

Ralph paused; it seemed rather a singular errand, and more embarrassing by reason of its being a fiction on his part. But the pretty blonde, in no way disconcerted, only smiled sweetly, and clasped her hands in her girlish, impulsive way.

'Why, how opportune, Mr. Winston,' she said, enthusiastically. 'I am so glad you came to me. I have Marie for my own use, you know, but there is another—Paula Ware, such a sweet girl, I really hesitated about dismissing her. But if I knew she could obtain another position I would be delighted. I'll send for her now, and you can talk matters over. Meanwhile, I must tell mamma of the good luck. I am really very fond of Paula.'

How matters seemed to work right into Ralph Winston's hands. Paula came in half shyly, half reluctantly, and stood before him waiting for him to speak. In silence he drew a folded paper from his pocket and gave it to her.

One startled glance from the great brown eyes, and her head fell upon her breast; she stood there trembling from head to foot.

'Paula,' said Ralph, kindly, 'that note came into my possession by a mere chance, but I am glad for the opportunity to speak to you and warn you of your danger. So Roy Marchmont has asked you to go away with him?'

'Yes; but he meant it kindly, I think,' she answered, tremulously. 'He has been very good to me—he is my only friend.'

'A cruel friend,' said Ralph beneath his breath, 'Paula, such a man would break a dozen hearts like yours. How happens it you know so little of the baseness of this world?'

'How could I?' she asked.

His manner and tones had reassured her, and his was a face to be trusted.

'I lived all my life with my uncle,' she continued. 'He was a strange man, and together we lived alone in a country village. He would not allow me to make friends. He himself taught me all that I know, and it was only at his death that I knew what it was to meet strangers. He meant that I should be wealthy, but he speculated and lost everything. So I came here to work, but it is hard for me. I miss his love and kindness. I—I—Only Mr. Marchmont has seemed to care for me, and—.'

She broke down and wept bitterly; then, when the storm had passed and she could restrain herself, she fell on her knees beside Ralph and raised her face appealingly.

'Tell me—do you know that he is not a friend?'

'A friend never trifles with a trusting heart, never scorns and ridicules an innocent girl, never plans to wreck her life. Roy Marchmont is betrothed to a handsome heiress; they are to be married this winter, and yet he has tried to win your love, and—Child, child, how innocent and blind you are!'

'How could I know, how could I know?' she sobbed. 'Tell me what can I do?'

'Will you follow my advice?'

'Yes—only tell me.'

'You must leave here—never see Roy Marchmont again. My aunt is going to England soon and needs a companion. Will you go with her?'

Paula bowed her head and rose, a strange look of decision on her lovely dark face.

'Yes, I will go,' she said quietly. 'You are very kind—I—I thank you.'

* * * * *

Six months later. Alone in his room Ralph Winston read a letter from the Continent—read and reread one particular paragraph near its close.

'You will be surprised and no doubt pleased, Ralph, to learn that my young companion is now a heiress in possession of a fortune far exceeding yours or mine. She met her father two months ago. It is rather a romantic story. Her father and his brother, the uncle, Paula lived with formerly, loved the same woman, and when the younger won her, his brother became his worst enemy. The wife died a few years later, and about the same time their child was stolen. He had searched for her in vain; neither she nor the brother were to be found. This doubtlessly explains the life of seclusion Paula's uncle forced her to lead. She was recognized by her close resemblance to the mother. Is it not strange? Paula's last words ere we parted were words of thanks for you, Ralph, for obtaining a situation for her in her need, I suppose. I was much attached to her, but with her beauty and intelligence she was always meant for a lady.'

Ralph sighed as he ended the perusal—surely not in regret for Paula's good fortune. It came. to him then that he had been more than interested in her welfare, and now they might never meet again.

The months sped by; a year had gone, and then, summoned one day to receive a visitor, he came face to face with a slim, stately beauty radiant in velvet and jewels, a white-plumed hat crowning the jetty braids above a face of dark, rare loveliness.

'Do you not know me, Mr. Winston?' a sweet plaintive voice said. 'Has the name of Paula Ware so soon slipped your memory? Yes, I am she—Paula Ware, and had not the ocean rolled between us all these months, I would have come before to see you—my best friend!'

Frank and impulsive as ever, Ralph thought of her words when she had gone, and wondered why they thrilled him so, why she had come to him after all that while to recall the past. It was a few months after that he realized it all—why he had befriended Paula, why she had sought him. These human hearts are often so hard to understand.

It was not Paula Ware, but Paula Winston, who said:

'Ralph, do you know that Roy Marchmont never married? I met him abroad while with my father and he dared to come to me and seek my favor—he thought I loved him still. I knew that I never loved him. I scorned and despised him then, for, oh, Ralph, to you I had given my whole heart, unsought, undesired as I thought, but I loved you, and had we never met again, but that could not be, I was resolved to see you, to prove myself worthy, to win your love, Ralph.'

'And

"'When a woman will, she will,
You may depend on't,'" quoth Ralph, gayly.

Good Sound Preaching.—The minister of a fashionable church in Harrisburg, who was being continually interrupted by the violent coughing of one of his flock, stopped suddenly in the midst of his sermon and requested the congregation to take up a collection for the purpose of supplying the noisy brother with a bottle of Red Star Cough Cure. This newly discovered anti-narcotic remedy is becoming extremely popular on account of its wonderful efficacy. Postmaster Adreon, of Baltimore, endorses it highly, and the Commissioner of Health of the same city certifies officially that it is a most valuable and effective discovery.

Advice to a Young Man 'With the Prettiest mostach You Ever Seen.'

——Wis., March 26, '85,

I am deadly in love with Rich girl and I don't no how she feels about it she told me she loved me with all her might but she kissed me oney once I am a barber and can handle the razur in great shape I have the prettiest mostash yov ever seen just as black as a crow I wish you would tell me how to work up my case as I never was in love before her old dad told me if he cot me around his house again he would lift my coat tails with his boots but I will look out for that. please answer and tell me what you would do in a case of this Kind I remain yours resp. P. P. P

The above, literatim et punctuatim, comes written on gilt-edged note paper, with round corners, and smells of bay rum and pomatum, so it is probably genuine.

It is something of a delicate matter to present good advice in such a case as this, without knowing all the parties, but if you, P. P. P., are an exemplary young man in every other respect, the fact you are a barber need not render your case hopeless, although it will probably be useless to try and bring the old man around at present. If you could manage to entice him into the shop some time and get over him with a razor you might make terms. Almost any man would sacrifice a daughter rather than be talked to death, or run the risk of having his jugular severed by a disliked suitor for hand and ducats. That, however, is not likely to occur, as he would not be apt to place himself at your mercy, and probably shaves himself, if shaved at all.

On the face of it—the fact of your writing a letter on such a subject—the fact that the girl is rich, and you, probably, have no unusual amount of wealth, brains or anything to depend on except handing a razor in great shape, and the father is dead set against you, perhaps the most sensible thing to do would be to let the matter rest awhile until you can show the old man that you are able to carve out a competency with your cunning right hand, assisted by the left in shampoos and hair cuts.

There is another point. You say you don't know how she feels about it, and yet assert that she told you she loved you with all her might: That ought to satisfy any reasonable man. You don't expect her to be kissing you very often, do you? If you do, you are decidedly foolish. You should, however, find out whether she loves you for yourself alone, or for that pretty mustache. Such a mustache as you describe will go a great way towards turning an impressionable young girl's head. Cut it off and then see how she receives. If it makes no difference, cheer up, wait patiently till you have a shop of your own and are making money with your own unequaled Hair Invigorator, warranted to bring out a luxuriant head of hair on a marble statue. Such a girl will be worth waiting for.—Peck's Sun.

New Uses of Celluloid.—As a down-town printer, who had just completed the printing of a lot of illustrated circulars, was washing the type and cuts with benzine, a young man noticed that the cuts were white instead of the ordinary copper color of electrotypes.

"New kind of metal for electrotypes?" asked the young man.

"No. These are celluloid stereotypes. It is a new use for celluloid. The plates are easily made. The engraving or the form of type to be stereotyped is first used to make a paper matrix, just as if a common metal stereotype was to be made. Then this matrix is placed in a form, and over it is laid a sheet of celluloid. The two are put in a hydraulic press, the temperature is raised to 300° F., the celluloid is pressed into the matrix at a pressure of 400 pounds to the square-inch, and then the thing is done. When taken out and cooled the celluloid is an exact counterpart of the original form, and when cemented to a suitable wood backing it is good for four times as many impressions as a copper stereotype. Besides that it is not easily damaged.

"Another use made of celluloid is in facing wood type. This is done by laying a thin sheet of celluloid over the face of a big block of wood, and the two are shoved into the hot press. When they come out the celluloid has been forced into the pores of the wood an eighth of an inch, and has made a surface that is simply beautiful. The block is then cut up into wood type by the ordinary wood type machine, or it may be sold to wood engravers, who find it equal to boxwood."—New York Sun.

A Great Victory

A Terrible Case of Scrofula Cured by

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"In the winter of 1879 I was attacked with Scrofula in one of the most aggravating forms. At one time I had no less than thirteen large abscesses over and around my neck and throat, continually exuding an offensive mass of bloody matter disgusting to behold, and almost intolerable to endure. It is impossible to fully describe my sufferings, as the case was complicated with Chronic Catarrh. After three years of misery, having been treated by three physicians, I was worse than ever. Finally, on the recommendation of W. J. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, I was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. And now, after having taken twelve bottles, within the last twelve months, the scrofulous eruptions have entirely ceased, and the abscesses have all disappeared, except the unsightly scars, which are daily becoming 'smaller by degrees, and beautifully less.' I do not know what it may have done for others, but I do know that in my case, Hood's Sarsaparilla has proved an effective specific indeed. As an evidence of my gratitude I send these facts unsolicited, and I am ready to verify the authenticity of this cure, by personal correspondence with any one who doubts it." CHARLES A. ROBERTS, East Wilson, N. Y.

This statement is confirmed by W. J. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, N. Y., who calls the cure a great victory for Hood's Sarsaparilla. Send for book giving statements of many cures.

Strawberries.

Every one having a garden may secure delicious fresh strawberries with very little trouble, if he so wills. One of the most successful growers for the market in this country is Mr. Parker Earle, who writes as follows: Now to begin with the beginner at the beginning of a strawberry plantation: First, take good land if you can get it; if not take poor and enrich it if you can. If you are planting for home use, be sure you plant on some kind of land; if you can't get good, take poor. You can and should grow strawberries for your own table. If for commercial purposes, it is desirable that the conditions should be favorable. Select then the best soil you can command—such as would grow potatoes or corn. Plow well in fall and spring; good common plowing will do. Don't fool away money in trenching or deep sub-soiling unless you like to. Plant in fall; not in spring or summer. In setting plants don't follow any aristocratic directions. Don't dig a hole, then make a mound in the hole, then spread the roots equally all around that mound and then sift in the earth through a sieve, as some good people say; I say don't do it that way unless you greatly enjoy the fun of the thing. That will do for a dozen plants, but it is too slow for large quantities, and a fast easy way is just as good. Your ground being well prepared, plowed, harrowed and rolled, mark off carefully for rows. Your plants, being well trimmed, should be dipped in water and placed in a pail. An active boy should take the pail of plants and place them deftly in openings which you make with a good spade. Thrust the spade in before you at an angle of forty-five degrees, the boy puts in the plants while you withdraw the spade and press the earth firmly over the roots of the plants with your foot. This is easy to do, and a man and boy can set four thousand or five thousand plants in a day in good shape. Cultivate carefully and thoroughly, but very shallow next to the plants. Do this all summer, let no weeds grow. Let as many runners grow as will make a narrow matted row, cut the balance; keep the middles clear. Mulch in the fall heavily between the rows, lightly over the plants. Don't disturb them in the spring.

If you pick for market, pick every day; put no poor ones in the boxes. If you eat these berries you will be glad you planted them. If you sell them I hope you will get well paid.—Prairie Farmer.

GETTING POTATOES EARLY.— A gain of some weeks in the time of early potatoes may be secured by sprouting the seed tubers before planting. A few weeks in advance of planting time, cut each tuber once in two lengthwise, and lay them with the cut side down in a moderately warm, moist place, to sprout. The sprouting should be from two to three inches long at planting time. When about setting them if the seed is scarce, the pieces might be again divided with a knife, allowing one sprout to each piece. Care must be taken in handling and covering that these shoots do not break. The planting need not be done at the earliest possible moment after the soil works up-dry. For with tubers already started in heat, they will grow much faster if the earth is somewhat warm, say one week after plowing. Then the growth will be continuous and the green tops will show in a few days. Beauty Hebrons planted the last week in April by this methed will be fit for the table about July 1. Woburn Advertiser.

THE COUNTRY WEEK. ELEVENTH SEASON.—The Special Committee of the Boston Young Men's Christian Union have issued their Tenth Annual Report of the Country Week, which has for its object sending poor children and others from the city during the summer months, for a vacation of ten days or more, to pleasant homes in the country. Since the inauguration of the work in 1875, there have been sent out 12,765 children and adults, the visits averaging about 13 days for each. The number sent in 1875 was 160; in 1876, 320; in 1877, 861; 1878, 1,046; in 1879, 1,316; in 1880, 1,377; in 1881, 1,589; in 1882, 1,795; in 1883, 2,042; in 1884, 2,259. Visitors were sent last year into 179 different towns, remaining 28,478 days; and the average expense per week for each visitor was $2.40. At the Country Home at Wellesley, Mass., 130 children and others, principally invalids, remained last season 2,034 days. The report, which contains many interesting details of the work, will be sent to any one desiring it. Subscriptions are now being received for the season of 1885, and should be addressed to Wm. H. Baldwin, President Boston Young Men's Christian Union, 18 Boylston Street, Boston.

Progressive Euchre.

RULES AND REQUISITES OF THE GAME.—Progressive euchre is becoming quite popular in town and for those unfamiliar with the game, we publish the following particulars from a recently published work on the game.

Accessories—One fourth as many tables as players, one good euchre deck for each table, one call bell for table No. 1, one large card at each table, (numbered and with pencil attached) for scoring points, one ribbon or card (decorated or plain) for each player, on which to tally games lost and won; green wafers and gold ditto ad libitum; of red and blue wafers, one box each; prize for lady winning most games; prize for gentleman winning most games; prize for lady losing most games; prize for gentleman losing most games.

Suggestions to host and hostess. Invite only euchre players; have at least five tables; state hour for opening and closing the game, when inviting guests, and be prompt; invite an equal number of ladies and gentlemen.

Rules—The ordinary rules of euchre govern the game with the following exception: Upon arrival, the ladies draw tally cards from one basket and the gentlemen from another. Their patrons, and the tables at which they first sit, are thus decided by chance, the tally cards being numbered as are the tables, and also in pairs. All being seated properly the signal for play is given by tapping the bell. The ladies cut for deal, and the lowest deals; ace high in cutting. The cards are played and dealt without further cutting, until notice has been given by the ringing of the bell that a game of five points has been made at table No. 1. At that signal, the losers at table No. 1 rise and move to the lowest table, playing against each other there, while the winners at all the tables but No. 1 go forward one table, and play together against the partners remaining at that table. While these changes of position are being made, the person who assumes the duty of tally-clerk affixes to the cards or ribbons of players who have a score of five or more points to less of their opponents, a gold star, and to those of the losing players a green star. Tables at which neither side gain five points before the bell rings score neither losses nor gains, but the partners having the most points move forward. In the event of a tie score at any table the ladies cut, and the side cutting higher moves up. The first deal in each game is, by courtesy, accorded to the lady who last comes to the table. The same plan of procedure is repeated until the hour for closing the game, when the gold and green wafers on the tally-cards are counted, and the lady and gentleman having the most gold wafers each receives a wafer of blue, and a suitable prize, the lady and gentleman showing the next largest number of gold wafers, a red wafer each, and the lady and gentleman rejoicing in most greenness, appropriate souvenirs of their defeat. When two persons have equal claim to any prize, the cutting of the cards shall determine, high winning. No lone hands allowed. No calling for partners' best card. It is understood that the rules governing the game have recently been applied to whist, and with good results.

POINT OF PINES.—The good success which rewarded the managers of this popular resort last summer has encouraged them to make preparations for the coming season on a liberal scale. In the first place the price of admission, which was found to be popular last year, will be continued in vogue. The Boston Cadet Band, under the direction of Mr. J. Thomas Baldwin, has been re-engaged. Among the new attractions which are confidently proposed, is a circular roller coaster, an artificial hill, built of timber, with a track and car. These have been built in several western cities, which are built on very level ground, and have proved very popular as well as profitable investments for their owners. The one proposed at the Pines would probably cost $4000. A large roller skating rink is also talked of, it being evident that the public demands a big floor surface. Popular prices will prevail, and efforts will be made to induce a summer polo league to play its games there. A base ball ground is to be laid out, and games arranged between crack clubs outside of the League Association. As it was demonstrated last year that by placing the Hotel Pines, the Goodwood and the cafe under one management they could be made financially successful, eht Point of Pines Company will not lease them this year, but manage them themselves. Mr. Charles H. Thayer, the general manager for the company, will have the assistance of I. N. Andrews of the Coolidge House, as superintendent of the houses, with Nelson M. Merrick as assistant superintendent, and Fred W. Vroom as head clerk. The houses will be conducted on both American and European plans, with special arrangements for permanent guests.

JOHN P FERNALD, ALBERT VITTUM,

WE HAVE in common with others received the open letter of the Philadelphia clothing firm of Wannamaker & Co., to Governor Robinson. By it, we are informed that Adjutant General Dalton advertised for proposals for 5000 overcoats for the State Militia. The advertisement appeared in a paper published in Washington, which indicated that the commonwealth would accept bids from people outside the state. Before the bids were opened, Wannamaker & Co. asked the governor to explain the meaning of the clause, " the right to reject any and all bids," and received a reply to the effect that it applied to bids too low, or made by persons who were not responsible. The bids were opened and the contract was awarded to Fenno & Co., of Boston, whose bid as a whole was over $5500 higher than the Philadelphia firm. The agent of the firm was unable to obtain the official figures of the bids, but they were subsequently published in the Boston Journal. There is no question about the reliability of the firm of Wannamaker & Co., as they are one of the leading houses in the country, and it is only natural that Mr. Wannamaker should feel that he has not been treated fairly by the governor. It looks to those who are impartial judges in the matter, as if the governor was lending himself to the carrying out of a little ring business, particularly as the firm say in their letter, that the Adjt. General was heard to say in effect, that "the contract should not go out of the State." We believe it to be the duty of the governor to explain why the contract was not awarded to the lowest bidder, and why the State is called upon to spend $5000 more for the overcoats for the sake of giving the contract to Boston parties, and at the same time do injury to an honorable firm who had been invited to compete. It has been truly said, " if this thing had occurred while General Butler was governor, he would have been very sharply called to account for it." Every Republican newspaper in the State, would have been demanding an explanation. Why should they not demand it of Governor Robinson?

THE RECORD of deaths last week in Boston was very large and nearly a quarter more died from pneumonia than from any other cause. Every one, especially the aged, dread this disease. It comes suddenly and the end is usually as speedy. It seems to baffle the efforts of the best physicians. A leading physician remarked to us the other day, that he was able to treat most any other disease successfully except pneumonia, and his experience is only that of others. We are told that when the system is in a certain condition, indicated by colds in the throat, a pressed feeling of the lungs, neuralgic pains, loss of appetite and an extreme tired feeling, any or all of these, then is the person liable to an attack. This malady is brought on by exposure, and by the sudden changes in the weather, by taking a slight cold and neglecting to take care of it. It seems to mark its victims among the healthier portion of the community, and strong robust men have died from the disease after only a few days' sickness. A celebrated New York physician recently stated " that pneumonia was a secondary disorder, the exposure and cold being simply the agent which developed the disease already dominant in the system, because the kidneys have been but partially doing their duty. In short, pneumonia is but an indication of a Bright's disease condition." When a physician says his patient has pneumonia, he practically admits that his responsibility ends. With these facts plainly stated, it is a duty we all owe to ourselves and our families to take extra precautions, and by temperate living, and avoiding exposure, do all in our power to ward off the dread disease, pneumonia.

A BILL has been reported from the liquor committee of the Legislature recommending the abolishing of the "common victuallers" license, and the establishment of a public bar instead. The victuallers' license has been nothing but a farce anyway. Take it in our own town under the license law, out of the forty odd licenses granted to common victuallers' probably not half a dozen of them ever furnished a meal of victuals during the year. The police were obliged to go round and see if the bar room contained an old stove, and the counters a show case with a few samples of pastry. Drink is the sole stock in trade of these places and the committee show good sense in calling things by their right name. If a place is licensed as a public bar, people will know just what they are patronizing, and cannot deceive themselves into thinking they are in a restaurant. There is another recommendation of the committee which will meet the approval of honest citizens, which is that of restoring the old penalty of thirty days imprisonment for the first offence of drunkenness. It has been found that the present sentence of ten days is not long enough to make it effective.

OUR FARMERS will be glad to know there is a bill reported from the judiciary committee of the Legislation which provides that when any person is found trespassing, the owner or occupant of the premises shall have power to arrest him and detain him for any reasonable time, not to exceed 24 hours, until formal complaint can be made, a writ issued, and the offender arrested under present forms of law. With this law our farmers will have an opportunity to protect themselves against the gangs of lawless Sunday trespassers who have done much injury in years past and been a perfect terror to the outskirts of the town.

SPARKS.

The final meeting of the old Board of Engineers was held Monday evening, every member being present, and considerable business was transacted. The pay rolls of the companies were approved and thirty-two other bills, making the largest batch of bills ever approved at any one meeting before. It was voted to revoke the certificate of J. B. Thomas, as a member of Steamer Company No. 1, dating from April 22d, 1885. The cause was non-attendance to fire duty. Engineer Reed was authorized to purchase a hose carriage for Hose Company No. 5, at an expense not exceeding the unexpended balance appropriated for the purchase of fire apparatus. The old Board will go out of power, Thursday night at 12 o'clock and the new men will step in.

The new Board of Engineers met last evening and elected William J. Roome, Chief Engineer, A.E. Johnson, 1st Assistant, J. H. Tibbetts, 2d Assistant. Engineer Tibbetts was placed in charge of the brick engine house, Engineer Johnson in charge of Hose 2 and 4, Engineer Buxton in charge of Hose 3, and Engineer Reed in charge of Hose 5.

Engineers Roome, Johnson and Reed were appointed a committee on apparatus, hose and houses.

Engineer Roome, committee on hydrants, reservoirs, etc.

It was voted that each Engineer be authorized to make small repairs of the apparatus under their charge to an amount not exceeding $10, providing such repairs are absolutely necessary.

Engineers Roome and Tibbetts were appointed a committee to hire a janitor for the brick engine house, who will run one steamer, also to confer in regard to hiring an Engineer for the other steamer, and report at next meeting.

A committee was appointed to revise the By-Laws and report at the next meeting, the first Wednesday in May.

The following are the names of the firemen approbated:

Steamer No. 1.—J. A. Hart, C. A. Littlefield, John Perkins, J. W. H. Ferguson, Alonzo Legro, Jr., F. A Warner, George H. Carr, W. F. Littlefield, F. E. Wilson, J. O. Buxton, J. F. Hart.

Steamer No. 2.—J. A. P. Sumner. J. F. Morland, C. W. Childs, J. B. Reith, F. G. Clough, George F. Currier, M. W. Cummings, H. A. Wilson. H. J. G. Kimball, J. A. Perkins, O. W. Boynton, W. C. Munroe.

H & L. No. 1.—J. H. Miller, Walter P. Hills, A. A. Carleton, H. A. Southwick, Wm. S. Lord, F. N. Carleton, W. A. Jones, Robert Tanch, Wm. H. Jolls, F. D. Heylinberg, T. Murray, Chas. A. Williams, T. O. Bartlett, N. P. Beckett, R. L. Conklin.

Hose No. 1.—F. B. Thomas, F. C. Blake, Geo. W. Torr, 2d, Wm. Brown, F. A. Farrington, W. B. Flannagan, E. H. Shannon, Geo. A. Lawrence, W. F. Gunn, J. H. Torr, W. H. Joll, Jr., J. W. Byron.

Hose No. 2.—F. C. Farrington, W. T. Ward, C. F. Farrington, J. W. Smith, C. H. Demerritt, C. W. Forness, John Humphrey, Andrew Dodge, Ulick A. Brophy, Edward McGurn, George O. Pierce, D. A. Larrabee.

Hose No. 3.—C. H. Hooper, F. E. Berry, F. A. Wilkinson, George O. Morse, L. E. Buxton, F. W. Roome, A. P. Bodge, George Diebel, J. F. Mahoney, C. A. Goodwin, J. F. Barrett, George H. Bushby.

Hose No. 4.—C. H. Potter, J. H. Moreland, Owen Devlin, T. F. Hutchinson, H. G. Upton, C. H. Stanton, J. H. Moreland 2d, M. J. Brett, Chas. A. Halpin, T. H. O'Keefe, J. H. Pope, F. H. C. Lord.

Hose No. 5.—Louis K. Putnam, Walter Curtis, Wm. A. Giles, A. F. Parker, Daniel B. Brown, Edward T. Jones, W. W. Thompson, E. C. Williams, H. E. Southwick. F. E. Newhall, Chas. E. Reed.

Steamer 1 and 2, Hose 3, 4 and 5 are about the same as last year. The changes made in the H. L. are five new members. Hose 1 retains three of its old company, and Hose 2 retains seven of their present members. Engineer Geo. O. Pierce is a member of this company and will probably be run as foreman. The election of Wm. J. Roome as Chief Engineer gives general satisfaction among the firemen. The new companies will organize Thursday evening.

The new Board of Engineers did not get through their meeting until nearly 11 o'clock Tuesday night.

Last Saturday night, about 11.45 o'clock, some one set fire to a pile of rubbish in the rear of William Blaney's residence on Stevens street. The fire lit up the neighborhood so brightly that an alarm was nearly rung in from the central station. The night watch put out the flames.

Six hundred dollars was what the old S. C. Bancroft hand engine was sold for. z

A special train containing the directors of the Boston & Lowell railroad passed through town last Friday. They considered a location for a side track to L. & G. H. Poor's tannery, and also the running of the gravel trains from West Peabody to the North River.

Mrs. E. Herbert Davis died at her home on Jacob street last Thursday night, after a long sickness, having been in consumption for over a year. She was 41 years and 7 months old. Her funeral took place from the Methodist church last Sunday afternoon and was largely attended. Words of comfort and cheer were extended to the bereaved family, by the pastor, Rev. S. N. Smith.

Owen Tibney was in the police court yesterday for assaulting Bridget Tierney and fined $15 and costs, which he paid. He claimed the assault was provoked by a daughter of the defendant who lived in the house. And denies that he assaulted any one with a knife.

A man named Reynolds in a light team collided with Wilson's express team last Monday night in front of Geo. Jacobs' store and was thrown to the ground. It looked at one time as if he would be trampled on by the horses, but escaped with slight bruises.

Mr. Wm. G. Webber has leased for a term of years the entire premises occupied by the Peck block at No. 240 Essex street, and running through to Washington street. The present wooden structure will be torn down and a handsome brick block will be erected on the site.

Mr. A. B. Cross has just completed a fine picture of little Jimmie Walsh, representing him sitting at a desk. This was taken from an ordinary photograph and the desk and other arrangements were drawn in by Mr. Cross. It will be placed in the Bowditch school room.

Mrs. Albert Gould celebrated the sixtieth anniversary of her birth at her home on English street, last Thursday night. The occasion was made much of by the immediate family, and Mrs. Gould received many tokens of love and esteem in the shape of substantial presents.

The Margaret Mather Company with the exception of Miss Mather and Mr. Hill, who stopped at the Essex House, stopped at Baldwin's Hotel. As the company did not leave town till eleven o'clock, they visited the Institute and were shown its treasures by Mr. John McKean and Librarian Upton.

Miss Annie L. Orr, of Lynn, has a card in another column. Miss Orr is soprano singer in the Universalist choir in this town and is desirous of securing pupils here. She is a young lady of ability and competent to teach, and we trust she will meet with the success she deserves.

The crop of maple sugar does not depend, as it used to do, on the weather. Our civilization has got beyond depending on the caprice of climate. When the usual time comes round for maple sugar, maple sugar will appear. No postponement on account of weather or any other Providential interference.

W. P. Brooks & Co., are offering special bargains this season in furniture, baby carriages, oil stoves, crockery, carpetings, ranges, and all kinds of housekeeping goods, on easy terms of payment or for cash. Give them a call and see how fairly they use all their customers. Read their advertisement on 7th page.

Thursday, Mr. Patrick Walsh, 70 years of age, died at his home 22 Silver street, Salem, where he recently removed from this town. He had been engineer at Winchester & Blaney's for the past 17 years. His wife, about 75, also died Thursday night, and both were buried Saturday afternoon.

The police made a raid on the saloon of John Carney on Sherman street last Sunday and captured a barrel of rum, one of whiskey, two barrels of beer, besides a washtub full of beer. A man that would carry as much liquor as that during these doubtful times must have an unlimited amount of confidence in his own sagacity.

Benj. S. Osborne, an old resident of Andover street and quite an eccentric character, died at his home last Friday night at the age of 73 years and 7 months. He was a son of the late Macajah Osborne and the last of the race. He was deformed and never engaged in active pursuits. He was possessed of some property which has been managed by Mr. John O. Buxton. He was born in this town.

Mr. James R. Sweeney died at his home on Union street, Monday, of consumption, at the age of 28 years. He was better known as "Bullock," and when himself was one of the best hearted young men in town. During the days of the Reynolds' reform movement he took a conspicuous part, and by his dry Irish humor was sure to please the audience.

The Globe says: Mrs. Margaret Brine is to build a nice two-and-a-half story dwelling house on the piece of land between the main line of the railroad and the Essex branch at Wenham. It will be occupied by G. M. Fassett, station agent, who will lead a daughter of Mrs. Brine to the altar soon. The location is a very sightly one. The house will be built by Wm. Pingree.

Nearly a thousand persons were present at the town hall last Monday evening to witness an athletic exhibition, under the management of the Salem Athletic Club. The programme embraced sparring matches, wrestling matches, club swinging, lifting of heavy dumb bells, etc., interspersed with vocal and instrumental music. The audience was an enthusiastic one, representing sporting men throughout the county.

Mr. James H. Thomas had received his appointment to take the census of this town and but for his sickness would have commenced his labors next Friday. It is estimated it will take two months for the work, and probably a new man will have to be appointed. The details are very comprehensive, and it requires considerable study to understand them thoroughly. Uniformity of system is of course absolutely essential, but when the enumerator is required to use the particular kind of pencil and eraser furnished with the outfit, and no other, "red tape" does not seem to be a sufficiently expressive term to use in connection therewith.

The high wind to-day is doing considerable damage, large limbs are being blown from the trees and gates and fences are blown down in every direction. The part of the building left standing from the fire at George Clerk's was blown down. James Howley's swing sign and the large wire sign in front of the PRESS office met the same fate. The top of Roome's delivery wagon which was standing in front of his market, was lifted from the wagon and blown across the street to Tom Wilson's machine shop doing slight damage. One of the large round windows in the new town house was blown out and smashed to pieces frame and glass. The long bill board on Main street was made a complete wreck and also a small building on Glue Hill.

At this season of the year it will profit you to use Ferrated Hygienic Wine, to cleanse your blood of all poisonous humor. tf

Health is of more consequence than wealth. Many sick ones might be cured by using Ferrated Hygienic Wine. tf

Now is the time to rid the system of humors and all Blood impurities. Ferrated Hygienic Wine is a most effective remedy. tf

ASSESSORS' NOTICE.

To the Inhabitants and other Persons liable to pay Taxes in the Town of Peabody.

The Assessors of the Town of Peabody hereby give notice to the inhabitants of said town, and all other persons liable to pay taxes therein, that their office will be open on and after the first day of May until and including the first day of June, and all persons liable to be taxed in said town are hereby required to bring in at the said office true and perfect lists of all the polls (males twenty years old, and upward), and schedules and estimates of the personal estates for which they are liable to pay taxes.

Copartnerships

having a place of business in Peabody, and also in some other city or town within the Commonwealth, are especially notified to bring in a statement in accordance with the 24th section of the 11th chapter of the Public Statutes. Shipping and business income are not taxable to a firm, but each resident partner must include these items in his individual return.

Mortgaged Real Estate.

"Any mortgagor or mortgagee of real estate may bring in to the assessors of the town or city where such real estate lies," within the time specified in this notice, "a statement, under oath, of the amount due on each separate lot or parcel of such real estate, and the name and residence of every holder of an interest therein as a mortgagee or mortgagor. When such property is situated in two or more places, or when a recorded mortgage includes for one sum two or more estates or parts of an estate, an estimate of the amount of the mortgagee's interest in each estate or part of an estate shall be given in such statement." [Chap. 175 of the Acts of 1882]. When a statement in conformity with the law above quoted is brought in, the real estate therein returned will be assessed under sections 14, 15 and 16, of chapter 11 of the Public Statutes. But in cases where the mortgagor of the real estate has agreed in writing to pay all taxes assessed thereon, NO STATEMENT OR RETURN IS REQUIRED from either mortgagee or mortgagor, unless requested by the assessors in writing.

Estates in Trust.

Persons holding estates in trust, whether for minors or otherwise, are particularly requested to furnish the assessors with statements in relation to such estates. When trust estates, or estates of persons deceased, have been divided during the past year. or have changed hands from other causes, the trustee, executor or administrator, or other person interested, is required and warned to give notice of such change; and in default of such notice, will be held to pay the tax assessed, although such estate has been wholly distributed and paid over.

Any person bringing in a list of all his taxable personal property will be assessed upon the valuation thereof, and any one neglecting to furnish the assessors with such list within the time above specified will de doomed at a legal meeting of the Board of Assessors, agreeably to the law of the Commonwealth. All persons will take notice that statements of personal property must be in writing, and subscribed under oath before one of the Assessors, at their office, on or before the FIRST DAY OF JUNE, and that the personal property of all taxable persons must be estimated by the Board, NOTWITHSTANDING A VERBAL STATEMENT OR INFORMAL WRITTEN COMMUNICATION TO ANY ONE OR MORE OF THE ASSESSORS. [Pub. Stat., chap. 11, sec. 39 and 41.] When a person has failed to bring in a list or schedule of all his taxable property, in conformity to this notice, no abatement of a tax so assessed upon such person for personal propeaty can be granted, "unless such tax exceeds by more than fifty per cent. the amount which would have been assessed to that person on personal estate, if he had seasonably brought in said list; and if said tax exceeds by more than fif y per cent. the said amount, the abatement shall be only of the excess above the said fifty per cent. [Pub. Stat., Chap. 11, Sec. 73.]

Any person taxable in Peabody for personal property can obtain a BLANK SCHEDULE for making a list of such property, with directions for properly filling the same, by applying at the assessors' office.

Literary, Benevolent, Charitable and Scientific Corporations.

The attention of the Officers of all Literary, Benevolent, Charitable and Scientific Corporations, located in Peabody, is particularly called to the requirements of Chapter 217 of the Acts of 1882, as the property of said corportions, both personal and real, will be subject to taxation unless the law is complied with. Blank forms for the purpose can be had at the office of the assessors.

PETITIONS AND ORDER.

SALEM, March 20, 1885.

To the Honorable Board of Selectmen of the Town of Peabody,

The Naumkeag Street Railway Company respectfully ask permission to straighten the track already laid in Peabody, beginning at a point opposite the Warren National Bank and continuing to the present terminus of the track.

NAUNMKEAG STREET RAILWAY CO.,
By Charles Odell, Pres.

SALEM, April 17, 1885.

To the Honorable Board of Selectmen of the Town of Peabody,

Respectfully represents the Naumkeag Street Railway Company, that it is desirous, for the convenience of the passengers in the cars of said Company, that the double track already laid in Boston street, in Salem, be extended from the present terminus at the Peabody and Salem line through Main street in Peabody to a point nearly opposite Washington street, to connect with the double track already laid on Main street, to the Square in said Peabody.

NAUMKEAG STREET RAILWAY CO,
By Charles Odell, Pres.

At a meeting of the Selectmen of Peabody, April 18th, 1885, it was Ordered, that a hearing be had upon the foregoing petitions, in the Selectmen's Room, at the Town House, on Saturday, the 9th day of May, 1885, at 4 o'clock, P. M., at which time and place all persons and corporations interested in said petition may be heard; and that notice of said hearing be given by publishing an attested copy of the petitions and of this order, in the Peabody Press, fourteen days at least before the time appointed for said hearing.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

Mr. Charles Goldthwait after an illness of only a few days died at his home on Holten street, last Monday morning of typhoid pneumonia. He was 52 years and 6 months old. He was a native of Salem and early in life settled in this town and was a currier by trade. With the late Charles A. Collins he established the cigar store in Allen's block, but afterward sold out to his partner. He has since been employed at his trade and at carpentering, and at the time of his death was about to associate himself with Mr. T. I. Noyes in the manufacture of glove leather. Mr. Goldthwait was a member of Holten Lodge I. O. O. F., and Mutual Council Royal Arcaneum. He leaves one son, Mr. Chas. S. Goldthwait, and a large circle of friends to mourn his decease. His funeral took place from the Universalist Church today and was attended by Holten Lodge of Odd Fellows in a body, the funeral service being under their charge.

A valuable bull dog was stolen from Mr. A. B. Clark last December and in February his barn was broken into and two trained ferrets stolen. District Officer Shaw has been working on the case and Dennis Hagerty was in the police court Saturday morning charged with stealing the dog. He went out to get a witness and when the case was called he was too drunk for trial and the case was continued till Monday. Two fellows named Gibney and Hartnett were arrested recently in Salem for stealing the ferrets. Hagerty was arraigned Monday and Eugene McCarty, Esq., appeared for him. The judge decided there was not sufficient evidence to hold him, and he was discharged.

The Law and Order League held a meeting in the Selectmen's room at the town house last Wednesday evening. The report of the Secretary and treasurer were read and approved. The collections amounted to $610.27 and the expenditures had been $606.25, leaving a balance of $4.02. There has been three general meetings during the year and 21 meetings of the executive committee. Nearly a thousand dollars has been subscribed to continue the work another year. The following officers were elected: President, Daniel Woodbury; Vice President, W. G. Sperry; Sec'y. S. E. Cassino; Treas., E. W. Upton; Executive Committee, C. C. Pike, C. A. Haskell, H. H. Proctor, Isaac Drown.

On Thursday, May 7, Mr. Leland T. Powers will appear for the second time this season, under the auspices of Union Post 50, G. A. R., at the Peabody Institute, in his latest success David Copperfield. In this piece Mr. Powers assumes the twelve different characters of the story. When he was here before he gave universal satisfaction. He will be assisted by Prof. J. W. Maynard, the blind pianist, who has also been here before, and whose imitation of a drum corps alone is worth the price of admission. It will be one of the best entertainments given this season.

The McGuinty club, of Danvers, to the number of 15 or 20 went to Peabody, Thursday evening, on a visit to James Regan and wife, recently married, who resides on Midway street. A large number of Peabody friends were present and the occasion was very enjoyable for all. During the evening J. Lewis Bacon, for the McGuintys, presented Mr. Regan a hanging lamp, which was gratefully accepted. The party arrived home at 2 o'clock Friday morning. Conveyance was had in Woodis's barge.—Danvers Mirror.

The plans for the new school house as prepared by Lord & Fuller have been adopted by the committee, and are on exhibition at the town house. The building will front on Tremont street, and be 72 feet long by 35 wide, and two stories high with basement, 26 feet posts and hip roof. There will be two entrances and four rooms 26x34 feet, the entrances will be 9x21 feet. The building is designed to be well ventilated and it is expected will come inside the appropriation.

Letters advertised Apl. 29th, at the Peabody Post Office.—Wm. Atwater, I. K. Burnham, Mary Cramer, Thomas Doran, James A. Durkee, Edward Funchion, Katie A. Gilles, Thomas Hanlon, Mary Horrigan, Mr. Kelly, John J. Landers, Johanna Lynch, Geo. O. Morse, John Murphy, Jas. J. Murphy, Lizzie Norton, Henry O'Brien, Maggie O'Dea, Putnam & Davenport, Rev. D. J. Splain, Christopher R. Steele, George Sweetman, Clara F. Very, Richard F. Welch.

The holy days for the remainder of the year are Rogation Sunday, May 10; Ascension Day, Thursday, May 14th; Decoration Day, Saturday, May 30th; Trinity Sunday, May 31st; Corpus Christi, Thursday, June 4th.

An inquest on the death of Resolute Ingraham, who was recently killed by the cars at West Peabody, was held before Judge Merrill last Thursday and a number of witnesses examined. The Brown boys testified to jumping from the wagon and to not seeing the train until it was close upon them. Arthur Needham to finding Ingraham whom he thought was dead. Mr. Mugford saw the accident, saw the train strike the hind portion of the wagon which was thrown fifteen feet, did not hear the train whistle or the bell ring. H. A. Skinner, the conductor, remembered that the whistle blew three times. Mr. Sweet, engineer, saw the team and reversed his engine and sounded the whistle. The bells are always rung 80 rods from a crossing. Geo. F. Otis, fireman, testified to ringing the bell on that day as usual. Town Clerk Poor testified to the Selectmen's requesting a flag man placed at the crossing and to their receiving a prompt reply from the company, saying that if it would be as satisfactory they would put in electric signals, which was agreed to, and the Selectmen were notified that the signals would be put on as soon as possible. Mr. Avery of the B. & M. testified that measurements were made for the signals two weeks before the accident by John Taft & Co. Judge Merrill reserved his decision.

Miss Margaret Mather appeared at the Opera House last Thursday evening in the "Lady of Lyons" and was welcomed by a fair sized audience, who made up in enthusiasm what they lacked in numbers. Miss Mather was several times called before the curtain. She was ably supported and the audience watched the play with intense interest, so quiet was it at times one could hear a pin drop. The company and star sustained the high reputation they have already gained, and could receive only commendation at our hands. The only drawback to the entertainment was the acoustic properties of the hall. Some of the audience were obliged to frequently change their seats in order to hear what was said on the stage, and the players found it very difficult to talk as the echo of their voices returned to the stage, and was of course very confusing.

A cow on Shillaber street has lately developed convivial habits, and is getting to be quite fond of the ardent. She will drink beer, and we expect will "go out with the boys and come rolling home in the morning." A few days ago this cow ran across a pan of beer, or beer emptyings, resulted in her becoming very weak in the head and unsteady on her pins. Her movements were ridiculous in the extreme, and should have served to show some of the eye witnesses just how graceful (?) they appear when in the same condition. We have not yet heard of the arrest of this animal.—Item Correspondent. In your mind's eye, Horatio.

We feel somewhat as the western publisher did, who said "it appears to be our duty to urge those who may contemplate lending us money to be circumspect and tender us not to exceed $437.47 per week. After a careful computation, we have decided that the above amount is all we can possibly get away with in our legitimate business. It is all we require. We hope our friends will not urge us to accept more. We positively decline."

Every loyal Odd Fellow is rejoicing at the occurrence of the sixty-sixth anniversary of the introduction of the order into this country, which event took place April 26, 1819. Its rapid growth, its wonderful hold upon the sympathies of its members, its great benefactions, its deeds of love and helpfulness, the purity of its teachings, and the generally high character pertaining to it has made it one of the strongest and best secret societies in this town.

Essex Lodge and Naumkeag Encampment will unite on Thursday evening in celebrating the sixty-sixth anniversary of the introduction of Odd Fellows into America. An excellent literary and musical entertainment has been provided, one of the features of which will be recitations by Mr. Carlyle; in addition there will be a supper and dancing with music by the full Salem band. A large delegation from Peabody will be present.

Presidents Odell and Breed, Supts. Ferguson and Foster, a number of directors of both the Lynn and Salem roads, and the board of Selectmen looked over the proposed changes in the horse car tracks at the square last Thursday afternoon. It is said it was decided to make the terminus on Lowell street, in front of John Pickering's store, and that the horse car office will be moved there.

A thief has for some time been stealing finished skins from the factory of Blaney & Moore, at the Crowinshield place. Recently an employe of the factory, having occasion to go over early, discovered a stranger in the building, who said he had crawled in to sleep, as he had been on a time. He was allowed to depart, and shortly after another dozen skins were found to be missing.

CATARRH.

BY A. P. LIGHTHILL, M. D.

The earliest symptoms of Catarrh is a discharge from the head, consisting sometimes of a clear acid fluid, but oftener of a thick, fœtid, purulent yellow or greenish matter, which is usually secreted in excessive abundance, and discharged through the nostrils or throat, and frequently by both channels.

The nature of this discharge varies in different cases, and even in the same individual at different times. In some it is copious, and of a loose or fluid character, while in others it is very viscid or gummy, adhering to the diseased membrane with glue-like tenacity; often this offensive matter concretes in dry, hard masses of crusts, which obstruct breathing, and are very difficult to detach, their dislodgment requiring most violent efforts. Sometimes these incrustations come away in lumps of a deep green tint, but occasionally in broad and flat casts of a notable size, on which traces of blood may at times be observed. This condition is very liable to run to serious ulceration, involving a loss of the bony structure of the nose and a subsequent flattening of that organ, and is invariably accompanied by a breath of exceedingly fœtid and sickening odor. In some cases it becomes so revoltingly offensive as to render the sufferer an object of disgust to himself as well as to others.

The nasal membrane is thickened and congested, causing the nose to be stopped up, sometimes on one side, sometimes on the other, and often on both, giving rise to a disagreeable, stuffy sensation in the head, and occasionally to violent paroxysms of sneezing.

A feeling of fullness, heat, irritation, soreness or pain is generally experienced in the nostrils, near the root of the nose, as well as in the upper part of the throat, above and below the soft palate. A distressing sensation of heavy weight or compression is usually complained of over the forehead, especially in the region immediately above and between the eyes. Sometimes the pain is obstinately fixed in one particular part, as in the temples, on top of the head, at the back of the neck, or behind the orbits; and occasionally it manifests itself in the face, of so severe a character that it is frequently mistaken for neuralgia.

The voice is generally affected, and becomes hoarse, weak and uneven, assuming a nasal character, or an unpleasant sniffling quality. Cough of variable severity is not unfrequently one of the symptoms and results of Catarrh.

The sense of smell is generally blunted or entirely lost, and a similar effect on taste may be occasionally observed. The eyes are apt to become irritable, and disposed to water excessively on exposure to the cold or wind, and a sense of weariness of sight is usually experienced after slight exertions. Hearing becomes frequently more or less impaired, and noises in the head very often add materially to the existing distress.

The stomach generally suffers more or less, and becomes weak and irritable; the appetite is capricious, and nearly always bad in the morning.

The patient often complains of lassitude and fatigue, an incapacity for either physical or mental exertions, and a constant disposition to drowsiness and sleep. The mental faculties are also sometimes slightly affected, loss of memory being not unfrequently experienced.

Catarrh may prove fatal, either by debilitating the system and wearing out the patient, or by travelling downward and producing consumption. This fact has been so repeatedly noticed that all experienced practitioners now look upon Catarrh as one of the earliest manifestations of this dreaded complaint. Among educated physicians in this or any other country, Dr. Lighthill was the first to devote his study and investigation to the cure of Catarrh and kindred diseases, and the happy results which attended his labor have been attested to by many of the most prominent citizens of Boston and vicinity. Cases abandoned as hopeless by other physicians have promptly yielded to his painless and effective treatment.

ASTHMA

For years Dr. Lighthill has made this distressing disease his special study, investigating carefully the causes that produce it; his labor was fully rewarded, for he not only established its true pathological condition, but also discovered a new and correct system of treatment for its cure. Hundreds of cases who have been under his care have found permanent relief from this wonderful discovery, from the beginning of this treatment prompt benefit is experienced which is ultimately followed by a complete and radical cure.

An experience of 30 years of constant practice enables Dr. Lighthill to decide on the first examination as to the cureability of any disease within specialty, and no case will be accepted for treatment unless the chances are for favorable results. His specialty comprises the cure of and affections of the Nervous system from whatever cause.

EDMUND BURKE, late Com. of Patents.

BOSTON, Oct. 19, 1870.

R. H. EDDY, Esq.—Dear Sir: you procured for me, in 1870, my first patent. Since then you have acted for and advised me in hundreds of cases, and procured many patents, re-issues and extensions. I have occasionally employed the best agencies in New York, Philadelphia and Washington, but I still give you almost the whole of my business, in your line, and advise others to employ you.

Yours truly, GEORGE DRAPER.

THE HENRY BILL PUB. CO.,
dec—17 6t Norwich, Conn.

RAILROAD TYRANNY.—The Boston and Albany Railroad has recently learned that there is one species of tyranny it cannot pursue. It has a system of mileage tickets which consist of coupons bound in a cover. The well-known lecturer, Wm. I. Marshall, recently lent his book to his agent, first tearing coupons enough from his book to take him from Albany to Palmer. When he offered the coupons to the conductor on the train, they were refused, and he was arrested for evading his fare. When Mr. Marshall was brought before the District Court in Pittsfield he was, of course, immediately discharged, the judge holding that there was no design of evading the fare, and that it made no difference whether the covers of the book bearing the contract were presented or not. This is an age of monopolies, and of incorporated tyranny. Between railroad, telephone and other companies, the suffering public has a rather hard time. The people of our time have many more comforts and conveniences than of any other, but they are also more under discipline they can enjoy them, always providing that they will conform to certain rigid and senseless rules in enjoying them. It seems a little rough, however, if a man has got to run the risk of arrest, because he attempts to ride on coupons for which he has paid because they are not in a cover that will be thrown away when he has used the coupons. We are glad Mr. Marshall came out of this fight first best.—Gloucester Bulletin.

WORSE THAN FIREARMS.—The editor of an Omaha paper, in commenting on several cases in that city where children died from the effects of taking cough syrup containing morphia, remarks that opiates, poisons and narcotics are more dangerous than firearms. Mothers should note this and furthermore that different Boards of Health, after making careful analysis, have certified that the only purely vegetable preparation of this kind, and one that is in every way harmless, prompt and effective, is Red Star Cough Cure. Mayor Latrobe of Baltimore, and the Commissioner of Health, have publicly endorsed this valuable discovery.

The Fitchburg railroad is very popular with the traveling public. The liberal policy of this road as, compared with the Boston & Albany gives it an advantage over its competitor. It pays to be attentive to the wants of the public. The Fitchburg learned this lesson some time ago and its "old fogy" ideas belong to the history of the past. John Adams, Esq., the popular superintendent, has been the means of popularizing the road to a remarkable degree. He is a model officer.—Cambridge Tribune.

BILIOUSNESS is very prevalent at this season, the symptoms being bitter taste, breath offensive, tongue coated, sick headache, drowsiness, dizziness, loss of appetite. If this condition is allowed to continue, serious consequences may follow. By promptly taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, a fever may be avoided or premature death prevented. It is a positive cure for biliousness. Sold by all druggists. (c)

The Gloucester Advertiser asserts that Mr. and Mrs. William H. Austin, formerly of Gloucester, are the first to occupy a cottage at Asbury Grove Camp Ground this season. They say there is no tonic needed there for an appetite, as the odor of the pines supply that necessity.

WHAT YOU WANT TO KNOW.—Everybody wants an honest answer to this simple question:—What is the best medicine to regulate the bowels, cure costiveness and biliousness, help the digestion and give strength to the whole system? People ask us this every day. We answer, Parker's Tonic. It is pleasant to the taste. All the children like it. Mothers all praise it. It will save a thousand times its cost in every family.—Editor Western Argus.

A man never finds out how little he knows about domestic matters until his wife asks him to keep his eye upon the baby and see that a pan of melted butter is kept stirred while she goes into the attic to look through her rag bag.

Pray tell us, ladies, if you can, who is that highly favored man, who, though he's married many a wife, may be a batchelder all his life. A clergyman.

MAYO'S

Compound Vegetable Anæsthetic.

A safe and pleasant substitute for gas and ether.

Discovered by Dr. N. K. Mayo of Boston, April 1883, subsequently administered by him in nearly two thousand cases, producing perfect slumber, being applicable to the child, the delicate sentitive woman as well as the hardy man. No ill effects have followed its use in any case, it acting rather as a vegetable tonic.

It controls the patient one-fourth longer than gas giving us time to remove from three to twenty teeth. It is with great confidence we have introduced it into our practice, giving very successful results.

Setting and Repairing Pumps a Specialty.

Having had twenty years experience in the Tin and Sheet Iron business, I am prepared to guarantee satisfaction, and earnestly soliciting the patronage of the citizens of Peabody, I hope by prompt and faithful attention to their wants in my line to deserve success.

The following testimonials I am at liberty to publish:

SOUTHBRIDGE, July 30, 1884.

Having done business with P. W. Duffy in this town for ten years or more, and finding him straight-forward in all his deal, reasonable in his prices, thorough in his work, I take pleasure in recommending him as such, to whom it may concern.

Respectfully,

LEONARD CUTLER,
Contractor and Builder.

SOUTHBRIDGE, July 30, 1884.

This it to certify, that having known P. W. Duffy for the past seven years, I do cheerfully recommend him as straight forward, and upright, and with the thorough knowledge of his business worthy of a large patronage.

HUDSON RIVER R. R.

CONDUCTOR MELIUS SAYS SOMETHING OF INTEREST TO ALL TRAVELLERS.

Poughkeepsie. N. Y., Feb. 22, 1884.

Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.:

Dear Sir: I have used your medicine, called DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, for Indigestion and Dizziness, to which I was subject at times, and know from experience that it is worthy of all that can be said of it for disorders of that kind. Respectfully,

W. S. MELIUS,
69 Harrison Street.

That DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY is extensively used along the line of the Hudson River Railroad, is shown by the following from Tarrytown. The writer is none other than Mr. DeRevere, the Station Agent of the Hudson River Railroad Company at Tarrytown, a man well known in that community.

Tarrytown, N. Y., Feb. 22d, 1884.

Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.:

Dear Sir:—For a long time I was troubled with severe attacks of Dizziness and Blind Sick Headaches. I thought it was due to impure blood and a disordered state of the system. I was advised to try FAVORITE REMEDY. I did so, and have been completely cured. It's the best thing I ever heard of for any disorder of that nature, and I've recommended it to many with like success.

A. DEREVERE.

DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY is not confined in its sphere of usefulness to one state or locality, but is hailed as a boon by hundreds in every state, as the following letter from Millville, N. J., will show:

Millville, N. J.

Dr David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.:

Dear Sir:—I had been a sufferer from Dyspepsia from the time I was sixteen years old. I had consulted various physicians, but could find no relief; therefore had almost given up in despair of ever recovering my health, when DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY was recommended, which I tried and have been cured. It's the best medicine I ever knew of, and worthy of the greatest confidence.

MRS. S. C. DOUGHERTY.

MALARIA.

As an anti-malarial medicine

DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S

FAVORITE REMEDY

has won golden opinions. No traveler should consider his outfit complete unless it includes a bottle of this medicine. If you are exposed to frequent changes of climate, food and water, Favorite Remedy should always be within your reach. It expels malarial poisons, and is the best preventative of chills and malarial fever in the world. It is especially offered as a trustworthy specific for the cure of Kidney and Liver complaints, Constipation and all disorders arising from an impure state of the blood. To women who suffer from any of the ills peculiar to their sex Favorite Remedy is constantly proving itself an unfailing friend—a real blessing. Address the proprietor, Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y. $1 bottle, 6 for $5, by all druggists.

Book Notices.

The American Agriculturist for May is an unusually fine number of that always excellent magazine. This number has a new and handsomely ornamented cover which is an attractive feature. The illustrations are superb and are accompanied by a great variety of original articles on the Farm, Garden and Household by the leading rural writers in the world. Henry Stewart, for twelve years one of the editors of the American Agriculturist, has again resumed his connection. It unquestionably now has the strongest editorial force ever gotten together on a periodical. Subscription price, $1.50 per year. Single number, 15 cents.

For a shorthand monthly, especially adapted to "Pitman Shorthanders," we know of none more desirous than the Scott Brown Phongraphic Monthly, by L. D. Scott Brown, New York City. It is ably conducted in its editorial department and is never behind in topics of interest to any stenographic students or practitioners. Price is $2.00 per year. As an advertising medium it is not surpassed as it has an immense circulation.

The best Journal of shorthand published in the state is the "American Shorthand Writer," published by Rowell & Hickcox, 266 Washington street, Boston. This journal contains a full summary of the class of news most important to stenographers and students; has an engraved plate in each number, of reading matter in shorthand and able treatises upon the value of the various systems, suggestions of improvements and especially in the matter of teaching. The price is but $1.00 per year.

THE IRISH WIDOW ON ROLLER SKATES.— "See here," said the widow, holding up a pair of roller skates.

"An, phat in the wurld are thim?" asked the neighbor.

"Rowler shkoites," said Mrs. Magoogin. "Me daughter Arethoosy brought thom home lasht noight, an' fwhin I axed fwhat they wur, an' fwhat she was goin' to do wid' thim she towld me they war the proper caper fur the comin' sayson.

'Thin luk out me foine lady,' says I, 'that yer don't cut a gash in yer skull a fut long,' sez I, 'an' it's mebbe break yer nick ye will, an thin,' sez I, 'twhere'll I be afther getin' the money to bury ye? Faix'n,' sez I, 'aff ye wur to die' on my hands this winther, sez I, 'the city 'ould have to pay yer fun'ril expinsis an' ye'd have no little gerls in fwhite dhresses,' sez I, 'carryin' ye out to a fwhite hearse wid fwite horses an a naygur dhriver,' sez I, 'to give ye a shtoilish sind off.' Do ye know, Mrs. McGlaggerty, the little hussey only laughed at me, an' I kem near givin' her a clip av the shtove led fur her grinnin.' Thin she up an' put on the shkoites an' shkoited around the kitchen loike a shwan on the Lake av Chromo. My son, Tommy—the Toof, as ye calls him—pit thim on too, an' be the sowl av me grandmother the Lord have mercy on her, he shtood on wan leg an' serkled around loike a fairy. The two av thim kept on at me, Mrs. McGlaggerty, antil I pit on the shkoites meself Thin they shtood me up at wan ind av the room, an' Tommy sed, 'let her go.' Wid that fwhat does the two divils do, bad sesht to thim—an may the divil take hould av their toenails an' make them bald-headed afore they're a month oulder—but they pusht me across the flure an' I didn't know fwhere I was or fwhat I was doin' until I kem down on me head and shoulders in a pan av dough I had roisin' near the shtove. It was a merackle, me friend, I didn't brake me nick an' all the bones in me body so heavy was the fall I got I thried to get up to take hould av the brats, but me feet wint from undher me, and I shtruck me forehead agin the flure. the two av thim rowled over laughin' an' shkraimin' fur half an hour, afore they'd take the shkoites aff me feet, an' fwhin they did, off they med wid thimseives, an' I didn't see any more av thim till this mornin'. Now I'm goin' to give the shkoites to the goats to ait, an,' be heavens, aff I iver hear mintion av thim agin I'll break up house, put me childher in the loonaytic assoylum, an' go into the widdy's home fur the remainder av me days."—St. Louis Critic.

DESTROY THAT SIGN.—One may feel that he's getting old, but he naturally dislikes that anything about his appearance should advise others of the fact. Yet nothing does this so effectually as thin and falling hair. No woman wants to marry a man, and business firms hesitate to employ a man who shows this fatal sign. Parker's Hair Balsam is worth to you, in this regard, more than its weight in diamonds. Use it, and have plentiful and glossy hair. Many have had every trace of grayness removed and bald spots covered by using a single bottle.

The Salem and Peabody police polo game which was to take place this afternoon was postponed, and the individual members have gone into training.

The Peabodys went to Manchester, N. H., last evening, and played the Manchesters, of that city, a game of polo, the occasion being the latters benefit. The Manchester Union of this morning in speaking of the Peabodys says: "They were not very well-known prior to last evening, but made their reputation fast, and leave behind them a belief on the part of all who witnessed the game, that they are the best club of polo players that has ever contested a game on a New Hampshire rink surface. Every man seemed to excel in his position, and no such playing together as a team has been witnessed here before. The visitors played earnestly but not roughly and their fine work was thoroughly appreciated by the audience, who bestowed upon them generous applause." The first goal was won by the Peabodys in 3 m. 15s., the second in 2m. the third in 1m., making three straight for the Peabodys. Two exhibition goals were played and won by the Peabodys in twenty-five minutes.

The Peabodys beat the Globes of Haverhill three to one in an exhibition game of polo, at Haverhill, last Thursday night. Time 8m., 10m., 7m. The Peabodys wining the first, second and fourth.

There was an audience numbering about one hundred present at the rink last Friday night to see the exhibition game of polo between the Bay States of Chelsea and the Peabodys. As Murray of the Peabodys and Foye of the Bay States were disabled, the game was played with five men on a side, Chas. H. Simonds acting as referee. Felton took the first rush and the ball was sent into the visitor's cage but rolled out, and after a play of 2m. and 15s. Rogers of the Bay States caged the ball. Kean got the second rush and the goal was won by Felton. Time, 7m and 40s. Felton got the third rush, Rogers the goal in 1m. and 15s. Kean secured the fourth rush and Rogers the goal in 1 m.

The types made us say last week that the female polo team had on white undershirts. Of course we didn't know anything about that, it was underskirts we wrote.

The Waltham Record says: It is said by parties that follow polo pretty closely that Cotter has won 35 out of his last 39 rushes. He has made about 13 goals and assisted a number of times. No wonder that he is called the king of poloists. Cotter is the new man that plays with the Peabodys.

The Salem Light Infantry team defeated the Mechanic Light Infantry team three goals to one at polo last Saturday night. Wm. J. Murray referee.

The Gloucesters and Woburns play polo to-night. Lots of the boys are going to see if it is a square game.

Our police and the Salem police are having some spicy correspondence in relation to a polo game. Why don't they brace up and show the reporters what they can do?

Mr. McCully has bought a soda fountain for the Willows' rink.

Miss Jennie Munn, of Boston, who took the first prize at the rink last night, has taken four other prizes. A gold watch at Wakefield, and a silver cake basket at Woburn.

Felton, Murray and Dempsey play with the Wakefields against the Maldens to-night.

Dempsey will play with the New Bedfords to-morrow night.

Peabodys have an invitation to go to Concord, N. H., next week.

C. P. Gaither, 290 Washington street, Boston, soliciting agent of the Norfolk Route, has issued a circular to members of the society of the Army of the Potomac, calling attention to the Norfolk Route as an agreeable mode of transportation to the annual reunion of that society to take place at Baltimore, May 6th and 7th. He offers unsurpassed passenger accommodations entire freedom from noise and dust, thus affording perfect rest for body and mind and a delightful sea-trip. The steamers traverse the waters made famous by the Naval Battle between the Merrimac and Monitor; and pass in full view of Fortress Monroe, old Annapolis, the Naval Academy, Fort McHenry. Arrive at Baltimore within sixty hours after time of departure from Boston. The rate from Boston to Baltimore is $9, or from Boston to Baltimore and return, $16. These rates include meals and state-room berth.

MR. CROSS'S STUDIO.—The alterations in the King Building have now been completed for some little time and Mr. Andrew B. Cross is well fixed in his new and freshly fitted rooms in the third story. Mr. Cross is a first class photographic artist, and it may be doubted if he is excelled even in the metropolis. The new arrangement gives him an entirely new location for his working or operating room and he now has a north light and the glass is so arranged as to secure the top window against leakage. The front room is admirably arranged, tastefully furnished, and supplied with needful conveniences. At one end is his business office where the accounts are kept and the clerical work done. At the opposite end are two nice dressing rooms, one for ladies and the other for gentlemen, and these are supplied with the necessary conveniences. The main room contains many very fine portraits most of which are the property of Mr. Cross, though some are works of art which have been ordered by patrons and will be taken away. A portion of these have been noticed in the newspapers including those of the late Hon. A. A. Abbott, Rev. Father Gray, and Major Lewis Allen. But among those which have not been mentioned are a little son of Mr. Samuel V. Goodhue, a son of Mr. Charles A. Benjamin, another of Mr. Francis H. Appleton, another of Mr. Woodruff, another of one of the New York Harpers. There is also a lifelike portrait of Mr. A. A. Hunting and a very good representation of Miss Gertrude Swain as she appeared in the character of the Flower girl in an amateur dramatic performance in Salem.

Mr. Cross's work will always bear examination and the pictures here mentioned are known as pastel portraits, being painted out from crayon work. He does every kind of work known to the photographic art. Every room is carpeted with one pattern of handsome Brussels carpeting, of which 262 yards were required. The draperies and tints blend well and give a soft mellow hue to the main room. Mr. Cross is always glad to have visitors inspect his rooms, which are quite metropolitan in their style.—Gazette.

The Massachusetts Society for Promoting Agriculture (at whose instance legislative action has been taken) desires to call the attention of farmers and others of this State to the recent act of the Legislature, "to aid in the suppression of contagious diseases among domestic animals," and to inform them that by said act any one having knowledge that such diseases exists, and who withholds such information from the proper city or town officers, thereby becomes liable to very severe punishment. In view of the serious prevalence of hog cholera, it is proper the public should realize that the penalties for the concealment of this and all other animal diseases are very severe. Copies of the legislative bill can be obtained on application to F.H. Appleton, librarian, 23 Court street, Boston.

We would suggest to the depot master, who seems to insist on enforcing the rules against smoking, that if he would prohibit polo playing on the station platform he would confer a favor on the public. A lady while passing along the platform Monday was struck in the face by a ball used in playing polo and sustained painful injuries.

One of our fancy fowl fanciers had a lot of early spring chickens hatched out last Thursday morning and left them in a sunny place and went to Boston. When he returned the old hen was left but not a chicken, while several over fed cats stretched themselves and went to sleep not far from that yard.

NOTES

I want to call the attention of someone, whose duty it is to look after such things, to a certain soap concern who work this town once or twice a year with a kind of oatmeal toilet soap. The mode of operation is to go to a house and leave one or more boxes of soap and allow the lady of the house to use one cake out of each box. A few days later they call and demand their goods, and if they are not easily found or are misplaced, the agent begins in a bulldozing way to demand the goods or an equivalent for them. I have in mind a place where the agent called, and not finding the folks at home left a box with a neighbor who neglected to leave it with the party for whom it was designed. A few days ago the agent called, and when told by the lady of the house she had not seen his soap, the agent impudently asserted that he was positive he left it there, and intimated that it must be in the house. The lady was much aggitated about the matter and strongly denied receiving it, going so far as to give the fellow the privilege of searching the house. A call was made on the neighbor and the soap found, and then the agent was not gentleman enough to acknowledge his error, but seemed provoked that the soap was found and that he didn't make someone pay for it.

I received a circular the other day soliciting my order for a revised version of the Old Testament which will be published about the first of June. With all due respect to the gentleman who sent me the circular, I don't think I require this new version of the Old Testament, not being familiar enough with the present version to cause me much trouble. By the way, I have a copy of the revised New Testament for which there was a lively demand when it was first issued, but now they are a drug in the market. I don't believe there is a pulpit in this town that uses the revised version and certainly no acclesiastical body has adopted it. People generally are of the opinion that it is the Old Testament that should be revised and many parts expunged.

I learn that one of our young men has a stove for sale. It came into his possession in the following manner:—Some time in February he thought the town was going to vote for license, and he bought a cooking stove and a lot of crockery, and intended to be all fitted up by the first of May. The result is, he will work at his trade another year and sell his stove and crockery at a discount.

Report says that last Sunday the usher at one of our churches was very much surprised when a devoted church going lady passed him her checks for seats at the Margaret Mather performance. It was confusing for both.

Mr. J. W. Curtis came home from Keene, N. H., on a short visit to his sister last week, and returned Monday morning.

The funeral of Mrs. John Armstrong took place at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. John Brown, on County street, last Friday. The remains were taken to Harmony Grove for burial.

Mr. J. B. Thomas is going to have one of the best looking lots there is in Cedar Grove Cemetery when it is finished. A beautiful new monument is being erected.

Mr. Warren Shaw is having new fences put around his land on Lynn street, much to the improvement of the same.

The L. B. R. R. Co., are putting in a new turnout just below the store of Wm. E. Reed on Lynn street.

Don't forget the fair and festival at the church vestry Wednesday and Thursday evenings. Supper will be served to all who wish it.

Miss Joy Williams has been quite sick the past two weeks with measles.

Mr. F. O. Needham has removed into his new house on County street.

The old house that stood on the gravel pit lot, on County street, was torn down last Friday night by unknown parties.

The family of Mrs. Elizabeth Tucker celebrated the sixty-fifth birthday of that lady last Wednesday by giving her a surprise at her home. The children, grand children and great grand children were present. A supper was provided, and the hostess was remembered with numerous presents.

The dramatic season in this town is about over.

THE DRAMA

At the Park Theatre, commencing April 27th, for one week, will appear the charming young American artiste, Estelle Clayton, in an entirely new comedy drama, written by herself and entitled "Favette," the story of a waif; direct from the New York Union Square Theatre, where it has enjoyed a four weeks's run to crowded houses. The following is the cast of characters:—Fred. De Belleville, George Holland, Wm. Davidge, Jr., Henry Dalton, Chas. F. Tingay, Joseph Murray, Constance Murielle, Mrs. Charles Poole, Ida Mulle, Elizabeth Andrews and Maud Stewart.

At the Bijou is the farewell engagement of the Union Square Theatre Co., in One Touch of Nature and Three Wives to One Husband. Next week the attraction will be "The Rag Baby."

This is the last week of Augustin Daley's great play "Pique," at the Museum. The extraordinary cast of characters includes Messrs. Charles Barron, George W. Wilson, Sol Smith Russell, Alfred Hudson, Charles Kent, George R. Parks, Edwin Arden, James Nolan, James Burrows, Albert Lane. Miss Annie Clarke, Mrs. J. R. Vincent, Misses Blanche Thompson, Reginia Dace, Miriam O' Leary, Kate Ryan, Louise Jordan. Saturday evening, May 2, will be the Benefit of Mr. George W. Wilson, in "All that Glitters is not Gold" and "Toodles"; also Mr. Sol Smith Russell in his specialties.

At the Howard Athenaeum, Mr. James O'Neill, the popular actor, will appear in Dumas' great play, Monte Cristo, under the management of Mr. John Stetson.

Mme Theo and Mr. Maurice Grau's French Opera Company, including Mlle. Cecile Lefort, the celebrated prima donna, will appear at the Globe Theatre, commencing April 27, for one week only.

Adelina Patti makes her farewell appearance at the Boston Theatre this week, Thursday evening, April 30, will be the final appearance in America of Mme Adelina Patti, in "Martha." Lionello, Signor Vicini; Plunketto, Signor Caracciolo; Nancy, Mme. Scalchi, and Martha, Mme. Adelina Patti. Friday evening, May 1, Mlle. Emma Nevada, Mme. Schachi "Mirelal." Final matinee, Saturday afternoon, May 2, Mlle. Emma Nevada, her last appearance, Lucia, Edgardo, Signor Giannini; Aston, Signor De Anna; Raimondo, Signor Cherubini; Normanno, Signor De Vaschetti; and Lucia, Mlle. Emma Nevada.

On Monday evening, May 4, the Boston Museum Company will appear in Mechanic Hall in "Pique," a strong play in a strong cast, Mrs. Vincent being one of the many stars comprised in the list. The Salem Cadet orchestra will, in connection with the entertainment, perform the following programme: 1. March—Red Hussar, Fahenbach; 2. Overture—Popular, Boettger; 3. a Cornet Solo—La Commerce, Corben; b Xylophone Solo, Reed; 4. Selections—La Sonnambula Bellini; 5. Clarinet solo — Anbarie, Mohr; (Mr. L. M. Jones). 6. a Ethiopian Serenade, Ruerner; b Hungarian Dance, Brahma; 7. March — Marksmen's Parade, Schlepegrell.

Mr. H. A. McGlenen, the business manager of the Boston Theatre, will make the first night of the appearance of Minnie Palmer in "My Sweetheart" at that house, May 18, the occasion of his annual benefit. The house is none too large for the double event.

THE KEMPS

Manure Spreader.

The demand for Spreader is rapidly increasing every way, which is a good recommendation of its merit, and now is just the season you want to use one. It will do the work of five men and spread your manure much finer, so the first good rain will completely dissolve it and give to the grass and vegetable roots nourishment much quicker and more evenly, than when spread the old way, by the shovelful.

You can't afford to be without one.

We have them in stock, come and get one. Price, $100. We carry the largest stock of Agricultural Tools and Seeds

in Essex County, and are prepared to sell them very low. Please give us a call and examine goods and prices. We have in stock Bowken Hill & Drill, Bradley's Super Phosphate of Lime, Pacific Guano, Stockbridge Manure, Dole's Fertilizer, Fertilizer Bone, Bone Meal, etc.

SPRING AND SUMMER CLOTHING

FOR THE MILLIONS,

BY THE GREAT CLOTHIERS OF NEW ENGLAND.

FRIDAY MAY 8th, we shall inaugurate our 7th Great Annual Spring and Summer Sale of Fine and Medium Clothing, for Men's, Young Men's, Boys' and Children's wear, and

GENTS' FURNISHING GOODS.

Having just completed the alterations of our establishment we can now say that we have the largest, finest and best lighted store east of Boston. We would call the attention of the public to the fact that when we commenced doing business in Salem, Sept. 14, 1878, we occupied but a little over 2000 sq. ft. of salesroom. In 1879, however, owing to the rapid increase of trade, we were obliged to enlarge our salesroom; and, in the spring of 1881 our business had grown to such an extent we were compelled to again increase our establishment by taking in the next store, in order to meet the demand of our trade.

One past year's business proved that even this was insufficient. We have been obliged to enlarge for the third time, giving us now nearly 8000 square feet, being the largest retail Clothing Salesroom but one (the "Marlboro"), in the State.

The "Naumkeag" never saw difficulties in the way. If there were any it went right through them or over them (never around them). It was bound for the front and got there, and now the "Naumkeag" business is the wonder of the county. We have won this victory—the victory of honest value—the triumph of Large Sales and Small Profits. Our interests are mutual. You have profited by every step that we have taken—by means of our method that declares uncompromising warfare against "fancy profits" and believes in handling goods in the greatest possible quantities with the maximum speed at the maximum cost and charging the consumer only one small profit above the actual expense of transportation and sale, that goes even farther and guarantees the quality of every article as absolutely as the price thus defending the purchaser against the possibility of even unconscious imposition. This is protection of your interests in the true sense of the term. Its successful accomplishment is only possible under the impetus of very large sales.

We propose to make this opening one that will rival anything of the kind ever attempted by any clothier in the United States. We are the largest manufacturing Retail Dealers in New England. Headquarters Manufacturing and Wholesale Rooms 315, 317, 395, 397, 399, 401 and 403 Washington street, Boston. Branch stores in the principal cities of New England.

We have a stock of over $1,000,000.00

From which to draw our supplies.

OUR MOTTO:

THE MINIMUM OF PRICE! THE MAXIWUM OF QUALITY!

It is now nearly 7 years since we inaugurated our present system of doing business and we take pleasure in asserting that owing to our unlimited advantages and the generous co-operation of a discriminating public we have been able to carry on our ONE PRICE CASH SYSTEM successfully, and while we have maintained the highest standard in the quality of our goods, we have been enabled to sell them at the lowest prices, style and quality considered for the following reasons:

We Always Buy for Cash!
We Buy in Large Quantities!
We Buy Direct from the Mills!
We Manufacture our own Goods!
We Sell Directly to Consumers.

With the above advantages we guarantee to undersell all competitors from 20 to 40 per cent, no matter who they are or where they do business. We have done it in the past and shall continue to do it.

Poet's Corner.

The Village Blacksmith.

BY H. W. LONGFELLOW.

Under a spreading chestnut tree
The village smithy stands;
The smith, a mighty man is he,
With large and sinewy hands;
And the muscles or his brawny arms,
Are strong as iron bands.

His hair is crisp, and black and long,
His face is like the tan;
His brow is wet with honest sweat,
He earns whate'er he can,
And looks the whole world in the face,
For he owes not any man.

Week in, week out, from morn till night,
You can hear his bellows blow;
You can hear him swing his heavy sledge,
With measured beat and slow,
Like a sexton ringing the village bell
When the evening sun is low.

And children coming home from school
Look in at the open door;
They love to see the flaming forge,
And hear the bellows roar,
And catch the burning sparks that fly
Like chaff from a threshing floor.

He goes on Sunday to the church,
And sits among his boys;
He hears the parson pray and preach,
He hears his daughter's voice,
Singing in the village choir,
And it makes his heart rejoice.

It sounds to him like her mother's voice,
Singing in Paradise!
And he needs must think of her once more.
How in the grave she lies;
And with his hard, rough hand he wipes,
A tear out of his eyes,

Toiling—rejoicing—sorrowing,
Onward through life he goes;
Each morning sees some task begun,
Each evening sees it close;
Something attempted, something done,
Has earned a night's repose.

Thanks, thanks to thee, my worthy friend
For the lesson thou hast taught!
Thus at the flaming forge of life,
Our fortunes must be wrought;
Thus on its sounding anvil shaped
Each burning deed and thought!

Strange Game of Consequences.

JACK WHITE.

HE.

A gay young clerk in a fancy store,
His age was twenty-eight;
He dressed in style and wore a smile
Warranted to captivate.
His chief delight, till late at night,
Was to glide on the roller-skate.
Oh, my!

SHE.

Who shall describe the dainty maid,
Who withstand her glance?
She opened her heart for Cupid's dart
Till she didn't have half a chance.
So very plain was this maiden's aim
At anything wearing pants.
Fie! fie!

WHERE THEY MET.

With bird-like grace he skimmed along,
No thought of ill had he;
When like a flash, there came a smash—
They met both he and she.
Though from her nose the claret flows,
Her smile was sweet to see.
She's glad!

CONSEQUENCES.

A year has flown on wings of love
Since they had that awful fall.
They never think of the skating rink,
They don't have time at all.
She rocks the baby, or he does, may be,
And their pocket-book's awfully small,
How sad!

Lay of the Last Car.

Roll on, thou car, roll on!
O'er leagues of iron track
Roll on!
What though I cannot hire a hack?
What though I'm "broke"—except five cents?
What though to suburb resi-dence—
Nine miles—I'll have to walk me hence!
Never you mind!
Roll on!

Roll on, thou car, roll on!
At a swift 2.40 gait
Roll on!
It matters not if I am late;
If I bawl "stop!" till I am hoarse,
It matters not to you, of course,
So keep right on—thou last resource!
Never mind me!
Roll on!

Roll on, thou car, roll on!
Through winter's freezing air
Roll on!
It's true I've no top-coat to wear;
It's true the "L" don't run my way;
It's true to trudge home won't be gay—
But don't let that disturb you, pray!
Never you mind
Roll on!

The Usual Way.

"From hand to mouth," he gayly said
And pressed her dainty finger tips,
Which salutarion quickly led
To one upon her perfect lips.
As fair as roses in the South,
"From hand to mouth."

So she was won, and so was he;
'Twas something like a year ago,
And now they both are one, you see,
Although which one I hardly know.
They're living somewhere in the South,
"From hand to mouth."

Selected Story.

A Moment of Terror.

Rena Grange was the prettiest girl in Bolton, and the biggest flirt.

All girls flirt, you say! Well, perhaps, but I think I know several who do not. Rena certainly did. She could never see a man without making eyes at him, and very handsome eyes hers were, and eloquent; she could make them say anything.

I think Rena was so much in the habit of flirting, that she tried her hand on the women sometimes. Certainly they were almost as much in love with her as their sons, which proves that, notwithstanding the story I am going to tell you, Rena must have had a kind and generous heart, and a great many other good qualities, or the women whose sons she fooled would not have been so ready to forgive her and take her to their arms.

I am not making any excuse for flirting. I consider it one of the meanest devices Satan has ever invented for the beguiling of man. But I knew the girl I call Rena Grange, well; and I confess that I could never see that she had but one fault. She was the most truthful girl that I ever knew, and the most unselfish. She must have been born a flirt. I cannot account for her being one in any other way. After all it only amounted to this.

She had what she thought was an innocent fashion of laughing and jesting with young fellows, of lifting her small rosebud face confidingly, of looking their hearts out of them with eyes whose expressiveness, perhaps, she did not herself know.

Among Rena's married friends there was one, much older than she, of whom she was especially fond.

She was a widow, having lost her husband, under peculiarly painful circumstances, when they had been married only two years. She had never married again, and seemed to live only in her son, her only child, who was in California, where he had been for five years past. Rena had never seen him.

Mrs. Mercer thought Rena the sweetest, loveliest girl that ever was made. She did not think she had one fault. Even that foolish habit she had of trifling with gentlemen quite amused her, till her son Fred wrote her that he was coming home.

Then, indeed, the mother's heart misgave her.

She knew that Rena's parents would never consent to her marrying even a young man with her Fred's perfections without money.

She was one of those women who tell all their thoughts, except now and then, when they keep a secret that destroys them.

'Rena dear,' she said frankly, the first time she saw her favorite after her son's letter, 'I want you to promise me that you won't flirt with Fred.'

Rena laughed, and then made a face.

'Now, Mrs. Mercer, you are as bad as the rest. You know I never flirt.'

'I know you do, my darling, dreadfully, and I don't suppose in a general way it matters much. Most men have tough hearts. But now and then there's one whose nature is so inflamable, that for a pretty girl like you to smile and look sweet at him is like a spark to gunpowder.'

'Really, you quite flatter me,' said Rena, gaily. 'I had no idea I was so dangerous.'

The elderly lady looked distressed.

'Dear Rena,' she said, 'you know I love you, and how dearly, if such a thing were possible I should like you for a daughter. But even if you liked Fred, which is improbable, you know as well as I do that your parents would never consent, and so dear, I wish you wouldn't flirt with him. Now that is frank is it not?'

There was a look of trouble in Mrs. Mercer's face, which Rena was quick to see, but not to fully interpret, not having the key. If her friend had told her all, it might have made a difference, as it might not. Who knows?

As it was, she really did mean to be careful about Fred Mercer. She had already one or two unpleasant reminiscences connected with young gentlemen to whom she had been too kind, and she did not wish to add to the list.

Still, she had heard so much of him from his mother, his good looks, his manliness, intelligence, his affectionate disposition, his passionate temper, that she was very curious to see him.

She was disappointed in him. Instead of the gay, eager, impulsive young fellow she had expected, she saw a tall, cold, haughty, reserved man, who looked much older than he really was, and in place of appearing at all dazzled by her charms, showed only marked coolness and avoidance.

Rena's vanity was piqued.

'He shall at least treat me decently,' she resolved, and set to work, as only a woman can to make him do so.

The result any one could have forseen. In a week he was at her feet, not as others had been though.

'I did not want to love you,' he said simply, 'my mother told me you had no heart, but you must have, or you could never look at a man as you have at me. I am sure you love me, Rena. If you do not, Heaven help me!'

Rena hung her head, the agony of his voice, his looks pierced her like a knife. She had led him on; she knew that she had enticed him with every sweet word and look.

'I am a wicked girl,' she said to herself. 'I deserve anything—and after what dear Mrs. Mercer said to me, too.'

'You do love me, Rena? I was sure of it,' he said. 'My mother told me no, that you looked at everyone in the same way, but I would not believe it. You will be my wife, darling?'

Lower, lower went the bright head.

'No,' she said; 'no.'

But she could not look at him.

He turned cold.

'You don't mean it—you can't mean it!' he cried passionately; 'no woman could do by a man as you have done by me, and not love him.'

'As long as I live,' Rena thought, 'I will never flirt with any one again.'

Fred Mercer fell on his knees beside her. Her handsome face was white. The despair and entreaty of his looks were frightful to see.

'You do—you must love me!' he said once more.

Rena turned away her head.

'No,' she answered again; 'no. If marrying you would right the wrong I have done you, I would be your wife. But you know as well as I do that no woman could wrong a man more than by marrying him when she did not love him.'

'But I will teach you to love me.'

'Oh, no, no; forgive me.'

He rose to his feet.

'I will never forgive you!' he said bitterly; 'you have done me a wrong for which you can make no atonement except the one of becoming my wife. You will not do that—very well. You have ruined my life, and you did it deliberately. You tried to do it. If ever the time comes when I can make you suffer as you have me, I will do it.'

And then he was gone. Rena Grange was alone. She was very pale she shivered and looked frightened. Then in a moment her color began to come back, and she smiled nervously.

'I'm sorry, and I didn't mean it should go so far,' she said. 'But who would have thought he would take it so hard? As for making me suffer, I don't know how he ever can.'

But after what had happened, she felt a strange reluctance to meet him and it did not seem to her she could ever look Mrs. Mercer in the face.

She went the very next day to make a long promised visit to some friends who lived in a distant part of the country.

When she returned, some months later, it was to get ready to be married. She had found her fate at last. She loved, with all the strength of her nature, John Arundel, the man she was going to marry.

The Mercers had gone away, no one knew where, and Rena felt her self the cause. But with her remorse for that mingled an undeniable sense of relief that they were gone.

She married in due time and went away on the bridal tour.

One afternoon, as she sat looking from the window of the hotel where they were stopping for a day or two, she saw a lady and gentleman come in.

They were Fred Mercer and his mother. Both were very much altered, she saw, even in the brief glimpse she got of them as she drew back quickly her white face.

Had they seen her?

In five minutes she knew. Some one knocked. It was Mrs. Mercer She spoke very coldly and hurriedly.

'My son is just out of the insane asylum,' she said. 'His father was so; he killed himself. I ought to have told you, but I could not bear to tell any one. The doctors pronounce Fred cured, but he is very excitable. Rena, don't let Fred see you. I'm afraid he has already, for he positively refuses to leave the hotel.'

'He shan't see,' Rena answered, her white and trembling lips refusing to utter another word.

The conviction smote her that he had seen her, and that he would try and speak with her. She had not forgotten his last words.

'If I can ever make you suffer as you have me, I will do it.'

Her husband was asleep in the next room. She passed into it, and stood looking at him.

A fair, frank-faced man he was, with curly brown hair, and lips that smiled even in slumber—not much like that other of whom she was thinking with such dread.

'If he ever does hurt me, it will be through you, my darling,' she thought.

One window of this room looked upon a small flower garden belonging to the hotel. As she stood she raised her eyes to it, and she saw Fred Mercer standing on the terrace outside, and gazing into the apartment. With one hand he held the curtain back, with the other he motioned her to come towards him.

Involuntarily she went, though his death white face, his glittering black eyes, turned her sick with fear. Was he mad again? Oh, if her husband would only wake.

Her visitor loosed the curtain and laid a cold hand upon her bare and shrinking arm.

'I've come to keep my word,' he said in a whisper. 'That is your husband there, is it not?' and he took a pistol slowly out of his breast and pointed it at the sleeping man.

'Utter one sound,' he said, 'and I shoot.'

But the caution was needless. Rena was too frozen with horror to either speak or move.

'You love him I suppose?' he went on. 'At last—at this moment—you suffer some, at least, of these pangs you once made me endure.'

Rena could not have moved or spoken if she had tried.

She just stood and stared at him and wished John would wake, and prayed inwardly with all her soul:

'Dear God, don't let me faint. It isn't John who is to blame, but me, and you know I am a wicked girl better than I can tell you.'

Which was indeed very true.

However, to make a long story short, Rena Arundel did faint, and her husband was awakened by the sound of her falling.

Fred Mercer stood inside the room now.

'I am an old acquaintance of your wife.' he said, in answer to his stare of amazement. 'She was standing at the window talking to me, when something frightened her and she fainted.'

At this moment Rena opened her eyes. She was in her husband's arms and he was saying to Fred Mercer in a very stern voice.

'I know all about you. The best thing you can do is to leave.'

Rena shuddered, but to her amazement, Mercer instantly passed through the low window, and standing outside, turned and looked at her.

'I beg Mrs. John Arundel's pardon for keeping my word so literally to her. I shall never trouble her again.'

And he was gone.

Rena clung to her husband convulsively.

'I'm the wickedest girl that ever lived, John. Fred Mercer has just come out of the insane asylum. There is madness in his family, and if he goes back again, it will be my fault.'

'He won't go back—no fear, my darling,' her husband answered soothingly.

There was a long silence, and then Rena, without lifting her head from her husband's shoulder, said:

'John, I am a wicked girl, am I not?'

John Arundel laughed.

'You are my darling.'

'It is a million times more than I deserve,' she said; 'and you are the best man that ever lived to love me so, knowing my faults.'

'I don't think you have any.'

'That's just the way you men all talk; and you help us flirt—you know you do.'

'I don't doubt it, my darling. Men are as bad flirts as women; and I think they do just as much mischief.'

'Yes, I suppose so,' Rena answered sadly.

And here is where I believe in Rena. They were in society, and she was much admired, but she never became a married flirt.

She had girls of her own in the course of time, and they got the benefit of her experience and remorse, in such earnest and oft repeated words of caution as they never forgot.

THE DRAMA

"Nordeck" is the drama which Frank Mayo is to present during the present week as the opening attraction of his annual engagement at the Boston Theatre. It is said to be a very enthralling play, giving Mr. Mayo, in the role of the two brothers, some of his finest opportunities for effective dramatic portrayal. "Nordeck" is dramatized from Werner's great novel, "Vinita." The cast will introduce Mr. Sheridan Corbyn's company, which includes Miss Kathryn Kidder and Mr. Edwin Mayo, as well as Edwin Torrey, H. P. Phillips and E. F. Eberle.

Joseph Jefferson will, no doubt, be welcomed by a fine audience at the Globe Theatre this week. This evening and for the remainder of the week he will appear in "Rip Van Winkle." The star's company includes Lillian Lee, May Walcott, William Herbert and Julius Kahn, as well as Connie Jackson.

Augustin Daly's admirable company of comedians begin a brief engagement at the Boston Museum this week. They will offer the first success of Mr. Daly's season in New York, "Love on Crutches." It is an adaption from the German, and no play in Mr. Daly's list of popular pieces is said to display to more advantage the talents of his comedy organization.

The New York comedy actor and manager, Mr. Lester Wallack, will appear this week at the Park, in B. C. Stephenson's play, "Impulse." Mr. Wallack is to have the support of specially selected players, including Miss Annie Robe, Mme. Ponisi, Caroline Hill, Walter Reynolds and others of his own comedy company in New York.

One of Shook & Collier's Union Square successes is to be shown for the delight and applause this week of patrons of the Howard. It is Elliott Barnes' drama, "The Blue and the Gray," which has attained a degree of favor much greater than that accorded any play of the time in which "the late unpleasantness" is introduced.

Alice Oates returns this week at the head of her own successful burlesque company, and the Boylston Museum will be the scene of her appearances. "Robin Hood, or the Bandit Prince," is to be the offering every afternoon and evening.

The engagement of the Union Square company at the Bijou, which is to continue throughout the week, presents uncommon attractiveness to all who are fond of good dramatic productions, well acted. "One Touch of Nature" is a beautiful play, "Three Wives to One Husband" is a jolly comedy, and Miss Jewett, Miss Harrison, Mr. Mason, Mr. Stoddart and all the company act with the greatest life and spirit.

A host of friends eagerly await every spring the opportunity presented to show their appreciation of the courtesy and ability of the business agent of the Boston Theatre, Mr. H. A. McGlener. This year, as usual, a great many checks and requests that tickets should be reserved were sent in to Mr. McGlenen weeks before the date announced for the opening of the sale. Were the attraction for his annual entertainment kept a secret until the evening of the event, the gentleman might count with confidence on the attendance of a great company. With Minnie Palmer in the new "My Sweetheart" as the offering, and the occasion the first night of her farewell engagement in America, there would be a thronged house in any event The fact that Mr. McGlenen's testimonial occurs at such an interesting performance indicates very plainly the proper course for the multitude of his well-wishes to pursue—secure their seats, which are now ready at the Boston Theatre box office, at the earliest possible moment.

ASSESSORS' NOTICE.

To the Inhabitants and other Persons liable to pay Taxes in the Town of Peabody.

The Assessors of the Town of Peabody hereby give notice to the inhabitants of said town, and all other persons liable to pay taxes therein, that their office will be open on and after the first day of May until and including the first day of June, and all persons liable to be taxed in said town are hereby required to bring in at the said office true and perfect lists of all the polls (males twenty years old, and upward), and schedules and estimates of the personal estates for which they are liable to pay taxes.

Copartnerships

having a place of business in Peabody, and also in some other city or town within the Commonwealth, are especially notified to bring in a statement in accordance with the 24th section of the 11th chapter of the Public Statutes. Shipping and business income are not taxable to a firm, but each resident partner must include these items in his individual return.

Mortgaged Real Estate.

"Any mortgagor or mortgagee of real estate may bring in to the assessors of the town or city where such real estate lies," within the time specified in this notice, "a statement, under oath, of the amount due on each separate lot or parcel of such real estate, and the name and residence of every holder of an interest therein as a mortgagee or mortgagor. When such property is situated in two or more places, or when a recorded mortgage includes for one sum two or more estates or parts of an estate, an estimate of the amount of the mortgagee's interest in each estate or part of an estate shall be given in such statement." [Chap. 175 of the Acts of 1882]. When a statement in conformity with the law above quoted is brought in, the real estate therein returned will be assessed under sections 14, 15 and 16, of chapter 11 of the Public Statutes. But in cases where the mortgagor of the real estate has agreed in writing to pay all taxes assessed thereon, NO STATEMENT OR RETURN IS REQUIRED from either mortgagee or mortgagor, unless requested by the assessors in writing.

Estates in Trust.

Persons holding estates in trust, whether for minors or otherwise, are particularly requested to furnish the assessors with statements in relation to such estates. When trust estates, or estates of persons deceased, have been divided during the past year, or have changed hands from other causes, the trustee, executor or administrator, or other person interested, is required and warned to give notice of such change; and in default of such notice, will be held to pay the tax assessed, although such estate has been wholly distributed and paid over.

Any person bringing in a list of all his taxable personal property will be assessed upon the valuation thereof, and any one neglecting to furnish the assessors with such list within the time above specified will de doomed at a legal meeting of the Board of Assessors, agreeably to the law of the Commonwealth. All persons will take notice that statements of personal property must be in writing, and subscribed under oath before one of the Assessors, at their office, on or before the FIRST DAY OF JUNE, and that the personal property of all taxable persons must be estimated by the Board, NOTWITHSTANDING A VERBAL STATEMENT OR INFORMAL WRITTEN COMMUNICATION TO ANY ONE OR MORE OF THE ASSESSORS. [Pub. Stat., chap. 11, sec. 39 and 41.] When a person has failed to bring in a list or schedule of all his taxable property, in conformity to this notice, no abatement of a tax so assessed upon such person for personal property can be granted, "unless such tax exceeds by more than fifty per cent. the amount which would have been assessed to that person on personal estate, if he had seasonably brought in said list; and if said tax exceeds by more than fifty per cent. the said amount, the abatement shall be only of the excess above the said fifty per cent. [Pub. Stat., Chap. 11, Sec. 73.]

Any person taxable in Peabody for personal property can obtain a BLANK SCHEDULE for making a list of such property, with directions for properly filling the same, by applying at the assessors' office.

Literary, Benevolent, Charitable and Scientific Corporations.

The attention of the Officers of all Literary, Benevolent, Charitable and Scientific Corporations, located in Peabody, is particularly called to the requirements of Chapter 217 of the Acts of 1882, as the property of said corportions, both personal and real, will be subject to taxation unless the law is complied with. Blank forms for the purpose can be had at the office of the assessors.

Rheumatism

It is an established fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla has proven an invaluable remedy in many severe cases of rheumatism, effecting remarkable cures by its powerful action in correcting the acidity of the blood, which is the cause of the disease, and purifying and enriching the vital fluid.

It is certainly fair to assume that what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for others it will do for you. Therefore, if you suffer the pains and aches of rheumatism, give this potent remedy a fair trial.

A Positive Cure.

"I was troubled very much with rheumatism in my hips, ankles, and wrists. I could hardly walk, and was confined to my bed a good deal of the time. Being recommended to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, I took four bottles and am perfectly well. I cheerfully recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla as one of the best blood purifiers in the world." W. F. WOOD, Bloomington, Ill.

For Twenty Years

I have been afflicted with rheumatism. Before 1883 I found no relief, but grew worse. I then began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, and it did me more good than all the other medicine I ever had." H. T. BALCOM, Shirley, Mass.

"I suffered from what the doctors called muscular rheumatism. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and am entirely cured." J. V. A. PROUDFOOT, letter carrier, Chicago, Ill.

We shall be glad to send, free of charge, to all who may desire, a book containing many additional statements of cures by

LETTER FROM FLORIDA.

We have been handed a private letter from Jacksonville, Fla., dated March 25th, written by a person well known to our readers, from which we make the following interesting extracts:—Having spent three weeks in Jacksonville and visited the places of interest in and about the city, we take the ferry boat to cross the St. John's river, which is about half a mile wide at this place, to Oklahama; then we go about two miles from the landing to Alexander Mitchell's winter home, which is certainly a delightful place. Nearly one mile of the road is a Mr. Mitchell's private carriage way, and on one side of it for half a mile, is a solid rose hedge, covering an old fence. Think of this, half a mile of rose blossoms, all pure white, and the bushes loaded with bud- from the smallest size up to those just ready to burst open, with the sweet fragrance they send out for a long distance in all directions. On the other side of the drive is a thick grove of timber, with a very thick growth of underbrush. This underbrush and timber is thickly strewn with Sweet Jessamines in full bloom, covering the small trees and brush, and manfully contesting with the rose hedge their right to send their sweet perfume to all that may pass that way.

Soon we reach an orange grove of about four thousand trees, many of them now loaded with fruit. The grounds are very pretty, the outlook grand, standing on the bank of the St. John's river, one hundred and fifty feet from the river, and about twenty feet above high water, with the river about three miles wide in front, where plenty of fish and crabs can be caught at pleasure, only a few rods from his door, and with new potatoes, peas, beans and all vegetables at any time of the year, and strawberries in plenty, with a banana orchard, what more could one ask? We spent a delightful day in making this visit and we heartily wish that all of our Peabody friends could have been there to enjoy it with us.

After a day's rest we take the steamer Eliza Hancox for an hour's ride to Mandarin, fifteen miles up the St. John's river, to the winter home of Harriet Beecher Stowe. Mrs. Stowe's place is very near the steamer landing, a very comfortable and pleasant place, with broad porches, so home-like and enjoyable. The residence is not at all expensive; the luxuries are outside in her fruits, flowers, vines and climate, which all would admire. She has two large live oaks very near her house, which gives her splendid shade for her house and porches, and from their long heavy branches hang wagon loads of moss. It has no root, but hangs over the branches, and grows down at each end, twenty feet long. This moss grows more abundantly on the live oak than any other tree. The view of one of these live oak groves is grand. Each tree throws out its branches until they meet and mingle with the branches from some far off tree, and all covered with this long moss, from the upper branches hanging many feet down and from the lower branches near to the ground.

This is certainly a delightful climate, where winter forgets to come and summer stays the year around. Think of the orange trees as they now appear, covered with thick, green, glossy leaves with thousands of those golden oranges crowded in among the leaves, then completely loaded with their sweet white blossoms, the leaves so beautiful to the eye, the fruit so delightful to the taste, the blossom so magnificent in its perfume. Mrs. Stowe, has a fine orange grove extending from her residence a long way south, and many other kinds of fruit. Think of the view from her porch; looking east the eye will take in a live oak grove, their long and strong branches bowing beneath the beautiful long moss, with the orange, peach, cherry and other trees in full bloom; looking south you take in the long straight rows of orange trees, in all their beauty; then to the west you have the great St. John's River, five miles wide at this place, dotted with her steamships and sailing vessels plying between Jacksonville, Mandarin, Magnolia, Green Cove Springs, To coi, St. Augustine, Palatka, Sanford, and Enterprise, the last named place one hundred and seventy-five miles from Jacksonville, and it really seems strange that in ascending this river you are going southward, so unlike all of our large rivers which flow southward, while this flows northward, and empties into the ocean at Mayport, near the northern part of the state. But we return to Jacksonville wearied with our day's sightseeing. A little rest and we again cross the river for a visit to the fruit orchard of Dr. Davis. He came here from Seneca Falls, N. Y., about eight years ago, tempted by the climate. He took us through his fruit orchard, showed and explained to us his different kinds. He has about two thousand orange trees, cherries, peaches, figs, mandarins, lemons, etc. He showed us peaches about half grown the 11th day of March; he showed us a rose bush eight inches in diameter at the base, with its very large blossoms just fully spread out, the largest we had ever seen.

We were told we must certainly go to see a live oak tree a few rods from his house; thousands go there to see it; we met many coming away when we were going; the trunk is about five feet through, the tree about eighty feet high, about eight feet from the ground the branches put out close together clear around the tree and stand almost straight out; the branches large, clean and smooth to very near the end when they branch out. I measured from the end of the branches on one side to the end of the branches on the other side of the tree; it was one hundred and eleven feet. It was a beautiful tree, and here we got a fine lot of strawberries to take to the city with us. It is very pleasant to be where one can get plenty of fruit and berries all winter, or all of the winter months without the winter. That you may know how it is to-day, with our windows wide open, the sun does not touch our rooms, it is 76 in our room. But the good things are not all put in one place. Could you see their stock, such poor cattle I have never seen. Their cows about the size of a goat, very thin; should think one could get about milk enough from one cow for a cup of coffee; all their stock spring poor the year round; they cannot raise such grass as grows in your country, such as they do grow makes very poor feed. Very many yards in this city have not one spear of grass in them, nor a bush; all have sand. Some yards look quite green, covered with a coarse knot grass, by wetting it every day. The best places have by great pains a beautiful variety of flowers all winter. Take their climate away and no one would stay here that could get away.

We take the steamer Sylvan Glen for the mouth of the St. John's river twenty-five miles, and a look off upon the ocean. We pass many small settlements and landings; we also pass quite a high bluff for this country, where it is said the first white settlement was made in this state, which was made by the French, and when the first fort, (Fort Caroline) was located, and all of the garrison, about two hundred men, or very nearly all, were massacred by the Spanish. We stop over two hours at Mayport and Pilot Town. Pilot Town is on St. George's Island, which is many miles long and three miles wide. This island all belongs to one man, and before and up to the war was the richest and largest plantation in this state. The owner, a white man, was very wealthy, and his wife was charcoal black. The island has grown up to brush, and a high coarse swamp grass. We walked half a mile in a palm grove, the first I ever saw, the palms from twenty-five to thirty feet high, and trimmed up from fifteen to twenty feet from the ground, with their broad palm leaf branches drooping over from their tops, so gracefully and pretty. The large hotel here was full of sight-seers from the north, like all other places about here. One would think that this place, with its many large hotels, the St. James will accommodate four hundred and fifty, the Everett, the Windsor, the Duval, the Carlton, the Tremont, two hundred to two hundred and fifty each, with many others say a hundred each, and near one hundred private houses renting from five to thirty rooms each, that all who might come could find accommodations, yet I have heard since I have been here, at different times, that the place was so full that there could not be found beds for the people, and they have had to sit in chairs at the hotels all night.

Go where you will (except to church) on the sidewalks, on the cars, or on the steamboats, and all are crowded. I am told that state rooms on the steamers up the St. John's are engaged days ahead, and there are many steamers running; but this is their harvest. A few more weeks and their visitors will be all gone, the flow of money from them stopped, and the life of this country gone. They would be very poor here were it not for the money from the visitors from the North, and they think a good deal more of the northern money than they do of the northerner.

GOOD SOUND PREACHING.—The minister of a fashionable church in Harrisburg, who was being continually interrupted by the violent coughing of one of his flock, stopped suddenly in the midst of his sermon and requested the congregation to take up a collection for the purpose of supplying the noisy brother with a bottle of Red Star Cough Cure. This newly discovered anti-narcotic remedy is becoming extremely popular on account of its wonderful efficacy. Postmaster Adreon, of Baltimore, endorses it highly, and the Commissioner of Health of the same city certifies officially that it is a most valuable and effective discovery.

JOHN P FERNALD, ALBERT VITTUM,
Editors and Publishers.

IN THE May number of the North American Review is a very able article from President Packard of the State University of Iowa on the causes of the increase of crime, and it is an article that should claim the attention of every parent. He urges that "even the quiet simple life of the rural districts feels the influence of the city so that the excitement of the city reaches the majority of the population. City life lures the young from their homes long before their characters are solidified. Parents dismiss their children from their thoughts under the glitter of a business career that opens before them, and have thought more of making them skillful accountants than men of stalwart honesty; their conversation savors more of cash than of character; their counsels have lead more frequently to shrewd bargains than to sterling integrity, so that boys who mean to be filial find themselves the victims of misdirection, and enter upon a business life with little strength and less power of resistance." The boy has been taught self-reliance by the relax influences of home and by knowledge gained from associations formed by the different influences of city life which has in turn robbed home of its attractiveness. Should a parent pay as much attention to the boy while at home as he does to pushing him forward after he enters the office, those outside habits which eventually lead to misfortune would not have been formed. It should be the duty of every parent to secure the confidence of their boy, and closely watch the molding of his character, helping where it is weak and encouraging where it is strong. As Mr. Packard says "the better counsels that may have at times escaped his father's lips, and the earnest prayers that have flowed from a mother's heart are forgotten in the giddy society that surrounds him. As he has banished from his mind all thoughts of home, the warnings of those who are less to him than father and mother are unheeded. Filled with confidence in his own judgment he first invites temptation, then dares it, and is ensnared and bound before he is aware that what he called strength is fatal weakness." There are notable exceptions to the above and that parent who has made it a point to give his son the necessary guidance, made his home so attractive that its teachings and influence through life will be felt and remembered, has placed a safeguard around that son that will enable him combat successfully the many temptations to which all are subjected. Make the home the most attractive and your son is bound to avoid the many pitfalls of city life. Mr. Packard's sentiments are worthy of careful thought. He says: "The false side of social life allures the young man who has no abiding memory of a true home—a memory possible only to him who has known such a home—not alone as a child in his tutelage, but as a young man participating in its hallowed scenes, himself a contributor to its blessedness. Take away from the youth the real acquaintance with father and mother at a time, when upon a footing of comparative equality, they meet at the fireside, and substitute for it only the society open to the young man away from home, and is it to be wondered at that unhappy homes, inviting to evil associations and evil practices, abound?" These are plain homely facts, and are worthy the consideration of parents, and just so far as they exert their influence for good so far is the future happiness of their children assured.

Death of Andrew Torr.

Another of our well known and honored citizens has come to the close of a long and busy life among us, and in the death of Andrew Torr we are again reminded that the father's are fast passing away from our sight. Although living a comparative quiet and unpretentious life, he has long been identified with the enterprise and progress of this community. Mr. Torr was born in Lee, N. H., July 20, 1798, and was in his 87th year. He came to this town when a boy, and in the early years of his manhood he learned the tanning business of the late SquiersShove,in the yard back of the Institute. He began tanning on Foster street in a yard put down by himself in 1822. This was the beginning of what is known as the Franklin Osborne tannery at the present time. Afterwards he built the tannery on Foster street near Little's mill, which was at one time a pond, and where he has been actively engaged to within a few years.

Besides the tannery business he bought large quantities of hemlock bark, which was brought to this town and sold to other tanners. He journeyed to New Hampshire and Vermont selecting the bark himself. He was connected in the tanning business at one time with the late Benjamin Wheeler, the latter furnishing the hides and Mr. Torr tanning them. At an early age he married Clara C. Stevens, of New Durham, N. H., who survives him, besides two sons and a daughter—John S., Henry C. and Mrs. Ellen Wingate. Mr. Torr's interest in town affairs was ever manifest, and he was usually to be seen at town meeting and his influence was always on the side of law and justice. At one time he held the position of Selectman and Assessor for the old town of Danvers, and at another was a deputy sheriff taking the place of the late Stephen Upton during a protracted illness. He took great interest in Masonry. He joined Jordan Lodge of Free Masons April 3, 1823, at Danvers, and Washington Royal Arch Chapter of Salem April 9, 1824, and Salem Council of Royal Masters February 7, 1825, and retained his membership in all until his decease. He was tyler of Washington Royal Arch Chapter in 1852. In 1853 he was master of first veil. He was the treasurer of Jordan Lodge for fifteen years, from 1846 to 1861, and was an officer of the lodge from 1826 to 1861. He was a man of sterling integrity, a kind neighbor, and indulgent parent. His funeral will take place from the Orthodox church Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and will be attended by Jordan Lodge F. & A. M. in a body.

THE TRAMP nuisance is again assuming formidable proportions. Last month sixty-four of these pedestrians found lodgings at our police station. During the winter months they find accommodations in police stations and enjoy the grateful warmth of well heated cells. But as the warm weather approaches these flush tourists forsake the haunts of the police stations and find repose in out buildings, and in the fields and cemeteries. In the country and outskirts they are more bold, begging what they can and stealing what they cannot beg. As the feeding of one of these worthless nomads insures repeated visits from his brethren, whom he never fails to acquaint of his good luck, it is better to discourage importunities at the outset and thereby save untold annoyance and loss later. The tramp question is one that will have to be seriously considered before long.

THERE IS nothing perhaps that adds more to the beauty of a town, than shade trees upon its streets and on the grounds of its citizens. In many States this matter is receiving universal attention, and is one that every citizen who owns a piece of land should give a little thought to. The expense incurred need be very slight, and each individual would in the end be compensated a hundred fold for his expense and labor, in the beauty and comfort which such improvements are sure to bring.

EVEN NOW when it is well known that General Grant is convalescent, there is such anxious solicitude concerning him that the first thing looked for in the morning paper is to see how the old hero is getting along. The afflicted man's mistakes are all forgotten for the magnominity of his life indicates, that though he has been subject to the fallibility of humanity and erred, yet his errors have been of the head and not of the heart.

The May number, of the Pathfinder Guide came to hand yesterday. The time tables are carefully revised to date, and include all the recent chanes. The two large colored maps improve with each issue, and are th finest ever engraved; in fact the management fairly improves upon its endeavors and has reached well-nigh the point of perfection. The new number of the Guide also contains a well-executed likeness of the late Lansing Mills.

Guess the backbone of winter must be pretty badly twisted by this time. We are not absolutely positive of it, however, for it may yet come back to us in a manner that will make us hunt the coal pile of the neighbors in a hurry.

Chief Police Peasley makes the following report, for last month. Whole number of arrests 25; drunk 10; assault 4; maintaining a liquor nuisance 3; breaking and entering 2; keeping liquor with intent to sell 2 and one each for disturbing the peace, running a pool table without a license, using profane and indecent language and larceny.

The Telegaam coriespondant complains that last Wednesday night the streets "were very dark and dangerous, yet people had to get along without street lights." We don't know of which part of the town he complains but certainly on Washington street the lamps were lighted. Once was the time, if the almanac said there was a moon, even if it rained in torrents, no lamps were lighted, but the Selectmen straightened that out and we have had no cause to complain.

The following is clipped from the last issue of the Detroit, Minn., Record:—"Mrs. J. A. PARTICULAR NOTICE,

The durability of a good watch is astonishing, and it is probable that most watches would last longer than they do, except for the fact that they fall into the hands of incompetent and inferior workmen for repairs. Many watches are rendered incapable of fine time-keeping by the bad work and bad handling done by poor and careless workmen.

The adjustment to temperature, position or isochronism, often is by a very little ignorant or careless manipulation entirely destroyed and many fine time pieces are thus demoralized.

Any good watch that the owner wishes to preserve should be overhauled and thoroughly cleaned and oiled once a year and a half at farthest. By that time the oil becomes dry and gummy and the parts begin to wear. Watches worn to-day take 16,800 to 18,000 beats per hour and the pivots are as fine as a hair, hence the necessity for the sake of preservation, of keeping them thoroughly cleaned and oiled. It is an acknowledged fact that more watches are spoiled by the tinkers than are ever worn out and these operations should be entrusted to none but good workmen.

The subscriber having spent nineteen years at the watch and jewelry bench, guarantees to turn out from his establishment as good and satisfactory work as anybody, and to make prices as low as is consistent with first class work.

Respectfully,
STARR C. HEWITT,

Practical Watchmaker and Jeweler,

TOWN OF PEABODY.

BOARD OF HEALTH REGULATIONS.

THE Board of Health appointed by the Town hereby make and publish, as required by law,* the following "Regulations for the Public Health and Safety:"—

REGULATION 1ST. It being the duty of the Board of Health, of the Town of Peabody, to make such examination of the premises of persons residing in said town as they shall deem necessary for the public welfare, the Board hereby give notice and require that all premises within said limits shall be ready for inspection by the Board on and after May 15th, 1885.

REGULATION 2D. No house offal, filthly water, dead animals or refuse of any kind, shall be thrown upon the streets by any resident; and no butcher, fishmonger, or vender of merchandise, shall leave any refuse upon the streets of this town.

REGULATION 3D. If, upon inspection, any rubbish, offal, decaying animal or vegetable matter, or filth of any kind be found in, under or about any building, within any yard or enclosure, upon any premises, or in the ponds or water courses of said Town of Peabody, or if any privy or drain be found so discharging as to prove a nuisance, and offensive or deleterious to the public health, the owner or occupant of such property or premises shall be notified by the Board to remove or abate such nuisance within 24 hours after said notice has been served.

REGULATION 4TH. If any owner or occupant of property as aforesaid, after having been duly notified, shall neglect to comply with the requirements of the above section, the Board of Health shall cause any and all nuisances to be removed or abated at the expense of the owner or occupants.

REGULATION 5TH. No hogs or goats shall be kept within the limits of this town, except in pastures, or in enclosures kept free from standing water, and regularly and freely disinfected.

REGULATION 6TH. It shall be the duty of occupants of dwellings in which any person or persons may be sick with small pox,* diphtheria or scarlet fever, and Physicians attending such cases of small pox, forthwith to notify the Board of Health of the fact.

REGULATION 7TH. The occupants of buildings or dwellings where small pox exists, or has existed, shall prohibit and prevent the removal of clothes, bedding and upholstering, or other articles from the infected buildings or dwellings, except the removal is made by permission, or under direction of the Board of Health.

REGULATION 8TH. The occupants of buildings or dwellings where Scarlet Fever and Diphtheria exist shall withdraw all children attending school from the same; and the teachers of said schools shall not allow children thus withdrawn to re-enter the school until they shall present a certificate from the attending Physician vouching for the safety thereof.

REGULATION 9TH. Night soilcarts shall not be allowed to pass through the streets in the thickly settled portions of the town between sunrise and sunset, from May 1st to Nov 1st, without a special permit from the Board of Health.

These Regulations will be Strictly Enforced.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

It is with feelings of deep sorrow we record the death of Susan L., wife of Horace Bushby and daughter of Andrew W. Gray, who died last Monday, after a very brief illness of typhoid pneumonia, at the age of 38 years, 4 months, and 9 days. Mrs. Bushby was one whose life has been spent in this town, and from a child she possessed those qualities of amiability and candor, that as she developed into womanhood made for her many and dear friends, and they will ever cherish her memory. While her life has not been eventful, it was filled daily with attention to duty and a more than common devotion to her home. Her greatest pleasure seemed to be in her home life, where she was ever watchful of the comforts and enjoyments of her husband and children. She was ever active in the social gatherings at the Unitarian church, of which she was a member, and always took an interest in all movements for the promotion of charity and benevolence in our town. Though in the morning of life she has done with the things of life and He, in his divine wisdom, has seen fit to take her from us in the prime of life and usefulness, and her place will be vacant, it will be a consolidation to the bereaved husband and children, the father and mother, left in sorrow, and the brothers and sister, whose grief is shared by all, that she died possessed of those virtues which will make her life an example which will ever be remembered by the whole community.

Yesterday afternoon a man named Augustus Garnier, employed as a splitter at Franklin Osborne & Co., was taken with a fit at the shop and removed to the boarding house of Mr. J. E. Osborn, and Dr. Pike was called and attended him. He seemed better, but shortly after the doctor left he had another attack and died immediately. He was a man about 40 years of age, and was in the habit of drinking heavily at times. The remains were removed to the home of his sister, Mrs. William H. Gordon, on Aborn street, Salem. Another sister, from Providence, was here this forenoon and he will probably be removed to that city for burial. He received a dispatch yesterday asking him to hasten to the bedside of his mother who was not expected to live. At one time Garner carried a large life insurance.

When the census taker calls and asks you questions about as follows, answer him correctly and help him along to the next house all the quicker. House number; number in family; surname; christian name and initial; residence; town or city; county; relation to head of family; color and race; age; conjugal condition; place of birth; place of birth of father; place of birth of mother; occupation; months unemployed in above occupation; months employed in all kinds of work; read; write; attended school twenty weeks during census year; physical condition; ratable poll; legal voter; naturalized voter; alien. The only difference in the above and the one for females is the omission of the last four questions and substitution of the following; mother of how many children; number of these children now living.

Scarcely had the bridges on Central and Wallis streets been repaired, when a large hole was discovered in the one crossing Main street at Pooles' Hollow. This latter was stopped up, it will probably have to be relaid the coming summer. It is said that the cause of the breaking in at Central and Main street drains is rats, who have made their home about the drains during the winter and undermined a portion of it. At the Wallis street bridge one of the piers had settled, caused by the water flowing over an obstruction, making a dam, and when it fell washed out a place four or five feet deep which undermined the pier.

Messrs. Hallowell & Smiley of 16 Caller street, have given us a package of their creamery buttered flour. The flour comes all prepared and all that is required of the lady of the house is to mix a little water with it, roll out her biscuit and put them in the oven, and she will have some of the nicest bread she ever made. With every package, there are receipts for making different kinds of cake, besides biscuit, muffins, etc. Try a package. Hallowell & Smiley are sole agents for this town.

The time is not far distant when electricity will take the lead. It will light our streets, warm our houses and gardens and keep us comfortable during the long winter evenings. The latest thing is electric butter, and turning clay into iron and hatching chickens by a similar process. What we want now, is the Frenchman to apply it to his manufactured eggs in order that the power of germination may be added to them.

Geo. O. Clifford has been awarded a patent on a plane.

The old weather vane on the barn of Henry C. Wilson, Central street, was blown down during the heavy gale of last Wednesday. This vane had been on the barn for 47 years, and when it was put up was measured and found that its length tallied with the exact height of Warren Bushby, then a little boy living at the old Bushby homestead, but now a resident of Lynn. The vane will be preserved as an old landmark.

With the advent of spring the editor of the Georgetown Advocate goes hunting for Indian relics, and his readers are inflected with a couple of columns a week on what he knows about arrow heads, broken tommy hawks, etc. If he should only follow up the Indian war now going on between the Naumkeag and Wilmot's clothing store, he would get all the broken spears and implements he wants.

Eighteen bids for building the new school house in parts, and in full were received last night by the Committee, but no decision was reached. The contract, it is said, will be given out to-day. There seems to be an impression that the work will be given to Mr. Folsom, and Mr. Blaney the painter. We trust there will be nothing done to occasion the talk that was made the time our pumping station was built.

Last Saturday afternoon the Selectmen looked over the proposed changes in the location of the horse railroad track on the Square. Some were in favor of having the track straight, from the hill in front of the bank building, running in close to Upton's building; and others wanted the track next the soldier's monument. A hearing will be given at the Town House, Saturday, at 4 P. M.

H. P. Whipple, who has been in the employ of Pike & Whipple, for the past ten years, has opened a shop on Central street, opposite the Town scales, where he will give particular attention to light and heavy carriage repairing. Having had a large experience in this work, and by promptness, good work and reasonable prices, we trust he will have a share of your patronage.

The Universalist Society held a pink supper at their vestry last Friday evening, and was very well attended, about 100 being present. The tables were laid with pink service, pink cakes, lobster salad well pinked, pink cabbage and pink radishes and a pink bouquet at each plate. After the supper an entertainment was given by the Murray Association, which was well received.

As Eben U. King, of this town, was driving through Federal street, Salem, last Monday morning, he lost control of his horse and his buggy collided with the carriage of W. B. Richardson, also of Peabody. Mr. King was thrown out, striking on his face, and receiving severe cuts. He was attended by Dr. Samuel Worcester, of Salem, and then conveyed to his home.

Rev. W. Spaulding has sold a large lot of land in West Peabody, at $1. 25 per acre, to Contractor Ross, who will fill North River in Salem, for the gravel, and gave him the privilege of going as deep as he pleases. It is expected that work will be commenced the last part of this week by the Boston and Lowell road, to lay tracks to the pit.

An addition is going to be built to the large currying shop of L. & G. H. Poor's on Wallis street, beginning from the end next to A. A. Messer's 50x20. They will put in a 100 horse power boiler 6 feet in diameter containing 100 three and one-half inch 14 feet tubes and a 35 horse engine. They will put in a new whitening machine and a Fitzhenry scouring machine.

Mr. George Pratt is building a large sled similar to the toboggans used at the ice carnival at Montreal. He will make one for the Willows and one for the Point of Pines. It consists of a tower thirty feet high from which is a gradual slope to the ground, making a slide of 200 feet. It is quite a novelty and many people have been to see it.

At a meeting of the Unitarian parish last Monday evening, Nathaniel Symonds, S. Augustus Southwick and Frank W. Stanley were elected a standing committee. The latter in place of Mr. A. B. Merrill, who declined after a service of 18 years on the committee. Nathaniel Symonds was elected Treasurer and Collector and George M. Foster, Clerk.

A private letter from Rev. Mr. Chipman, formerly pastor of the Baptist Church, was received last Monday in which he says; we return north next week, Mrs. Chipman for several weeks has not been as well, and we hasten our return to put her under better medical care." She will go to her mother's in RhodeIsland.

Last Thursday the house owned and occupied by a man named Kimball, was removed, with furniture inside, from Aborn street to a lot on Endicott street, near Lowell street. Three yoke of cattle and two pairs of horses furnished the motive power. It broke the telephone wires across Lowell street.

The Valley Visitor speaks of the incarceration of Leonard Choate, who was sentenced to States prison sixteen years ago for life, for arson. The Judge who sentenced him is dead, and his counsel—A. A. Abbott and S. B. Ives, whom he would not let put in a plea of insanity, are also dead. Such is life.

A farmer's wagon loaded with potatoes and apples was being driven along Washington street last Saturday, and when near the glue works the wheels caught in the horse car track and the shock caused two of the wheels to collapse, letting the load and the driver to the ground, but doing no further damage.

There are now building in the New York & New England railroad shops 25 ventilated cars of an improved and excellent pattern. They will be ready to be put out within a few days, and will be used for the carriage of fruit, bananas, etc., between New York and Boston, during the warm season.

The report of the engineer of the pumping station for April is as follows: whole number of gallons pumped, 18,274,310; gallons per day 609,143; pounds of coal used, 45,171; pounds per day 1505; gallons of water pumped per pound of coal 404 1-2; running time per day 7 hours 27 minutes.

Boys with baskets of bananas and oranges, were going from house to house last Saturday afternoon trying to sell the fruit, and stating that they were selling for Mr. Geo. Stevens. Mr. S. does not send out peddlers or hawkers from his store, and any peddler claiming to sell for him is a fraud.

Mr. J. M. Ward has sent us some of the handsomest pansies we ever saw. Now is the time to plant them, all of our readers wishing to do so should go to Ward's Greenhouses, he has the finest assortment at the lowest prices. He has some blossoms that measure three inches across. See adv.

The Peabody High School Nine went to Beverly yesterday to play the High School base ball club of that town, but as the Beverlys did not put in an appearance till four o'clock, an hour behind time, the game was forfeited to the Peabodys. The home club are playing the Salems this afternoon.

A couple of young fellows entered the basement of Mr. John A. Enos house on Highland Park, and attempted to go up stairs, but that set his patent electric burglar alarm in operation and the attention of the neighbors was drawn to the spot, but the would-be burglars escaped.

The new Essex County Democratic club begins by passing the salutary resolution that any member detected in selling out the party in Essex County shall be expelled. This is a funny commentary on the probable degree of loyalty among the brethren.—Boston Evening Record.

At the meeting of the Mechanic Light Infantry held Friday evening, Lieutenant John B. Colgan was elected to the captaincy in place of James B. Leonard discharged. 2d lieut. Edw. A. Rogers was elected 1st. lieut., but declined, and Daniel Casey, a past-captain, was elected.

The Atlantic Base Ball club have elected the following officers: President, William Tracy; Vice President, Thomas Nagle; Secretary, Patrick Mahoney; Collector, William Beer; Treasurer, Charles Lynch; Directors, Thomas Welch, James McPoland, Dennis Murphy.

The present fashionable feminine hat, trimmed with huge bunches of flowers massed at the front, and towering aloft to an untold height, is calculated to make lovely woman look as fierce and imposing as a drum major, when she goes out on dress parade this spring.

Many-sided—the Salem Gazette's remarks in its Friday's paper on the extension of the Naumkeag Street Railway to the Cove. None of its subscribers among our summer residents, or the "common, plain people," can find fault with them.—Beverly Citizen.

Probably the busiest place in town for trade just now, is at Goulding's. His help and team are doing a lively business, and still unable to keep up with orders. Goulding has been in trade here long enough to be well known for fair and square dealings.

The State Agricultural Report say that the apple crop this year of New England shipped to England, counted 747,000 barrels and $1,000,000 was received. The foreign demand is increasing and remunerative prices can always be counted on.

We gave the use of our bulletin board last Monday to the agent for Marsh's "Good Will Soap," and while he was doing the pasting a trained dog mounted the horse's back and maintained his position there even after they drove away.

A large pine tree blew down across the Lynn Common tent at Asbury Grove on Wednesday, crushing one end of it. Several others blew down but fortunately did no injury.

CATARRH.

BY A. P. LIGHTHILL, M. D.

The earliest symptoms of Catarrh is a discharge from the head, consisting sometimes of a clear acid fluid, but oftener of a thick, fœtid, purulent yellow or greenish matter, which is usually secreted in excessive abundance, and discharged through the nostrils or throat, and frequently by both channels.

The nature of this discharge varies in different cases, and even in the same individual at different times. In some it is copious, and of a loose or fluid character, while in others it is very viscid or gummy, adhering to the diseased membrane with glue-like tenacity; often this offensive matter concretes in dry, hard masses of crusts, which obstruct breathing, and are very difficult to detach, their dislodgment requiring most violent efforts. Sometimes these incrustations come away in lumps of a deep green tint, but occasionally in broad and flat casts of a notable size, on which traces of blood may at times be observed. This condition is very liable to run to serious ulceration, involving a loss of the bony structure of the nose and a subsequent flattening of that organ, and is invariably accompanied by a breath of exceedingly fœtid and sickening odor. In some cases it becomes so revoltingly offensive as to render the sufferer an object of disgust to himself as well as to others.

The nasal membrane is thickened and congested, causing the nose to be stopped up, sometimes on one side, sometimes on the other, and often on both, giving rise to a disagreeable, stuffy sensation in the head, and occasionally to violent paroxysms of sneezing.

A feeling of fullness, heat, irritation, soreness or pain is generally experienced in the nostrils, near the root of the nose, as well as in the upper part of the throat, above and below the soft palate. A distressing sensation of heavy weight or compression is usually complained of over the forehead, especially in the region immediately above and between the eyes. Sometimes the pain is obstinately fixed in one particular part, as in the temples, on top of the head, at the back of the neck, or behind the orbits; and occasionally it manifests itself in the face, of so severe a character that it is frequently mistaken for neuralgia.

The voice is generally affected, and becomes hoarse, weak and uneven, assuming a nasal character, or an unpleasant sniffling quality. Cough of variable severity is not unfrequently one of the symptoms and results of Catarrh.

The sense of smell is generally blunted or entirely lost, and a similar effect on taste may be occasionally observed. The eyes are apt to become irritable, and disposed to water excessively on exposure to the cold or wind, and a sense of weariness of sight is usually experienced after slight exertions. Hearing becomes frequently more or less impaired, and noises in the head very often add materially to the existing distress.

The stomach generally suffers more or less, and becomes weak and irritable; the appetite is capricious, and nearly always bad in the morning.

The patient often complains of lassitude and fatigue, an incapacity for either physical or mental exertions, and a constant disposition to drowsiness and sleep. The mental faculties are also sometimes slightly affected, loss of memory being not unfrequently experienced.

Catarrh may prove fatal, either by debilitating the system and wearing out the patient, or by travelling downward and producing consumption. This fact has been so repeatedly noticed that all experienced practitioners now look upon Catarrh as one of the earliest manifestations of this dreaded complaint. Among educated physicians in this or any other country, Dr. Lighthill was the first to devote his study and investigation to the cure of Catarrh and kindred diseases, and the happy results which attended his labor have been attested to by many of the most prominent citizens of Boston and vicinity. Cases abandoned as hopeless by other physicians have promptly yielded to his painless and effective treatment.

ASTHMA

For years Dr. Lighthill has made this distressing disease his special study, investigating carefully the causes that produce it; his labor was fully rewarded, for he not only established its true pathological condition, but also discovered a new and correct system of treatment for its cure. Hundreds of cases who have been under his care have found permanent relief from this wonderful discovery, from the beginning of this treatment prompt benefit is experienced which is ultimately followed by a complete and radical cure.

An experience of 30 years of constant practice enables Dr. Lighthill to decide on the first examination as to the cureability of any disease within specialty, and no case will be accepted for treatment unless the chances are for favorable results. His specialty comprises the cure of and affections of the Nervous system from whatever cause.

Secures patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Copies of the claims of any patents furnished by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded at Washington. No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions. R. H. EDDY, Solicitor of patents.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse."

CHAS. MASON, Commissioner of Patents.

"Inventors cannot employ a person more trustworthy or more capable of securing for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office."

EDMUND BURKE, late Com. of Patents.

BOSTON, Oct. 19, 1870.

R. H. EDDY, Esq.—Dear Sir: you procured for me, in 1870, my first patent. Since then you have acted for and advised me in hundreds of cases, and procured many patents, re-issues and extensions. I have occasionally employed the best agencies in New York, Philadelphia and Washington, but I still give you almost the whole of my business, in your line, and advise others to employ you.

Yours truly, GEORGE DRAPER.

THE HENRY BILL PUB. CO.,

dec—17 6t Norwich, Conn.

THIN SKINNED.—Fat men are notoriously sensitive, but I question if the bald-headed man is not even more thin skinned. The fat man will for weeks condemn himself to the most rigid diet, and take the most violent exercise to reduce his weight. The bald-headed man will annoint his scalp with every nostrum in the market, in the hope of raising a fresh crop. A friend of mine, a young and good-looking fellow, has a head bare as a billiard ball. Recently he detected on the pate of an acquaintance, similarly afflicted, a light fuzz.

"Hello, old man," he cried, "how did you do it? Sure I see signs of a second crop."

Suspicious, as all bald-headed men are, of chaff, the friend replied curtly:

"Gin and onions. Slice two onions, steep 'em in gin and apply three times a day."

When a few hours later, the party of the first part strolled into the club for lunch, the waiter who leaned over him to take his order, started back and held his breath.

"Whew! Joe, what a breath you have," said his neighbor. "Confound it, man, do you munch raw onions in the middle of the day?"

"'Tisn't my breath; 'tis my hair," he replied, indignantly. "'Tis a wash, a restorative I use."

Now, to this very day the victim of this cold blooded hoax innocently baptizes his suffering scalp morning, noon and night, with gin and onions, and watches anxiously for the coming of the fuzz.—San Francisco Post.

THE BATTLE OF GETTYSBURG.—When visiting Boston do not fail to take an hour or more and witness the magnificent Cyclorama painting by the celebrated French artist Paul Phillippoteaux. Major S. B. Bancroft, standing as it were in the centre of the battlefield, gives a vivid description of the events of the afternoon of July 3, 1863, and the visitors seem to be in the midst of the fight and carried away with the excitement of the occasion. Don't forget also to take a good look at the colossal painting by the same artist entitled, The Uprising of the North, shown in an alcove as you wend your way out of the building.

The telephone has come to be an almost indispensible requisite of the counting-room of the active man of business; its great convenience and utility in trade intercourse is fully recognized wherever it is established. This fact has led the great corporation that controls it to exact a heavy tribute from the business world for its use; and as the monopoly grows in wealth and power, these exactions correspondingly increase. The American Bell Telephone Company, which has been allowed by the Legislature to several times "water its stock" against the direct interests of the people who created it, now comes forward with a petition to increase its already water-soaked and bloated capital to thirty millions of dollars. There should be a prompt and unanimous protest of the business men of the State against such an outrage. Furthermore the telephone rates should be regulated by statute, as prayed for by Ex-Governors Talbot, Butler and others; and we hope the members of the present legislature will have sufficient moral stamina to enact a bill for such regulation and reduction, and thus teach this greedy corporation that it is the servant and not the master of the people.—Valley Visitor.

HE TOOK THE WRONG SEAT.—At one of the theatres the other evening a man who had a seat between his wife and daughter left it at the close of an act for a trip down stairs. When he returned he found a seat two rows back between two women and dropped into it with the remark:

"As I was saying when I went out, it's none of your pudding what other women wear. Because some one else makes a fool of herself by wearing cotton stockings in the winter it doesn't follow that you must do the same."

"Sir!" came from both sides of him at once, and the way he vacated that seat made the soles of his boots red hot.—Detroit Free Press.

Mr. E. R. Hoyt, a mechanical engineer at the New Orleans Exposition, was severely injured by a huge derrick pole falling on his foot. He was conveyed to his residence, and after only three applications of St. Jacobs Oil, all the swelling and pain disappeared, and he resumed his duties.

A man rarely appreciates that he is no longer a gay young bachelor until his wife tells him that it is no use his talking about having a new spring suit until baby has got its twenty-five dollar perambulator.—Fall River Advance.

WHAT YOU WANT TO KNOW.—Everybody wants an honest answer to this simple question:—What is the best medicine to regulate the bowels, cure costiveness and biliousness, help the digestion and give strength to the whole system? People ask us this every day. We answer, Parker's Tonic. It is pleasant to the taste. All the children like it. Mothers all praise it. It will save a thousand times its cost in every family.—Editor Western Argus.

MAYO'S

Compound Vegetable Anæsthetic.

A safe and pleasant substitute for gas and ether.

Discovered by Dr. N. K. Mayo of Boston, April 1883, subsequently administered by him in nearly two thousand cases, producing perfect slumber, being applicable to the child, the delicate sentitive woman as well as the hardy man. No ill effects have followed its use in any case, it acting rather as a vegetable tonic.

It controls the patient one-fourth longer than gas giving us time to remove from three to twenty teeth. It is with great confidence we have introduced it into our practice, giving very successful results.

HUDSON RIVER R. R.

CONDUCTOR MELIUS SAYS SOMETHING OF INTEREST TO ALL TRAVELLERS.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Feb. 22, 1884.

Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.:

Dear Sir: I have used your medicine, called DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, for Indigestion and Dizziness, to which I was subject at times, and know from experience that it is worthy of all that can be said of it for disorders of that kind. Respectfully, W. S. MELIUS,
69 Harrison Street.

That DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY is extensively used along the line of the Hudson River Railroad, is shown by the following from Tarrytown. The writer is none other than Mr. DeRevere, the Station Agent of the Hudson River Railroad Company at Tarrytown, a man well known in that community.

Tarrytown, N. Y., Feb. 22d, 1884.

Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.:

Dear Sir:—For a long time I was troubled with severe attacks of Dizziness and Blind Sick Headaches. I thought it was due to impure blood and a disordered state of the system. I was advised to try FAVORITE REMEDY. I did so, and have been completely cured. It's the best thing I ever heard of for any disorder of that nature, and I've recommended it to many with like success.

A. DEREVERE.

DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY is not confined in its sphere of usefulness to one state or locality, but is hailed as a boon by hundreds in every state, as the following letter from Millville, N. J., will show:

Millville, N. J.

Dr David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.:

Dear Sir:—I had been a sufferer from Dyspepsia from the time I was sixteen years old. I had consulted various physicians, but could find no relief; therefore had almost given up in despair of ever recovering my health, when DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY was recommended, which I tried and have been cured. It's the best medicine I ever knew of, and worthy of the greatest confidence.

MRS. S. C. DOUGHERTY.

MALARIA!

As an anti-malarial medicine

DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S

FAVORITE REMEDY

has won golden opinions. No traveler should consider his outfit complete unless it includes a bottle of this medicine. If you are exposed to frequent changes of climate, food and water, Favorite Remedy should always be within your reach. It expels malarial poisons, and is the best preventative of chills and malarial fever in the world. It is especially offered as a trustworthy specific for the cure of Kidney and Liver complaints, Constipation and all disorders arising from an impure state of the blood. To women who suffer from any of the ills peculiar to their sex Favorite Remedy is constantly proving itself an unfailing friend—a real blessing. Address the proprietor, Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y. $1 bottle, 6 for $5. by all druggists.

Book Notices.

For special reasons, in the May Century, more space than usual is devotedto the War Series, and sixteen pages are added to the regular number, 160, in order that other subjects of public importance should not be slighted. Of superior interest is General Adam Badeau's anecdotal paper on "General Grant" as a soldier. The frontispiece of the number is a striking portrait of General McClellan, engraved from a photograph taken especially for this purpose. General McClellan contributes a graphic account of "The Peninsula Campaign." Of peculiar interest is General Joseph E. Johnston's "Manassas to Seven Pines," which is a reply to Jefferson Davis's criticisms in "The Rise and Fall of the Southern Confederacy" on his military operations in Virginia. Gen. Imboden relates fresh anecdotes of Gen. Stonewall Jackson and other prominent actors in the battle; and, in conclusion, he throws new light on the Confederate failure to pursue the Federal army to Washington. The fourth chapter of "Recollections of a Private" describes the movement which saved the Union army from total defeat at Seven Pines. The war papers are illustrated with careful maps, pictures of incidents and of places, and numerous portraits, including a full page double portrait of Generals Lee and Johnston, from a photograph taken after the war. In "Open Letters" an account is given, by John Leyburn, of "An Interview with General Robert E. Lee," in which the latter discussed war questions, and expressed satisfaction over the abolition of slavery. Lieutenant-Commander C. F. Goodrich, in the same department of the magazine, discusses the question of "Our National Defenses." The rescue of "Greely at Cape Sabine" is the subject of a noteworthy paper by Ensign Charles H. Harlow.

Magazine of American History.—The rare ability with which this unique publication has been conducted into the front rank among the great monthlies of the world is a source of pride and pleasure to all classes of intelligent readers. The contributions to the May number are not only varied, scholarly and valuable, but of a widely popular character. The opening article will be read with intense interest by every American capable of appreciating the importance of the achievements of "Commodore Mathew Calbraith Perry" of whom William Elliot Griffis writes with a skilled pen; the second article, "The Heart of Louisiana," is a graphic historical sketch of the Place d' Armies, now Jackson Square, in New Orleans, by Charles Dimitry. Both of these notable papers are handsomely illustrated. "The Fallacy of 1776" is an earnest and comprehensive discussion of the real origin of our late civil war, by A. W. Clason. "The Ancient Races of America," by G. P. Thurston, of Nashville, Tennessee; "The Hungry Pilgrims," by E. H. Goss; "The Sackville Papers," by Prof. Channing, of Harvard College; and "Pocahontas and Captain Smith," by Charles Deane, L. L. D., Vice-President of the Massachusetts Historical Society' are all excellent as well as readable. But the contribution that will probably attract the most immediate attention is that of General Roger Enos.

The Art Amateur for May contains a charming colored plate—the portrait of a beautiful boy in picturesque costume with a decorative floral border by Dora Wheeler. Attractive designs are also given for a dessert plate, a panel of carved wood, a a brass plaque and a variety of other decorative work. An illustrated notice of the principal American pictures to be shown at the coming Paris Salon is of special interest. The National Academy Exhibition is reviewed and drawings of the clever pictures exhibited by Leon and Percy Moran from the frontispiece. Two series of practical articles, one on "Amateur Photography" and another on "Scene Painting for Amateurs," are begun. There is a suggestive illustrated article on "The Use of Stained Glass," and the book reviews and answers to correspondents are especially full and valuable. The wide circulation of this excellent magazine will doubtless be handsomely increased by the publisher's liberal prize offer for 1885 of ten dollars' worth of books and periodicals of their own selection to be given to all persons sending in clubs of ten. A specimen copy of the Art Amateur will be sent to any address for 25 cents; regular price 35 cents; per annum, $4. Montague Marks, Publisher, 23 Union square, New York.

The enterprising publishers of Dr. Foote's Health Monthly have by the liberality of their premium offers, outdone all their previous generosity. The list to select from includes useful articles, standard books and scientific literature, such as one usually expects to pay well for, but here they are thrown in with a year's subscription to the most popular and widely greeted Health Monthly at only fifty cents a year. Try it before you buy it by sending for a free sample copy and illustrated premium list to the Murray Hill Publishing Co., 129 E 28th St., N. Y. City.

DESTROY THAT SIGN.—One may feel that he's getting old, but he naturally dislikes that anything about his appearance should advise others of the fact. Yet nothing does this so effectually as thin and falling hair. No woman wants to marry a man, and business firms hesitate to employ a man who shows this fatal sign. Parker's Hair Balsam is worth to you, in this regard, more than its weight in diamonds. Use it, and have plentiful and glossy hair. Many have had every trace of grayness removed and bald spots covered by using a single bottle.

Steamer, No. 2—Foreman, J. A. P. Sumner; 1st Assistant Foreman, J. F. Moreland; 2d Assistant Foreman, Chas. W. Childs; Clerk and Treasurer, John B. Reith; Steward, Frank G. Clough; Standing Committee, J. A. P. Sumner, George F. Currier, John A. Perkins; Director Relief Association, M. W. Cummings.

Hook and Ladder, No. 1—Foreman, Joseph H. Miller; Assistant Foreman, Horace A. Southwick; Clerk and Treasurer, Walter P. Hills; Steward, William H. Jolls; Standing Committee, J. H. Miller, H. A. Southwick, William S. Lord; Director Relief Association, J. H. Miller.

Hose, No. 1—Foreman, Fred B. Thomas; Assistant Foreman, Ezra H. Shannon; Clerk and Treasurer, William F. Gunn; Standing Committee, Fred C. Blake. W. B. Flannagan, William Brown.

Hose, No. 2—Foreman, Frank G. Farrington; Assistant Foreman, John W. Smith; Clerk and Treasurer, William L. Ward; Steward, Charles F. Farrington; Standing Committee, F. G. Farrington, John W. Smith, W. L. Ward, John Humphrey, Chas. Forness.

Hose Company, No. 3, organized Wednesday evening, with the choice of Charles H. Hooper as Foreman; F. E. Berry as Assistant Foreman; Arthur P. Bodge, Clerk and Treasurer; George O. Morse, Steward. Standing Committee, J. F. Barrett, George O. Morse, C. H. Hooper, F. E. Berry and A. P. Bodge. Charles H. Hooper a Director of the Relief Association.

Hose, No. 4—Foreman, John H. Moreland; Assistant Foreman, Charles Halpin; Clerk and Treasurer, T. F. Hutchinson; Steward, John H. Moreland, 2d.

Hose, No. 5—Foreman, Walter Curtis; Assistant Foreman, Cornelius Murphy; Clerk and Treasurer, offices filled by Foreman; Steward, Edward T. Jones; Standing Committee, Walter Curtis, Lewis K. Putnam, A. T. Parker.

Monday evening Hose 1 wasout on the square, trying the Lowery hydrant. One line was run up Central street and water let on. The same evening H. & L. 1 went to the back of the town house, and put up the Bangor ladder, which was found to be about twenty feet short of reaching the coving. The ladder was put up in several ways. Should a fire get a going in the roof of the Town house, the building would have to burn down, below the coving, before the fire could be reached from the outside, and it would be almost impossible for men to fight fire from the inside. The town should own an eighty-five foot Bangor ladder or else should put fire escapes up to the roof. The present Bangor ladder is 55 feet long and is as large as could be conveniently carried on the truck, but a larger one should be kept at the engine house in case of an emergency. There are other buildings in town where a longer ladder would be required.

Meeting of the Relief association next Monday evening, probably at the Town Hall, for the election of officers for the ensuing year, at 7 30 o'clock.

The Board of Engineers will hold a meeting this evening.

Tuesday morning Steamer 2 was taken to the brook on Endicott street and worked, with two lines of hose, for the purpose of giving Janitor Smart an insight into the running of the machine. The engine worked well and Charlie did tip top in his first trial.

There is some talk of districting the town and placing a steam whistle in each district for fire purposes only.

"Old Charlie," the hose horse, and one of the black span are being worked together and the remaining black horse is being broken in as a hose horse.

George H. Carr was elected the Director of the Relief association from Steamer 1 and George O. Peirce from Hose 2, at the meeting Monday evening.

Some person has been driving horse shoe nails into the space between the spindle and top of some of the hydrants. One of the town officials found the hydrant at the corner of Washington and Sewall streets, fixed in that way Monday afternoon, and it required several minutes of hard work to extract the work. Had the spindle been turned to open the gate, it would have been found to cause a great delay, or else disable the hydrant for service. Whether it was the mischief of boys, or of older persons, the one who did it should be punished to the full extent.

One evening last week about six o'clock, a party set fire to a bundle of hay at the back of the old barn, corner of Endicott and Lowell streets, and but for the timely discovery and prompt action of S. F. Blaney the building would have been set on fire.

Janitor Smart has been very busy for the past few days in collecting ten cents a piece from every member of the department in the brick house for the purpose of purchasing a clock to place over the stable doors in the engine room, and has succeeded in raising nearly enough for the purpose.

The next improvement to come to the notice of the Engineers, should be swing harnesses for the double teams at the engine house.

Ex-Engineers Littlefield, Folsom and Lord have been elected honorary members of Steamer 2, H. & L. 1, and Hose 3.

George Stevens treated the firemen of the brick house with his new five cent cigars "Three Ones and a Two," at the annual election of officers.

Janitor Smart has got his new clock in position. It is a beauty and was put up by Starr C. Hewitt.

Walter Curtis has been elected Director of the Relief Association for Hose 5.

Engineer Tibbetts has been granted a license for his dining saloon, 53 Washington street, Salem.

J. B. Thomas and William Doughty were elected members of Hose 1, at their meeting Monday night, subject to the approval of the Board of Engineers. Harry G. Robbins was elected to Steamer 2, in place of W. C. Munroe, resigned.

Assessments to the Relief Association are now due and should be paid in promptly. We hope to see every member of the department enrolled on the Association's books this year. The cost is trifling compared to the benefit received in case of accident or sickness received while engaged in fire service, and every member of the department is liable to both at any time he responds to an alarm. The Association has a good working fund would like to see it increased, by any donations which the citizens of the town might see fit to make. Five injured members have drawn on the fund the past year.

The Board of Engineers will probably appoint the engineers of steamers and the janitor of the Central station, at their meeting this evening.

Engineer Reed is looking around to see what he can do in the way of a hose wagon or carriage for No. 5. He visited Lynn and Boston, Monday, and saw the hose wagons in those cities. Z

Friday, May 8th, the Naumkeag Clothing Co. will inaugurate their 7th Great Annual Spring and Summer Sale of Fine and Medium Clothing for Men's, Boys' and Children's wear. They have just completed the alterations of their establishment and have now one of the largest, finest and best lighted store east of Boston. When they first commenced business in Salem, Sept. 14, 1878, they occupied but a little over 2000 square feet, but owing to the rapid increase of trade they were obliged to enlarge their salesroom in 1879, and, in the spring of 1881, were compelled to again increase their establishment by taking in the next store, in order to meet the demand of their trade. One past year's business proved that even that was insufficient, and have been obliged to enlarge for the third time, giving them now nearly 3000 square feet, being one of the largest retail Clothing Salesroom in the State. They guarantee the quality of every article as absolutely as the price, thus defending the purchaser against the possibility of even unconscious imposition.

The orange tree that was on exhibition in the window of Gould & Stockwell was brought from the Sandwich Islands over forty years ago, and it is thought to be over fifty years old, and belongs to Mrs. Albert Gould. The tree is about two feet high, is full of blossoms and buds, with fifteen ripe oranges and numerous green ones.

The cows are being driven to the "town pasture."

SKATING RINK NOTES.

We were unfortunate in not being able to see the polo game at the rink last Friday, between the Peabody and Salem police, but we will give an account of it as near as we can, from what we heard one of the officers who took part tell a friend. The chief called us together and assigned us our positions. Jack Sweeney and myself were the only volunteers, and after coaxing and threatening, he succeeded in mustering in five, although Capt. Barnaby was barred out on account of his age. The positions were finely arranged as follows:

Peabodys.	Positions.	Salems.
M. H. Grady,	1st Rush.	Ambercrombie
Touret,	2d Rush.	B. N. Pollock
J. Ruth,	Goal.	M. Hagan
J. J. Sweeney,	Cover Goal.	Legrand
O. Ferrin,	Cover Point.	McCue
B. F. Goodwin,	Half Back.	D. Peterson

We were obliged to play a Salem officer because no Peabody man would dare to risk his life. Most of the officers had their stockings filled with old paper and curled hair, not so much to protect themselves, as to show a decent sized calf to their legs. When we skated to our places the "kids" broke Grady up by singing "New dude in town," and he felt for his billy but only found a polo stick. However, Grady took the first rush and started the ball toward the Salems goal, but the Salems had too much brawn and muscle for us and Legrand caged it for the Salems in two minutes. The second rush was secured by Ambercrombie, who started the ball toward the Peabodys goal and was so sure it was going in that he started in after it and was fouled for going inside the circle. Grady had a foul called on him. While he was trying to turn one of his feet without taking it up in his hands to do so, the referee thought he kicked the ball. The ball then came near me, and having had more experience and my nerves well under control, I should have made one of the best plays of the game if I hadn't fell. I think that cardiff giant Sweeney run into me. Grady got the jolly joker into position and secured the goal in 6 minutes and 45 seconds. The third rush was captured by Ambercrombie, Grady having discovered a mirror, was looking in it to see if his wife would know him when he got home. This rush was followed with a grand spurt and we all rushed from one side to another in a tussle and tumble; among the latter was

Special Officer Ferrin at the rink,
Who took a tumble before he could think;
In his beautiful eyes
Was a look of surprise,
And he asked us all out to drink—soda.

Ruth had never seen a game of polo before and thought he must kick the ball into his own goal in order to win, and watching his chance kicked it in. This gave the goal to the Salems in 2 minutes and 35 seconds. The Chief had seen Grady and promised to suspend him on half pay for a week if he didn't secure the next goal. And the thought that he couldn't wear his pretty uniform for a week brought out large drops of perspiration on his manly brow and he struck in and secured the fourth rush, and after Touret had struck the ball once, the only play I believe he made during the game, the Salems captured the goal in 2 minutes and 30 seconds. Of course I don't want to say much about it, because it might reach the ears of the Chief, but if they all possessed my coolness and nerve, we would have won three straight goals. The club lacks an experienced leader, and will be a failure until one of the specials is put in charge. After the game, the Salems were presented with the medals which were of leather, with the words "Champions, 1885, Salem Police Polo Team." After this game there was another which was won by the Salems three to two. Just before beginning to relate an account of the second game, the officer looked at his victim, and he found that he had filled up his ears with cotton wool, and was reading from the note book of the Lynn Item reporter of a man who was buzzed to death. Thus endeth the first lesson.

"Yes we shall shortly close the rink for the summer months" said Manager McCully the other day. We have received a very liberal patronage from Peabody people, and it has been our earnest endeavor to make the Peabody rink a popular place of amusement. The season as a whole has been a profitable one. Many of the best citizens have visited the rink quite often during the winter, and finding that the best of order was maintained, have willingly consented to the attendance of their sons and daughters. There has been no sensation of any kind, and great interest and encouragement has been given the Peabody polo club. We have not decided about putting in the extra gallerys, spoken of in the PRESS, but will have another season as good a polo team as it is possible to secure. We shall take the skates from this rink to the Willows rink, and no doubt many of our friends and patrons will find us there during the summer.

A new league of polo clubs has been formed for a period of five weeks, and is composed of the Peabodys, Bay States, Woburns and Globes of Haverhill. They will play three games with each club, two games in each rink a week for a prize of $100 and $50 The game will be the most goals in 30 minutes. Chas. H. Symonds will referee all the games at the rink. At this writing, however, it don't look as if it would be a success.

A Peabody poloist had his nose broken last week; several poloists will suffer broken hearts when they discover that have not won the medals.—Clinton Courant.

Those broken hearts will not be found here. The third medals will be awarded the Peabodys next Friday night.

Remember the Peabodys have their benefit next Friday night and will be presented with the third medals. They will play the Cambridge club on that occasion.

Considerable interest centered in the Gloucester, Woburn, game last Wednesday evening, as the Woburns would be tied with the Peabodys if they won. The game was forfeited to the Woburns because two of the Gloucester players put cork rollers on their skates. This was such a transparent trick to defraud the Peabodys that at a meeting of the League it was almost unanimously voted to award the medals to the Peabodys.

REBECCA NOURSE MONUMENT.—On the monument this week erected to the memory of Rebecca Nourse, in the cemetery at the old Nourse homestead in this town are the following inscriptions:

(On the front.)
REBECCA NOURSE,
YARMOUTH, ENGLAND,
1621.
SALEM, MASS.,
1692.
(LINES BY JOHN G. WHITTER.)
O, Christian martyr, who for truth could die
When all about thee owned the hideous lie;
The world redeemed from Supertistion's sway
Is breathing freer, for thy sake, to day.
(On the reverse.)

Accused of witchcraft, she declared: "I am innocent, and God will clear my innocency."

Once acquitted, yet falsely condemned, she suffered death, July 19, 1692.

In loving memory of her Christain character, even then fully attested by forty of her neighbors, this monument is erected July, 1885.

The monument is now enclosed with a board covering, to be unveiled at the gathering of her descendants to be held in July of this year, probably on Tuesday the 21st, as the 19th, the anniversary of her martyrdom falls on Sunday. The monument is fully paid for, but money is yet needed to enclose the grounds with a suitable fence, and the Treasurer of the Association, Mr. Aaron Nourse of Salem, will be pleased to acknowledge the receipt of any, even small sums, for this object.—Danvers Mirror.

SOUTH PEABODY.

A teamster on a loaded wagon containing glue stock from Upton's works created a sensation yesterday. He drove around South Peabody in an intoxicated condition and carried his glue stock into Cedar Grove Cemetery, and then came out and started for Wyoma, when he fell from his team, and was brought home by Mr. John Wallis, who took charge of the team.

The fair last Thursday and Friday evening was well attended and very successful. On Thursday evening there was an exhibition of wax figures, and on Friday evening, Mrs. Nutting rendered a number of pleasing vocal selections. The fair will net the society about $100.

Rev. J. W. Colwell, has gone on a week's visit to Providence, R. I.

The concert to be given by the Salem Symphony Club, at Plummer Hall, on Thursday evening, May 7th, will be a very interesting event. It will be the first appearance for several years in Salem, of Mrs. Ita Welsh Donnovan, who has always been a great favorite among our concert goers. The club under the constructorship of Mr. Record will render the overture from Mozart's Don Giovani, some of Mendelssohn's songs without words; Haydns's Symphony in C., and Mendelssohn's Wedding March. Single tickets are for sale at the store of O. W. H. Upham at 75 cents each. Associate membership tickets at $1.50 each, entitling the holder to two admissions to the concert and to the rehearsal in the afternoon also, can be had by applying to the secretary Mr. Arthur R. Stone at the Museum building.

Customers crowd the store of Edward C. Almy & Co., 163, 165 and 167 Essex street, Salem, and purchase bargains as eagerly as though they expected a clothing famine. It is not surprising that they have an immense trade, when one considers the bargains they offer. They have the largest stock of all wool Cassimere Suits, all made from durable fabrics in new patterns. We will also mention that they offer wonderful bargains in their Boys' Department, also in Gents' Furnishing Goods, and all at the lowest prices.

STREET
GOSSIP,
GLEANED BY NOTES
Mulcahy

I received through the mail the other day a kind reminder that some one thought he had discovered who "Mulcahy" is. It consisted of a curious-shaped package, made very secure by the winding of about two spools of cotton around it, covering it from cellar to garret. A line in the hand writing of the post-master's assistant said there was ten cents postage due. At first my friends would not let me open the package, hinting that it might be dynamite, and urged me with much feeling to insure my life before proceeding further with the operation. But I only smiled and taking out my knife soon had the contents on my dissecting table amidst the wildest kind of delight. What was it I saw? A pair of ears which were liken to those of a donkey and I might have thought I had lost mine, save that they swayed not to and fro, but were hushed in the throes of death. Thanks, kind friend, send the whole skin next time.

One of our prominent temperance men, like the rest of mortals, contracted the cold that has been spread over so much territory this winter, and commenced to doctor it. By the advice of his friends, of course. he took a rum sweat, rum and molasses, rock and rye, whiskey and glycerine, gin and lemon juice, a glass of ale with his meals, and afterwards bought an imported wine, which he mixed with sea moss. The poor man had doctored himself in this way for a month, and eased his conscience by believing he was trying to cure a cold. None of these were successful. (All signs fail in a dry (?) time) and a friend recommended that as he was such a strong temperance man that he try cold water. Acting on his friend's advice he drank a large quantity of water before retiring, and did his throat up in water, and from that time his recovery was rapid.

One of our young men who has recently moved to the suburbs of the town, saw one day last week what he thought was a wild duck, light in a pond a short distance away. Securing his gun he dropped on his knees and crawled nearly half the way, when he took aim and firing killed the duck. He was on his way home and telling a neighbor of his good luck was surprised to learn that he had killed a tame duck belonging to another neighbor and that the duck had frequented the pond for the past half dozen years.

A hat manufacturer says that the size of a man's head is increased by excitement. I have noticed this, but it generally occurs however the next morning after the excitement. Not one of our police who played polo could get his hat on the next morning, and one of the night police has been obliged to eat his meals off the mantle piece ever since.

I was in a store the other day where one of our young ladies was purchasing a musical instrument, and she made the following remark: The last one I got, pa got it; I don't like it, and told him the next one he got I'd get it myself.

Thomas Keefe, a young man employed for a number of years as a section hand on the railroad, died at his home on Park street, last Wednesday, of consumption, aged 22 years.

At a recent meeting of the Boston Charitable Irish Society, Congressman P. A. Collins gave utterance to the following patriotic sentiments: "Those who are natural-born, and those who are naturalized stand upon an equal plane in American citizenship, and no man has any right, in my judgment, whatever be his religion, his race, his origin, or the accidental circumstances which bring him here, to be anything after he has taken the oath of allegiance but a citizen of the United States. Last autumn with all the heat and asperity and I may go further and say the malignity of the canvass, 11,000,000 people cast their votes silently without firing a gun, or shooting a man, or striking a blow, or even an accident, and I stood on the 4th of March, on the platform in Washington and saw a simple man go simply forward to take the oath of office as President of the United States to perform the duties of his office faithfully, standing in the presence of a multitude of people and not one word of excitement; and yet he held his position by the slender thread of only 1100 votes, a majority given him in his own great Empire state. I saw the man passing through the streets, uncovered and unguarded in his carriage, when 200,000 strangers were in the city of Washington, and not a blow was struck, not an angry word was spoken. The scene could not have been witnessed in any other country in the world since time began its course. I am proud of belonging to this great composite nationality, large enough, generous enough, just enough, to give every man his rights. If there be a single atom of prejudice, race or religion left, I pray with all the religion that I inherit that it may disappear, and that we may go hand in hand on to the great destiny that is before us, regardless of where a man was born, what altar he kneels at what color his skin is, or what particular nation he may be."

WILL BUSINESS REVIVE?—"In answer to this question, Demorests for May discourses as follows:—"Prices throughout the world continue to shrink, and as a consequence there is distress in all the markets of the world. It is a losing business to produce on a falling market, and hence enterprise is checked, money accumulates in the financial centers unused, and production is at a stand-still. The cause of this state of affairs, as we have repeatedly explained, is the discarding of silver in measuring valves. Gold is practically the sole unit, and it has to do a double duty at a time when the gold production of the world is falling off. This has affected prices all over the globe, in barbarous and semi-civilized countries as well as in Europe and North America. There will be no change for the better until silver is rehabilited as a money metal, and negotiations are now pending between Germany, France, Italy, the United States, and several minor nations, to bring this desirable state of things about. It will be a happy day for mankind when bimetalism will be re-established, for then prices will advance, trade will be stimulated, and the laboring class of all countries would be employed at remunerative wages."

A clever thrust is credited to one of our popular dentists. Being in Boston last Sunday, he met the Adjutant-General, and it chanced to be in one of the showers prevalent on that day. After the customary greetings, the Dr. suggested, apropos of the weather, but also of the recent military overcoat controversy, "Quite the time to procure overcoats, eh, General?" The cool propriety of the question staggered his companion so much he just nervously ejaculated, "Oh, my dear sir, I can't be interviewed!" and escaped in polite haste.—Milford Journal.

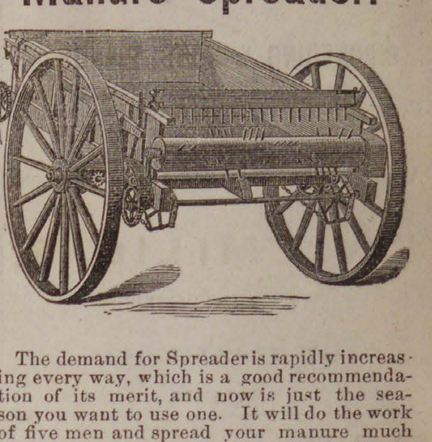
THE KEMPS
Manure Spreader.



The demand for Spreader is rapidly increasing every way, which is a good recommendation of its merit, and now is just the season you want to use one. It will do the work of five men and spread your manure much finer, so the first good rain will completely dissolve it and give to the grass and vegetable roots nourishment much quicker and more evenly, than when spread the old way, by the shovelful.

You can't afford to be without one.

We have them in stock, come and get one. Price, $100. We carry the largest stock of

SPRING AND SUMMER CLOTHING

FOR THE MILLIONS,

BY THE GREAT CLOTHIERS OF NEW ENGLAND.

FRIDAY MAY 8th, we shall inaugurate our 7th Great Annual Spring and Summer Sale of Fine and Medium Clothing, for Men's, Young Men's, Boys' and Children's wear, and

GENTS' FURNISHING GOODS.

Having just completed the alterations of our establishment we can now say that we have the largest, finest and best lighted store east of Boston. We would call the attention of the public to the fact that when we commenced doing business in Salem, Sept. 14, 1878, we occupied but a little over 2000 sq. ft. of salesroom. In 1879, however, owing to the rapid increase of trade, we were obliged to enlarge our salesroom; and, in the spring of 1881 our business had grown to such an extent we were compelled to again increase our establishment by taking in the next store, in order to meet the demand of our trade.

One past year's business proved that even this was insufficient. We have been obliged to enlarge for the third time, giving us now nearly 8000 square feet, being the largest retail Clothing Salesroom but one (the "Marlboro"), in the State.

The "Naumkeag" never saw difficulties in the way. If there were any it went right through them or over them (never around them). It was bound for the front and got there, and now the "Naumkeag" business is the wonder of the county. We have won this victory—the victory of honest value—the triumph of Large Sales and Small Profits. Our interests are mutual. You have profited by every step that we have taken—by means of our method that declares uncompromising warfare against "fancy profits" and believes in handling goods in the greatest possible quantities with the maximum speed at the maximum cost and charging the consumer only one small profit above the actual expense of transportation and sale, that goes even farther and guarantees the quality of every article as absolutely as the price thus defending the purchaser against the possibility of even unconscious imposition. This is protection of your interests in the true sense of the term. Its successful accomplishment is only possible under the impetus of very large sales.

We propose to make this opening one that will rival anything of the kind ever attempted by any clothier in the United States. We are the largest manufacturing Retail Dealers in New England. Headquarters Manutacturing and Wholesale Rooms 315, 317, 395, 397, 399, 401 and 403 Washington street, Boston. Branch stores in the principal cities of New England.

We have a stock of over $1,000,000.00

From which to draw our supplies.

OUR MOTTO:

THE MINIMUM OF PRICE! THE MAXIWUM OF QUALITY!

It is now nearly 7 years since we inaugurated our present system of doing business and we take pleasure in asserting that owing to our unlimited advantages and the generous co-operation of a discriminating public we have been able to carry on our ONE PRICE CASH SYSTEM successfully, and while we have maintained the highest standard in the quality of our goods, we have been enabled to sell them at the lowest prices, style and quality considered for the following reasons:

We Always Buy for Cash!
We Buy in Large Quantities!
We Buy Direct from the Mills!.
We Manufacture our own Goods!
We Sell Directly to Consumers.

With the above advantages we guarantee to undersell all competitors from 20 to 40 per cent., no matter who they are or where they do business. We have done it in the past and shall continue to do it.

Poet's Corner.

A Very Satisfactory Answer.

Said Robert: "I wonder why Kate has not married
In all the long years that have fled;
There must be a good reason why she has tarried,
While all her companions are wed.
And none were so clever, so handsome and hearty,
As she, I am free to declare;
At home or abroad, at a picnic or party,
The brightest and merriest there.

"Now Nell was not pretty in form or in feature,
And almost too lazy to stir,
And I cannot imagine what John, that good creature,
Could see to admire in her.
Yet she is well settled; a model of duty;
Has found a most excellent mate;
And yet in attractions of grace or of beauty,
She can't hold a candle to Kate.

"Why we in our youth were like sister and brother;
I playfully called her 'my wife,'
And vowed with a boyish devotion, no other
Should be my companion through life.
I loved her—but she had no thought of my passion,
The dear little innocent elf!
And rather than see her left out in this fashion,
I'll go propose to her myself!"

Said Robert to Kate in the honeymoon season,
"My darling, pray tell me the truth;
I often have wondered what could be the reason
That you did not wed in your youth."
Said Kate, with a look of reproach, as if summing
The amount of indebtedness due,
And a blush that was ever so sweet and becoming,
"You goose! I was waiting for you!"

The Ballad of the Baby.

Bald of head and red of face,
I'm only a baby, weak and small;
A bundle of flannel and bib and lace;
But don't, I beg, into error fall,
For there's not a thing on this earthly ball,
Or big or little, or old or new,
That holds the world in completer thrall;
Come, list to the deeds that I can do.

I can shriek a shriek to rend all space—
Can choke myself with my broidered shawl;
Can send my nurse on a frantic chase
For pins that were never there at all,
I can make my pa, so brave and tall,
Say curious words, just one or two,
As he walks the floor to hush my squall
Come, list to the deeds that I can do.

I can coo and coo with tender grace,
And bring my subjects at beck and call,
With cunning smile and soft embrace,
While into mischief I straightway crawl;
My mamma's anger I can forestall,
I can patty cake and can peek-a-boo,
I can charm, enslave, delude, appall;
Come, list to the deeds that I can do.

ENVOY.

With my tiny hands I can build life's wall.
As true and strong as the skies are blue
I am the monarch of hut and hall—
Come, list to the deeds that I can do.

An old Letter.

BY KATE M. LUCK.

Only a letter,
Yellow and dim with age;
Wistfully gazing,
I hold the torn old page.

Only a token
From one who loved me well;
The faded writing
Scarce the fond words can tell.

Only a letter,
Yet dearer far to me
Than all else beside,
Minding me, love of thee.

Only a letter,
Yellow and old and torn;
On my heart it lies,
Now I am old and worn,

Only a message,
Tender and true and sweet,
The writer long dead—
Never again we meet.

Only a letter,
Hid in an oaken chest;
Close, close to my heart,
When I am laid to rest!

A Waif.

Her dress is ragged and torn and old,
Her feet are bare and the day is cold;
Some shaving curls on her shoulders fall,
And a train is made of a worn-out shawl.

Some flowers that once were a beauty's pride,
And now are withered and thrown aside,
She holds as close as her fingers can,
While a crumpled hand-bill serves for a fan.

You would never have guessed as you saw her there,
With those withered flowers, and feet all bare,
That the gloomy street was a brilliant hall,
And she dancing there, the belle of the ball.

Selected Story.

"GABE."

BY W. GLYNDEN.

Even yet in the quiet evenings I can fancy the roll of that grand, deep voice, soaring out over the waters of the Gulf in liquid melody, or quavering in mournful improvisation among the orange trees, in front of his cabin door, where Gabe was wont to sit in the warm nights with his wondering eyes fixed on the stars, singing for an hour at a time, with only Aunt Dinah near to him.

Big, black, grave and kind—that is how the memory of Gabe comes before me to-night, with his simple, earnest way, the most ungainly, and yet the truest-hearted, of all God's living creatures. He had been in our family for years. He seldom laughed—was always sad and thoughtful—had been so from childhood, it was said.

On any question of dispute that occurred among the other negroes Gabe was referred to as authority to settle the matter, and, strange to say, he was seldom wrong.

'Why do you love to sing so?' I asked him one night, after I had listened to one of his rich, pathetic chants or hymns.

He looked at me in a startled way, for he had not noticed my approach, and said:

'I dunno myself, hardly. I sits here kase I loves to look up yonder at de stars and think. Bimeby dere comes a wond'ful song, like as if de angels was a-singin' in a Jub'lee; den I sings, too, till I'se ti'ed or clean gone to sleep, wid all de angels a-hovin' 'round me.'

My little sister Tella, then a golden-haired fairy of six, was a great favorite of Gabe's. With her he would talk as with no others, and was always near her when circumstances permitted. She, too, was fond of him, and many a little treat found its way to him and old Aunt Dinah through her favor.

One night—I remember it well—it was in warm March, that most beautiful of all months in Florida, when the magnolias put forth their bloom and the land is sweet in their incense—I had retired early, for I was weary with a hard day's ride from Tampa, up the Gulf.

It might have been about two o'clock in the morning, when I was awakened by a deafening crash of thunder, that died away in reverberating echoes over the water.

Usually I would roll off to slumber again, but this time I could not do so. I lay there instead, watching the play of the lightning and waiting for the rain to fall.

The atmosphere was close, almost stifling, the air permeated with electricity.

Suddenly I fancied I heard the front door open gently and close again. Was it only fancy caused by the excited state I was in? Something urged me to arise, and I did so. Stepping to the front window, which commanded a view of the piazza, I looked out; all was blackest night, with muttering thunder overhead.

As I stood there the earth was illumined by a most vivid flash, everything appearing as clear as day. Directly before me, half way down the carriage drive leading to the road along the bluff, rapidly glided a small slender figure in white, with golden hair streaming back in the wind.

Only a moment did the light last, but in that moment I saw and knew it was Tella — Tella, and going straight toward the chalk bluff that rose sheer one hundred feet from the sands below!

My mother had mentioned some days before that the child was giving to walking in her sleep, though her somnambulism had hitherto been confined in doors. To-night some freak had sent her forth, out along a path that must lead her to a terrible fate unless I could reach her in time.

Out of the room, over the piazza, down the drive I went quicker than I had ever gone before. The night was of inky darkness; I could not see an inch before me, and the lightning, so vivid before, had ceased. Every moment seemed an age. If the child had turned aside all might be well, if not—Heaven help her, for well I knew what must be her fate.

On I rushed, half-mad with suspense. Another flash, and I saw her not ten yards from the edge of the bluff.

'Tella,' I called, 'Tella?'

In my despair my feet grew heavy, my knees quaked, a horrible nightmare was upon me, clammy perspiration oozed from every pore.

Another flash; she was on the brink, and I not thirty steps away was powerless to save her! But, there! In the dying light a great black body springs forward and seems to mingle with the white. There comes a startled cry, a dull thud, and all is still save the dash of the rain that had now commenced to fall in torrents.

A moment more and I was bending over a little white figure, lying moaning on the sand, with hair of gold bedraggled over face and neck.

Thank God, it was Tella, unharmed and safe. She cried pitifully as I took her in my arms, seemingly too bewildered to speak.

But who was it that so providentially stayed her at that awful moment! The flash was so short I could not tell, though I fancied it was Gabe. If so where had he disappeared?

As it grew light again I looked toward the edge of the bluff. Just beyond the spot where Tella had lain, a large gap was broken in the bank, as if some heavy body had crushed it off by sheer weight, or in struggle.

Quick as thought it dawned upon me that Gabe—if it were he—had caught the child just as she was about to fall, and by a desperate effort had cast her safe and sound back upon the sand as the crumbling earth gave way, and precipitated him down to the sands far below.

As quickly as I could I made my way back to the house, with the child in my arms. The door was wide open as I had left it, and all was silent.

Laying Tella on a sofa I called my mother, and on her appearance, gave her a hurried account of what had passed.

I roused our darkey boy Zep out of bed and sent him to call several of the hands, with orders to come at once to the house.

The boy appeared in a short time with five of our negroes, all about half asleep, and all wondering at their abrupt awakening.

Briefly I explained what had happened, and having secured lanterns we together set out to learn the worst in regard to Gabe.

I was sure now it was Gabe, for Zep had found his cabin door wide open, and Aunt Dinah seemed asleep alone.

Down below the entrance to our carriage way some 200 yards, the bluff declined in a gentle slope to the water's edge.

To this point we quickly hurried, and were soon on the white, sandy beach, high up which the waves were rolling from the force of the now spent storm.

A minute's time and we had reached a spot directly under the break in the ledge above. At first I could see nothing, but a low groan drew to a sort of recess washed in the face of the bluff.

In this lay Gabe, moaning in pain, with face and neck bathed in blood.

As I bent over him with the lantern's light, he looked at me and endeavored to speak, but the effort only caused fresh blood to gush from his nostrils and mouth.

Tenderly we took him up between us and carried him back along the beach, up the bluff's side with the light of the stars shining on earth, for the storm had passed, as quickly as tropical storms do, and was muttering off in tattered masses toward the India Islands. Along the roadway up the garden drive, over the piazza into the room we bore him, placing him on a couch that had been hastily prepared.

I dispatched one of the hands in all haste for Dr. Reynolds our family physician, but as his residence was some two miles distant it was nearly an hour before he arrived.

In the meantime we made the poor sufferer as easy as possible, washing away the stains of blood from his face and neck, and cooling his throbbing temples with dampened cloths.

I gave him a strong dose of brandy, which had the effect of reviving him sufficiently to speak, though but little, as the hemorrhage was very great.

How much he was hurt I could not tell, though I knew one arm was broken, and some serious internal injury sustained.

When Dr. Reynolds arrived he made a careful investigation, then called me aside and said: The matter is serious beyond hope. His time to live is but a few hours at the most. The only thing we can do is to keep him as quiet as possible—even now he is rapidly sinking.'

After the doctor had departed I returned beside him and asked: 'Do you feel easier, Gabe?' He smiled as he faintly replied: 'Yes, much easie', thank you. But hit will soon be ovah; dere ain't no use tellin' me to cheah up; I knows I's agoin'—goin' fast. Hit's hard to go—but de Lawd's will be done.'

He turned to Tella, who was seated beside him, and, stroking her hair with his great horny hand, now feeble and weak as a child's, he said: 'I's so glad you's safe, honey—so glad; what's my old life to you's, so young and faih. I was nearly too late, but thank ou' Lawd I sabed you. Hit makes me so happy, and when you's one of de bright angels way up dere beyond the gates, you'l not forget old Gabe, will you, honey?'

For answer the golden head bowed over the rugged features, the golden curls fell among the kinky gray, the fresh young lips red with the blood of life, trembled on the pain-drawn forehead, while tears fell fast from her eyes and glistened like pearls among the blood-stains on the couch.

There was a glad smile on the old man's face as the child arose, and all the love of a full warm heart shone in his eyes as he looked upon her.

The hours sped on until the morning sun rose over the broad waters of the gulf and shone in crimson and gold through the latticed creepers.

Gabe was very quiet, his eyes fixed on the ceiling, his hand resting on 'Aunt Dinah's.'

As the day broadened he became visibly weaker, his breath coming at longer intervals, with labored intonation; his mind, too, began to wander, his voice at times rising in incoherent murmurs.

I gave him another dose of brandy and again he revived, though the effort was the last of expiring nature.

He looked at us in a dazed and wondering way for a few moments, and seeing 'Aunt Dinah' crying bitterly, said: 'Don't cry, hon—don't cry. Hit's only fo' a little while longer; a few moah days, or maybe a few moah yeahs, but we'll meet again; yes, meet in dat lan' wha' dere's no moah pain and trouble nevah comes, and we'll be white as snow dere, hon', among de angel bands—a'singin' round de 'Great White T'rone.'

On and on the little marble clock ticked on the mantlepiece, minute by minute, shortening the strand of life, drawing nearer and nearer the 'shadow of the valley.'

'Hit's gittin' so dark,—the dying man said—'night am comin' fast; my eyes am closin', de day am neahly gone, but de shoah am very neah. I see angels an' angels standin' dere; dey's walkin' in de sunlight, dey's singin' in de glory—and now dey beckon me to come.

'Yes, I's comin'—fast.'

Night shadows were indeed falling, and the shore was very, very near

'Hon, is you dere?'

'Come cluser—I's leabin' you hon', but I's goin to a bettah lan' my soul will be white as de lamb's. When you's ready—come. I'll be dere to meet you, an' we'll be young again in de new life; baun again—in ou' Fatha's home. I'se so happy. No moah trouble—no more pain. Cluser hon'—cluser'

The lips moved again, but no sound came forth; speech had ceased to be, had flickered out in darkness, and the poor old body was following quietly after.

His lips grew wide apart, his breath came in irregular gasps, until at last it ceased. There was a long quiver in the frame and Gabe was dead.

Down in a corner of our garden, where trees make twilight live at noonday, in a spot restful and quiet, where dead mosses make foot-falls silent, is a little mound with a plain marble slab at its head. This is the grave of Gabe.

In the warm Summer months during vacation in a Northern college there comes back to us a tall, fair girl. 'She is always glad to return to the dear old home,' she says, 'though it is quaint and old-fashioned.'

Many times before the Summer wanes does she softly tread the mossy earth beside the dead and kneeling by the little mound offers anew thanks to Him who saw fit to prolong her life, at the sacrifice of that pure and noble soul.

NEW USE FOR BED-SPRINGS.—A few days ago after a fire which partly consumed a dwelling house on Third street, the owner permitted a gang of Polacks to carry off a lot of the damaged furniture. A spring bed fell to the lot of an old man. The cover had been destroyed and several of the coils were missing; but he accepted the present with every expression of gratitude, and as he carted it away, his fellow country-men cast many an envious glance in his direction.

That same afternoon the donor had business in Poletown, and as he rode along, the Pole, to whom he had given the bed, ran out and made motions for him to come in.

'Bless his old soul! but he's got those springs fixed up and wants me to see what a nice bed he has,' said the citizen to himself, and he followed the man around the house.

There was the spring-bed. The man had built a pig-pen and the gift just made a front for it. The wire coils were placed on the inside, and the occupant of the pen was scratching against them and squealing with delight.

'Good!' said the Polack, as he pointed to the pen.

'Y-e-s.'

'Got more?'

'No, my friend, I haven't. I've run clear out of bed-springs; but if you'll call around to-morrow, I'll hunt you up a rocking-chair and looking-glass for your hog-pen! Hang a man who'll sleep on a pair of twelve-dollar bed-springs when they tickle a pig in this fashion!'

'A newspaper and a newspaper editor that people don't talk about and sometimes abuse are rather poor concerns. The men and business that an editor sometimes feels it a duty to defend at the risk of making enemies of another class are the first to show ingratitude. Don't do it girls. Don't chew gum; but if you must and will chew the stuff, go out on the back door-step and chew it, where no one will see you, and not come out on the street working your jaws in a manner that is frightful to witness. We not only speak of this because the habit looks bad practiced on the street, but also to remind you that it prevents you from talking intelligibly, gives you thick lips, a cat-fish mouth and an emaciated cadaverous appearance. Recent investigation in science founded on observation confirms this statement.

THE CARE OF CHILDREN. — BOSTON, MASS.—A leading medical journal thinks it is about time mothers should know how seriously the health of children is imperiled by the use of preparations containing morphia and opium, and given for the cure of colds and coughs. The chemist of the Brooklyn Board of Health, Otto Grothe, Ph. D., a graduate of the University of Kiel, Germany, certifies officially that recently a harmless and yet effective article for such complaints has come to his notice. He refers to the newly discovered Red Star Cough Cure which he found purely vegetable.

ASSESSORS' NOTICE.

To the Inhabitants and other Persons liable to pay Taxes in the Town of Peabody.

The Assessors of the Town of Peabody hereby give notice to the inhabitants of said town, and all other persons liable to pay taxes therein, that their office will be open on and after the first day of May until and including the first day of June, and all persons liable to be taxed in said town are hereby required to bring in at the said office true and perfect lists of all the polls (males twenty years old, and upward), and schedules and estimates of the personal estates for which they are liable to pay taxes.

Copartnerships

having a place of business in Peabody, and also in some other city or town within the Commonwealth, are especially notified to bring in a statement in accordance with the 24th section of the 11th chapter of the Public Statutes. Shipping and business income are not taxable to a firm, but each resident partner must include these items in his individual return.

Mortgaged Real Estate.

"Any mortgagor or mortgagee of real estate may bring in to the assessors of the town or city where such real estate lies," within the time specified in this notice, "a statement, under oath, of the amount due on each separate lot or parcel of such real estate, and the name and residence of every holder of an interest therein as a mortgagee or mortgagor. When such property is situated in two or more places, or when a recorded mortgage includes for one sum two or more estates or parts of an estate, an estimate of the amount of the mortgagee's interest in each estate or part of an estate shall be given in such statement." [Chap. 175 of the Acts of 1882]. When a statement in conformity with the law above quoted is brought in, the real estate therein returned will be assessed under sections 14, 15 and 16, of chapter 11 of the Public Statutes. But in cases where the mortgagor of the real estate has agreed in writing to pay all taxes assessed thereon, NO STATEMENT OR RETURN IS REQUIRED from either mortgagee or mortgagor, unless requested by the assessors in writing.

Estates in Trust.

Persons holding estates in trust, whether for minors or otherwise, are particularly requested to furnish the assessors with statements in relation to such estates. When trust estates, or estates of persons deceased, have been divided during the past year. or have changed hands from other causes, the trustee, executor or administrator, or other person interested, is required and warned to give notice of such change; and in default of such notice, will be held to pay the tax assessed, although such estate has been wholly distributed and paid over.

Any person bringing in a list of all his taxable personal property will be assessed upon the valuation thereof, and any one neglecting to furnish the assessors with such list within the time above specified will de doomed at a legal meeting of the Board of Assessors, agreeably to the law of the Commonwealth. All persons will take notice that statements of personal property must be in writing, and subscribed under oath before one of the Assessors, at their office, on or before the FIRST DAY OF JUNE, and that the personal property of all taxable persons must be estimated by the Board, NOTWITHSTANDING A VERBAL STATEMENT OR INFORMAL WRITTEN COMMUNICATION TO ANY ONE OR MORE OF THE ASSESSORS. [Pub. Stat., chap. 11, sec. 39 and 41.] When a person has failed to bring in a list or schedule of all his taxable property, in conformity to this notice, no abatement of a tax so assessed upon such person for personal propeaty can be granted, "unless such tax exceeds by more than fifty per cent. the amount which would have been assessed to that person on personal estate, if he had seasonably brought in said list; and if said tax exceeds by more than fifty per cent. the said amount, the abatement shall be only of the excess above the said fifty per cent. [Pub. Stat., Chap. 11, Sec. 73.]

Any person taxable in Peabody for personal property can obtain a BLANK SCHEDULE for making a list of such property, with directions for properly filling the same, by applying at the assessors' office.

Literary, Benevolent, Charitable and Scientific Corporations.

The attention of the Officers of all Literary, Benevolent, Charitable and Scientific Corporations, located in Peabody, is particularly called to the requirements of Chapter 217 of the Acts of 1882, as the property of said corportions, both personal and real, will be subject to taxation unless the law is complied with. Blank forms for the purpose can be had at the office of the assessors.

100 Doses

One Dollar. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which this can be truly said; and it is an unanswerable argument as to the strength and positive economy of this great medicine. Hood's Sarsaparilla is made of roots, herbs, barks, etc., long and favorably known for their power in purifying the blood; and in combination, proportion, and process, Hood's Sarsaparilla is *peculiar to itself.

"For economy and comfort we use Hood's Sarsaparilla." MRS. C. BREWSTER, Buffalo.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla takes less time and quantity to show its effect than any other preparation I ever heard of. I would not be without it in the house." MRS. C. A. M. HUBBARD, North Chili, N. Y. 100 Doses

One Dollar

Hood's Sarsaparilla cures scrofula, salt rheum, all humors, boils, pimples, general debility, dyspepsia, biliousness, sick headache, catarrh, rheumatism, kidney and liver complaints, and all affections caused by impure blood or low condition of the system. Try it.

"I was severely afflicted with scrofula, and for over a year had two running sores on my neck. I took five bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and consider myself entirely cured." C. E. LOVEJOY, Lowell, Mass.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla did me an immense amount of good. My whole system has been built up and strengthened, my digestion improved, and my head relieved of the bad feeling. I consider it the best medicine I have ever used, and should not know how to do without it." MARY L. PERLE, Salem, Mass.

84 MARKET ST., AND 23 MARKET SQUARE, LYNN.

THE NEW wonder of the world is the Bartholdi Statue, the largest ever made, which will be brought to this country, by the French transport Isere. The "New York World" is soliciting subscriptions for the building of a base on which the statue can be placed, and already over $30,000 have been subscribed. It will be located at the entrance of New York Harbor and some idea of its magnitude may be obtained from the fact that forty persons found standing room within the head. A six foot man standing on the level of the lips only just reaches the eyebrows. Fifteen people might sit round the flame of the torch, which elevation can be reached by a spiral staircase within the outstretched arm. The London News in speaking of it says:—"It is the largest statue of modern times. The Colossus of Rhodes was nothing to it. It could carry the "Bravaria" or the "Hermann" in its arms. It towers to the skies from the yard of the Rue de Chazelles, where it has been eight years in construction, and the view from its coronet sweeps clear of the six-story houses and beyond the walls of Paris." Its weight is 440,000 pounds, of which 176,000 pounds are copper, and the remainder wrought iron. It will arrive in New York about May 25 and when placed in position will loom up 305 feet above high tide water, the height of the statue being 151.2 feet, that of the pedestal 91 feet and foundation 52.10 feet. This imposing statue, higher than the Brooklyn Bridge, or the steeple of Trinity Church, will add another to the Wonders of the World. The conception and execution of this great French sculptor, M. Bartholdi, who has devoted eight years of his life and most of his fortune to this work, and whose generous impulses, which must be on a scale commensurate with this noble work, prompted him to make such a gift to the United States. The committee in charge of the construction of the base are in want of funds, and have asked the press of the country to lay the matter before their readers. They have prepared a miniature statuette, an exact counterpart of the original, six inches high, made of bronze, which they will deliver to subscribers of one dollar, to help build the base. All remittances should be addressed to Richard Butler, Secretary American Committee of the Statue of Liberty, No. 33 Mercer Street, New York. We feel assured that this is a matter in which all our public spirited citizens are interested, and they will be only too eager to testify their grateful sense of the triendliness of this magnanimous offer on the part of the French people and will lend them aid in placing it on a solid foundation. For that reason, we have given this appeal a prominent place in our paper, and trust some one will find it convenient to contribute their mite.

The cyclorama of the Battle of Gettysburg now exhibiting in Boston is the most realistic specimen of art we ever witnessed. It requires no very vivid imagination to make the spectator believe that he is right in the midst of the actual conflict. As one stands upon the platform in the centre of the building a glance around shows an immense horizon, the line of which is broken by blue hill-tops, the green fringe of woodlands, and other distant features of a landscape which is miles in extent. The impression is that of being upon some great eminence in the midst of a country the beautiful aspect of which is in strange contrast with the terrible scenes taking place on all sides. Here is a shanty riddled with shot and shell; there the splintered rails giving evidence of a tornado of deadly missiles having ploughed its way in that direction; on all sides struggling masses of men, and the wounded and dead and dying. There is a terrible realism in this portion of the picture; the figures are life-like, the delusion of action is perfect; one can almost imagine he feels in his nostrils the sulphurous odor of the clouds of smoke that rise here and there, and, in view of the many things to be seen, stands spell-bound. Not only is the picture wonderful in itself, but its mounting is as artistic as its execution. From the very base of the elevation on which the spectator is, the landscape stretches away to the horizon. The immediate foreground is built, not painted, but is a puzzle to tell where the foreground leaves off and where the picture begins; in some places it is impossible. Major Samuel B. Bancroft of Boston, who was in the whole three days' battle, gives a descriptive lecture several times daily, pointing out the most interesting localities and giving one a very clear idea of the actual conflict.—Wakefield Bulletin.

THREE REASONS.—Why everyone needs and should take Hood's Sarsaparilla in the spring:—

1st: Because the system is now in its greatest need. Hood's Sarsaparilla gives strength.

2d: Because the blood is sluggish and impure. Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies.

3d: Because, from the above facts Hood's Sarsaparilla will do a greater amount of good now than at any other time. Take it now. (D)

IT WASN'T AN OYSTER.—At the close of one of the recent night sessions of the Illinois Legislature, three of its members, who did not know the capital very well, started in search of oysters. Seeing a sign, as they supposed, of an oyster-house, they went up-stairs and sat down to a round table in a beautifully furnished room. A gentleman very neatly dressed came in and inquired:—"Gentlemen, what can I do for you?" "Oysters for three, please," one of the triumvirate replied. "I'll take a dozen raw." "Gimme half a dozen fried counts," said one of the others. "I'll take a dry stew, please," chimed in the third. The proprietor looked dazed and worried, and began: "But, gentlemen"—"Oh! we've got the dust. Needn't fret a bit about that!" exclaimed the one who was standing treat. "We'll pay in advance, if you so desire;" and he laid a handful of silver on the table. "But gentlemen; —"Come, come!" cried the man, impatiently. "We're in a hurry." "But gentlemen; this is no oyster-house. This is"—"No oyster-house!" exclaimed the trio. "Then you'd better take in your sign of a big oyster at the foot of the stairs." "Sign of a big oyster? Why, gentlemen, you are mistaken. This is the office of an aurist. If you want your ears doctored I am at your service. That sign is an ear, not an oyster." The three members of the legislation looked sick and went out.

"FIRST CLASS GOODS," in which merit is at once recognized, are now, and always have been, imitated, especially the manufactured article. After years of labor, and the expenditure of a fortune, in perfecting and placing before the public that which people appreciate and demand, some one who never had an original idea offers a counterfeit or substitute to compete with the genuine. Curtis Davis & Co., makers of the "Welcome Soap," find the above true in their case at least, the excellence of whose productions are everywhere acknowledged as the "standard," of quality, being imitated in every way that competition can suggest. But in the use of their goods, the consumer realizes the full benefit of value received. Welcome Soap confirms and sustains their great reputation.

Recently a number of school children, of Girard, Pa., wrote a letter to John G. Whittier, the Quaker poet, telling that they had learned to recite "The Barefoot Boy," "The Huskers" and "Maud Muller" and closing thus: "If it would not be too much trouble, write a verse—something that we could learn and always remember as having been written by you especially for us." In response he sent the following:

"Faint not and falter not, nor plead
  Your weakness. Truth itself is strong;
The lion's strength, the eagle's speed,
  Are not alone vouchsafed to wrong.

Your nature, which, through fire and blood,
  To place or gain can find its way,
Has power to seek the highest good,
  And duty's holiest call obey."

As some fears have been expressed of the possible appearance of cholera next summer, special attention should be paid to all the sanitary arrangements of the house and its surroundings. Kalsomine and white-wash should come into requisition, the cellar should be well cleaned out, and every effort should be made to insure a clean house, and untainted atmosphere and surroundings that so far as any disease is concerned shall be most uninviting.

Take a slip of paper and place thereon in figures your age in years, dropping the months, weeks and days. Multiply the sum by two; then add to the result obtained the figures 3768; add two and then divide by two. Subtract from the result obtained the number of your years on earth and see if you will not obtain figures you will not be likely to forget.

The use and abuse of tobacco at this time attracts more attention than any other of the prevalent vices. Whether it is the provocation of cancer, and its effect upon the action of the heart are duly considered; yet the falling off in the use of the weed is scarcely perceptible. Men will first enjoy the fragrant smoke and afterward consider the effect.

TURN THE rascals out. For the benefit of the new Treasurer, all the cash in the U. S. Treasury has been counted and only two cents found to be missing.

LAST WEDNESDAY the contractors turned over the new jail at Salem, to the County Commissioners, and the cost of the whole, including extra work and materials was $72,900, which was only about $5000 above the contract. This shows how little the Salem paper knew about it, when it said the cost would not be less than $150,000. It is a fine building and is located on the site of the former jail built in 1813.

THE GENERAL conference of the Mormon church has formulated a declaration of grievances which protests against the continuance of the present prosecutions until a commission can investigate the situation in that polygamous country. It would be queer if it had been left with a Democratic administration to free the country of this blot, after every Republican President had resolved against it in his annual message.

CREMATION attracts but little attention just at present, yet its importance in disposing of offensive and decaying matter is undisputed. It is probable that in the near future, companies will be formed in many towns and furnaces built in which must be consumed garbage of all kinds. Build such crematories and insist that gutters be thoroughly cleaned and the refuse deposited in the furnaces and there will be no fear of cholera and typhoid fever.

THE DEBT statement for April shows a loss of nearly $7,000,000 of gold and a gain of some $6,000,000 of silver, a gain of $1,000,000 in United States notes, of $12,000 in National bank notes and a loss of $2,600,000 in national bank deposits. The decrease in gold and the increase in silver are due to the payment of customs in silver and silver certificates. It also shows a tendency to withdraw gold from business channels.

MEMORIAL DAY, that is anticipated and arranged for weeks in advance by the Grand Army Posts of the country, is fast approaching. That day of the year when the veterans who remain, tenderly strew flowers on the graves of departed comrades, who cheerfully laid down their lives that the country might live. There is a growing tendency in many places to make the day one of festival rather than remembrance. Commander Kountz of the G. A. R. speaks of this matter in his general order, just issued. There is a tendency to make the day a holiday, and managers of all kinds of amusements put on special attractions for that day, and many, particularly the young, are drawn away from the real educational purpose of Decoration day—that which inspires patriotism, and a remembrance of the faithful men who offered their lives when their country called. Let us all enjoy the day, but in our pleasures be temperate, and not loose sight of true reverence, which the day imposes upon us.

THE BOSS carpenters around town are making some talk about the awarding of the contract for building the new school house to Mr. Spaulding instead of Mr. Wingate, who was really the lowest bidder. As we learn the particulars are, that Wingate & Co. were the lowest on the original bid and thus entitled to the job, but as the committee thought all the bids too high, a few changes were made, such as leaving off the gutters on the building and changing the boarding on the roof from matched boards to a cheaper one, and a few other slight alterations, and Wingate and Spaulding were asked to bid again, which they did, and while the difference in their bids was not over twenty-five dollars the contract was given to Spaulding. What should have been done, and we believe is always customary in such cases, would have been to have gone to the lowest bidder, and with the architect lap off these little extras, and then award the contract on those terms which could be made satisfactory to both sides. Again, Wingate & Co. being the lowest bidders made a mistake in consenting to bid the second time, as the contract was theirs by right if it was to be honorably bestowed. Personally we care nothing about the matter, but as it has occasioned considerable talk, we have given our opinion. We have no doubt the work will be as well done by one as the other.

AFTER TWO weeks delay Governor Robinson has seen fit to explain to the people the reasons that controlled his decision in regard to the Overcoat contract, which was not awarded to Wannamaker, Brown & Co. of Philadelphia, who were the lowest bidders, but went to Isaac Fenno & Co. of Boston. The explanation of the Governor is full and satisfactory, and if it had been given sooner would have caused less unfavorable comment. The bids of Wannamaker & Co. were accepted with others, and the fact that they were non-residents did not influence the Governor, who, in order to determine correctly the quality of all the samples submitted by them and other bidders, had the Quartermaster General solicit an examination by experts who had no knowledge of the bidders by whom the samples were offered. All Wannamaker & Brown's samples were rejected because they failed to come up in quality and color to the required standard. They also offered a bid, which was lower than the ones with samples, saying they would furnish "the kersey to be manufactured by the Middlesex Company." It was safe to infer that if the bid which was higher was rejected on account of the inferior quality of the samples, goods at a less price would not meet the requirement, and for that reason, and that only, Wannamaker & Brown's bid was not considered. The Governor says further that "the sample coat submitted by Isaac Fenno & Co. was much superior to the army coat and in the contract they have obligated themselves to furnish coats of like quality and make." This settles a question that has called forth almost the first and only criticism of the Administration of Governor Robinson, and it is clearly shown that the Governor worked for the best interest of the state.

THERE SEEMS to be a determination on the part of the present administration to check the insatiate land-grabbers who have secured to themselves large tracts of the best lands of the West. These land grabbers seem possessed of the idea that they actually have rights to these vast tracts of land and the honest settler seeking a home under the public land laws is unceremoniously driven off. The attention of the commissioner of the interior was recently called to the outrages on settlers in Nebraska. It was clearly shown that under the administration of Secretary Teller, the large cattle kings had things their own way and honest settlers to whom protection should have been extended, have been driven away, in some cases with violence. Extensive tracts of land which should have been producing millions of dollars in wheat and corn, as they abound in agricultural wealth are kept from settlement by these cattle companies, and thousands of heads of cattle roam at will. These ranch men are in many cases foreigners who care nothing about becoming American citizens, but desire to secure wealth and keep possession of their illegally acquired domains. In a great many cases they are non-residents and send their agents to look after their interest while they squander their money in fast living in England, never so much as seeing the land from which their income is derived. Already the policy of the administration seems to be to enforce the anti-fencing law which for years has been practically a dead letter, and to wrest from these monopolists the land that belongs to the people. It is expected these lands will be thrown open to settlers who will make their homes there and the land will go to those for whom it was originally intended, and they will be protected by the administration.

Funeral of Andrew Torr.

The last sad rites of the late Andrew Torr took place at the South Church last Friday afternoon, the members of Jordan Lodge F. & A. M. attending in a body and taking part in the services. The service was conducted by Rev. W. G. Sperry who said, "It is the province of God to teach us by the change of life, and by such a scene as this God would have us think of our own mortality. The citizens of this town are again called to mourn the loss of a well known citizen of the town. I enter with you in the sorrow of this occasion, as one by one we enter this life so one by one we depart from it. It is pleasant to call to mind Mr. Torr's virtues; we think with pleasure of his strength of character, his sturdy mindedness of principles in life; he ever threw his influence on the side of good order and citizenship; ever mindful of his own good name and that of his family; honest, his life was one of sterling honesty and integrity. No one rejoiced more than he at the success of the temperance cause in this town, and the recent movements against the violators of the law, met with his hearty approval. Some time ago he abandoned his weekly attendance at this church on account of the infirmities of the body. He was always beloving and beloved. We thank God for all that was good in his life and leave all else to one whose judgment we seek with consolation and prayer."

The Masons then took charge of the services. The chaplain, Rev. George Walker, conducting them and the brethren responding to his reading. Rev. O. S. Butler of Georgetown, a brother Mason and life-long friend of the deceased, then feelingly addressed the Brothers and the family. He said, "The alarm has been sounded at the outer door of our sanctuary; we have met at the great mystery and yet we know not which is the most mystery, death or life. Tracing it down step by step it is but yesterday that we knew this brother in all the strength and pride of his manhood,—yes, we have known him as man and Mason, and it seems but yesterday we saw him at the death of our beloved brother, Dr. Nichols, and I dare to tell you that he always stood square abreast of his peers." As a Mason he was called from the ranks two years after his initiation, passing on to different positions he filled them all with marked zeal and fidelity. Dr. Nichols was his associate, and so was Fitch Poole, the Proctors and the others were his associates. He was a peer among giants. Our old treasurer and brother was an equal with them and it was a masonic honor as high as could be conferred. It is sad to know that when the brothers of the craft meet in the future, our old friend and brother will not be in his place. If it is sad to us, how sad to his friends and the aged wife. When she shall go to her home and see the familiar things with which she has been accustomed to associate him, and as her friends gather around her, her thoughts will ever turn to those scenes that she shared with him during the years of their wedded life. Blessed be God we entertain no dread of the future. We, as masons, look upon this going out as the coming in, our brother at once enters upon that new life where there are better opportunities for development. While we sorrow, he is enjoying that fair land where no one is sick and there is no pain. And brethren fail not to speak a kindly word and extend a generous hand, that you may so draw about you such influences as heaven can bestow and that it can be said of you as of our brother. He lived well and he died well. The remains were interred in the family lot at Monumental Cemetery, where the Masons deposited their sprigs of green signifying that their departed brother would be ever kept fresh and green in their momory.

THE YOUNG man who is taking the census in this town, may be a stranger to many of our readers, but we trust he will be given all the information desired. Many people object to giving the information sought for, solely through fear of having it reported to their neighbors. The enumerator is simply the agent of the state, and is bound by oath not to reveal any information he may obtain, nor to allow schedules used by him to be seen by any person, previous to their return to the State Bureau of Statistics. Give him the information, and thus aid the work.

IT IS GRATIFYING to those of our citizens who love to spend a day occasionally fishing in our large fresh water ponds, which by the way, has been denied them for several years past, to know that the legislature has passed a law, which says no large ponds shall be leased to private parties, and at the expiration of the present leases they shall revert back to the people, and existing laws will protect the fish from nets, trills, etc. This is as it should be, and no man or party of men should be given control of our ponds which belong to the people.

Mrs. C. C. Pike, Mrs. Francis Baker and Miss Sarah Smith have gone to Philadelphia.

The foundation for the new scales at West Peabody are being laid near the Danforth farm.

The estate of the late Daniel Townsend on Tremont street, sold to-day to A. B. Newhall for $1500.

Mr. John Hanrahan, a graduate of the PRESS office, has secured a position as compositor on the Boston Herald.

Next week Wm. Symonds, of Providence, R. I., but formerly of this town, goes to Germany to finish his education.

Monday morning nine of the finishers at Pinder's & Sons struck for an advance of one dollar, and are still out.

A cottage house in Ballard Vale, near the engine house, has been sold by Stephen Blaney, of this town, to Thomas Clinton.

Mrs. R. H. Wilkinson has returned from her western tour. It is reported she will again resume her occupation as a teacher.

John A. Lord, Jr., purchased the old Munroe estate on Munroe street, now occupied by Timothy Lord, last Monday, at auction, for $23.25.

Dogs made sad work of a lot of hens belonging to Otis Brown, last Saturday morning, killing all but three or four out of a flock of thirty-four.

Mr. Wilber Wing, the young man, who was lost, strayed or stolen a while ago, was in town Monday. As soon as the walking improved he came home.

At the Unitarian Church next Sunday afternoon, Rev. Dr. J. F. Moors, the recently appointed Minister-at-large for Southern New England, will preach.

We judge from the appearance of the inside of our contemporary, the "Reporter," last week, that they got Brockton's bundle, as it was full of Brockton advertisements.

Mr. J. Henry Osgood, of this town, has removed his business from 3 Bath street, Boston, to 100 Milk street, where he will give his personal attention to the manufature of printer's rollers.

The Selectmen last Saturday, granted a junk dealer's license to Timothy O' Keefe and Daniel Rahilley. Moses B. Page was given the contract to furnish the drain pipe for Central street. W. P. Upham was appointed weigher at Upton's Glue works.

The last meeting of the Murray Club for the season, was held last Monday evening at their parlors and was largely attended. The entertainment consisted of literary and musical exercises, and ice cream and cake were furnished. The whole concluded with chorus singing.

Thomas Conroy while digging a post hole, recently, unearthed a brass medal bearing the date of 1768, and inscribed, "In memory of the good old days." He immediately took it to the Item reporter, who remembered to have seen it in 1774, when he was about 25 years old.

The concert by the Salem Symphony Club, last Thursday night, was liberally patronized and highly enjoyed, and the playing was equal to that of many professionals. The concert reflected great credit on Mr. F. C. Record who has had the matter in charge, and whose players showed the drilling to have been a careful one. We trust they will receive the encouragement which they deserve.

The Gloucester Advertiser says of a former resident, Mr. Sam'l L. Gibson is progressing with the cellar for his new house on Middle street, and in excavating found near the old chimney an old Portuguese coin of the date of 1736. A portion of the old house now journeying north was occupied as a post office from 1809 to 1820, when Capt. Isaac Elwell was the postmaster.

Would it not be well to have the clock on the South Church, put under the guardianship of some competent horologist? It not only fails to give the correct time, but leads one to think that it takes five minutes to walk from Allen's Block to the depot and five to eight minutes more to walk past the front of the depot. This idiosyncrasy has existed all winter and it seems that at least "spring cleaning" would not be detrimental.

SKATING RINK NOTES.

The polo club had their second benefit of the season on Friday evening last, at which time the third medals in the Massachusetts League were presented to them by Sec. Kenney in a few and fitting remarks. Owing to the very stormy weather, there was not a very large house, about 400 people being present. For the attractions of the evening there was a polo game between the Cambridges and home clubs, the visitors presented a strong team, and defeated our boys to the tune of "three straight," in eighteen minutes. An exhibition goal was then played and was won by our boys in 2½ minutes. There was very little science used in the playing, as both sides seemed to slug for all they were worth. After the polo game there was a three mile race between four contestants, Hanson of Salem, coming first, prize $3. The members netted about $22 for their pains.

Mr. Lewis D. Nevers has closed his engagement with the Peabody rink and returned to Marblehead, where he will reside. Mr. Nevers has made lots of friends among the patrons of the rink, who would like to see him in his old position another season.

Manager McCully has made arrangements to have the same band at the Willows this summer as he has had here. It is considered one of the best rink bands in the county.

The Bay State polo club have hired the Bay State Rink at Chelsea, for the summer season of their manager.

The Peabodys played the old Paris team at Chelsea, last Saturday night, for a purse of $100 and were defeated three straight.

The St. John's polo team went to Danvers last Thursday night and defeated the B. N. G. team of that town, three goals to two. They afterwards played four more goals in which Danvers won three.

Frank Lummus while playing polo Thursday, was struck over the eye and a bad gash was cut.

The Annual opening of the Naumkeag Clothing Company took place last Friday and notwithstanding it was a rainy day, many ladies came out to see the large display of elegant goods shown by this house. They have recently enlarged their children's department by removing a partition and thus adding the light of two windows to the room. In this department will be found a line of goods that are of superior make. The firm have a large manufactory at Brooklyn, N. Y., and the work is done by Germans, who have served a long apprenticeship and made a specialty of children's garments. They include Norfolks and other suits and are as nice as money can buy. They range in price from $1 to $12 on knee pant suits, and from $3 to $18 in boys. In the Men's Department there are English plaids and checks, Scotch plaids and English Worsteds, and elegant goods made in four button cutaways. There is a fine all wool suit they are selling at $6. These are not three or four suit lots, but we should judge by the pile there were a hundred and fifty of them. Then there was the Harris Cassimere at $16.50 equal in make and trimmings to custom work. English checks from $15 to $24. A large stock of the celebrated Sawyer goods, besides broken checks, French Worsteds, etc. In fact those who have never worn ready-made clothing are sure to be suited if they visit the Naumkeag. Had we space we would like to speak of the remarkable success of this house, who located in Salem seven years ago and now have the reputation of being the leading clothing house in Essex County. This is largely due to the business like management of Mr. Z. A. Gallup, the manager, and his able corps of assistants. On this occasion there was a beautiful and attractive window display, consisting of a bed of pansies and rare and beautiful plants and shrubs. Don't take our word for it, but call and see for yourself.

BOARD OF HEALTH REGULATIONS.

THE Board of Health appointed by the Town hereby make and publish, as required by law,* the following "Regulations for the Public Health and Safety:"—

REGULATION 1ST. It being the duty of the Board of Health, of the Town of Peabody, to make such examination of the premises of persons residing in said town as they shall deem necessary for the public welfare, the Board hereby give notice and require that all premises within said limits shall be ready for inspection by the Board on and after May 15th, 1885.

REGULATION 2D. No house offal, filthly water, dead animals or refuse of any kind, shall be thrown upon the streets by any resident; and no butcher, fishmonger, or vender of merchandise, shall leave any refuse upon the streets of this town.

REGULATION 3D. If, upon inspection, any rubbish, offal, decaying animal or vegetable matter, or filth of any kind be found in, under or about any building, within any yard or enclosure, upon any premises, or in the ponds or water courses of said Town of Peabody, or if any privy or drain be found so discharging as to prove a nuisance, and offensive or deleterious to the public health, the owner or occupant of such property or premises shall be notified by the Board to remove or abate such nuisance within 24 hours after said notice has been served.

REGULATION 4TH. If any owner or occupant of property as aforesaid, after having been duly notified, shall neglect to comply with the requirements of the above section, the Board of Health shall cause any and all nuisances to be removed or abated at the expense of the owner or occupants.

REGULATION 5TH. No hogs or goats shall be kept within the limits of this town, except in pastures, or in enclosures kept free from standing water, and regularly and freely disinfected.

REGULATION 6TH. It shall be the duty of occupants of dwellings in which any person or persons may be sick with small pox,* diphtheria or scarlet fever, and Physicians attending such cases forthwith to notify the Board of Health of the fact.

REGULATION 7TH. The occupants of buildings or dwellings where small pox exists, or has existed, shall prohibit and prevent the removal of clothes, bedding and upholstering, or other articles from the infected buildings or dwellings, except the removal is made by permission, or under direction of the Board of Health.

REGULATION 8TH. The occupants of buildings or dwellings where Scarlet Fever and Diphtheria exist shall withdraw all children attending school from the same; and the teachers of said schools shall not allow children thus withdrawn to re-enter the school until they shall present a certificate from the attending Physician vouching for the safety thereof.

REGULATION 9TH. Night soilcarts shall not be allowed to pass through the streets in the thickly settled portions of the town between sunrise and sunset, from May 1st to Nov. 1st, without a special permit from the Board of Health.

These Regulations will be Strictly Enforced.

The annual meeting of the Ladies' Benevolent Society was held Tuesday afternoon, May 5. The following ladies were elected officers for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. L. W. The following is an abstract of the Treasurer's report:

Balance May 1, 1884,	$111.32
Amount received from May 1, 1884, to May 5, 1885,	1365.03
Total,	$1476.35
Amount expended from May 1, 1884, to May 5, 1885,	$792.21
Balance May 5, 1885,	$684.14

$500 of the balance being the legacy of Mrs. Lydia P. Proctor.

The New England Meteorological Society proposes to investigate the phenomena of thunder storms during the summer of 1885, and for this purpose asks for volunteer observers throughout New England. Several classes of observations will be undertaken; those of the simplest class require no instruments and need but a small share of time during the passage of a thunderstorm; they can be made by children over twelve years of age as well as by adults, and may be taken either at home or while travelling from place to place during the summer. Instructions and blanks for records can be had on application to the Secretary New England Meteorological Society, Cambridge, Mass.

The Eastern Relief Association, organized in April, 1883, by the employes of the Eastern railroad, has been changed to the Boston & Maine Railroad Relief Association. The property and cash, to the amount of $482.13 has been transferred to the treasury of the new association. There are now 120 members, with a constant increase of membership. The officers for the year 1885,are, Daniel W.Sanborn, president; Augustus Colby, vice president; Arthur A. Ingalls, secretary and treasurer; directors, Oliver R. Russ, Charles E. Armitage, George E. Mudgett, Arthur Pickering, Alvestus A. Howe, John Bennett, James Kennedy, Edward E. Foy, William H. Hatch.

Judge Merrill has filed his findings in the inquest of Thomas R. Ingraham, who was killed at Needham's Crossing, April 15. It states that his death was caused by concussion of the brain, resulting from a collision with a locomotive on the Newburyport branch of the Boston & Maine Railroad. The railroad company had made arrangements to place an electric signal apparatus at that point and had engineers viewing the place a few days previous to the accident. No blame is attached to the train hands.

Farmers complain about the cold weather and say it will make late cornplanting. Suppose it does. If it had been warm and they had planted, and a cold snap had come, they would have grumbled awfully about loosing their crop because it was "too cold for it to grow." Let them get everything ready and when the proper time comes plant their crops without grumbling, remembering that the Lord hath promised "seed time and harvest shall continue forever!"

Mr. E. C. Farwell, who has lately purchased the "Highland Farm" in this town, comes from Peabody, where he is a prominent member of the "West Peabody Farmers' Club," which he was instrumental in starting. Mr. Farwell proposes to make a specialty of dairying and hopes to obtain sufficient patronage to encourage him in continuing in that line of business. Mr. Farwell is a thoroughly practical farmer and will endeavor to make the "Highland farm" an institution of the town.—Wakefield Bulletin.

We learned that one of our citizens asked a certain, very conservative Fire Insurance company, of this town, to issue a policy on Brown's Pond, whereupon it refused on account of the proximity of the ice houses.

The bill allowing banks, trust companies, savings banks and others having money on deposit subject to draft to pay checks or drafts drawn by persons alone in business in case of the death of such persons has been signed by the Governor. Under this new law a savings bank may pay the amount of an order any time within thirty days after the date in case of the signer's death without fear of litigation, and at any time beyond that period unless notified of the death of the depositor. National banks and all other depositories are allowed ten days from date of check.

The great red spot on Jupiter is disappearing in a curious way. An oval white spot now covers all its central portion, leaving only a narrow ring of the red substance visible around its edge. The white spot is quite regular in form, and very nearly concentric with the red spot, which it appears to be gradually covering up. Its whiteness is not very intense, but about the same as the general surface of the planet near it, so that as soon as it covers the red ring still remaining, all trace of the remarkable phenomenon which has been watched with so much interest for the last eight years, will be entirely lost.

A gentleman who owns a piece of land in the vicinity of Quint's farm has been considerably troubled by trespassers. He had recently got his land sewed down to grass when a lot of hoodlums thought it would make a good polo field and used it for that purpose, doing considerable damage. The owner would pay a liberal reward for the conviction of the parties who did it.

Mrs. Flora M., wife of Mr. Willard Spaulding, died at her home in Salem, last Friday afternoon, at the age of 35 years, after a lingering illness of consumption. She was a lady of many fine qualities and was loved by a large circle of acquaintances in this town. She was the only child of Andrew Gage, the well known painter. She leaves, besides her aged parents, a husband and two children to mourn her loss.

The Building Committee of the new school house met last Wednesday evening and awarded the contract to Geo. Spaulding for $6195, his being the lowest bid. When the bids were opened the night before, it was found that J. R. Wingate & Co. were the lowest, but as the committee thought all the bids were too high, the plans were modified a little and Spaulding and Wingate asked to bid again with the result above stated.

The following is said to be an infallible test for oleomargarine: "Stir half a teaspoonful of the suspected butter in enough sulphuric ether to dissolve it. By the time the grease is dissolved the ether will have evaporated and the residum will show, to smell or taste, whether it is butter, lard or tallow. Five cents' worth of ether will suffice for several tests."

The agent for the board of health made his travels early one morning last week, and posted the usual notices. The next time he will take along in his travels a new broom, shovels, whitewash and chloride of lime, particularly if he visits Frog Island. He says there are eight goats to the square inch over there with only a ledge to feed on.

It is worthy of comment that the ribs of parasols will this year be flatter than they were last season. This fact may not be noticed unless attention is called to it. Otherwise there is little change. Ladies who intended to make use of their last year's parasols will observe that the least departure from the latest idea will be noted.

The Annual Sabbath School Convention of the Salem Baptist Association, will be held at the Washington Street Church, Lynn, next Thursday. Addresses are expected from Rev. R. D. Grant of Wakefield, Rev. Mr. Barbour of Fall River, Mrs. A. J. Gordon of Boston, Mrs. Porter, of Concord, N. H., and others.

Sealing wax is made to convey tender sentiments. The ordinary red wax signifies business, and black is used only for mourning and condolence. But blue means love, and the different tints portray each stage of the tender passion. Pink means congratulation and white is used for wedding invitations. Variegated colors show conflicting emotions.

Report is current this morning that there was a severe case of whipping in the Bowditch school, and that a boy named Masterson was struck over the head with a ruler by one of the female teachers, making a deep cut which bled profusely. The case will probably be reported to the committee.

Those who were startled this morning by seeing a fancy team with spotted horses and bells and music should not think a circus had struck the town. It was only heralding the coming of a travelling medicine man who uses this method of advertising. There is nothing dangerous about it.

Nugent Bros. are offering unusual bargains in Slippers this month. *

Mrs. James W. McLean goes with her family this week to join her husband at Butte City, Montana, a place of 15,000 inhabitants. The following resolution was passed at the last meeting of the Band of Hope: Resolved,that we hereby express to Cora McLean and her three brothers our deep regret at losing them from the Peabody Band of Hope, by their removal to Butte City, Montana. As they go from us our best wishes will follow them, that they may ever be true to their Pledge, and always be known as earnest workers in the cause of Temperance and Prohibition. An autograph album was presented to Cora, containing this resolution, and the names of the thirty-five members who were present at the meeting.

Saturday night, Henry Newhall, of South Peabody, went into a store in Salem, leaving his horse standing in the street in front, fastened with a weight, but on coming out some minutes later, he found that the team had disappeared. Mr. Newhall took the horse car for Peabody, and then to his home in South Peabody, thinking the horse might have arrived there; but, not finding him, Mr. Newhall again started for Salem to resume his search, but without success. Sunday morning the horse was found at Simond's stable, where he had been brought by a man who found the animal on Washington street, leisurely walking along, having dragged his weight all the way from Salem.

Officer Goodwin has been presented with a rooster. It came by express and he hasn't yet decided to whom to return thanks. And such a rooster, it looked as if one of those New York tenement houses had fallen on it. It was so old it had shed all its tail feathers but one, and was ball headed clear down its neck. It was put out on the lawn last Saturday morning and the dogs that killed Brown's hens turned up their noses at it, while a tramp who passed couldn't be induced to steal it. It roosted in the police smoking room one night, and the police polo club used it for a ball and their feet for polo sticks. We advise the officers to have it stuffed and mounted and present it to the Essex Institute as a rare curiosity.

Edson Bros., of Lynn, have hired the two stores in Sutton Block, formerly occupied by Jacobs and Spofford,and an archway between them is being built. They will carry groceries and provisions. Mr. Wm. Emerson, one of our well known young men, will be in charge.

Last Monday forenoon one of Henry Batchelder's horses, attached with a mate to one of his ice teams, ran away on Franklin street dragging its mate with it. He brought up against a tree on Lowell street, breaking the pole of the wagon off short and doing other slight injury.

Mr. Leland T. Powers was greeted with a fair house last Thursday evening at the Institute, and he sustained the high reputation he won on a former visit. Prof. Maynard was equally as pleasing as on a former occasion. It was a most enjoyable evening.

The lawyer who filed a bill, cut an acquaintance, split a hair, made an entry, got up a case, framed an indictment, empannelled a jury, put them into a box, nailed a witness, hammered a judge, and bored a whole court, all in a day, has since given up law and turned carpenter.

Officers Peasley, Sweeney, Goodwin and Crowley, with officers Barrenson and Skinner of Salem, raided the notorious rum hole on Shillaber street, kept by one Campbell, yesterday, and captured a large quantity of ale, whiskey and rum. In fact they cleaned out the place.

The Government has furnished upon application of Union Post 50, G. A. R., twenty-seven headstones from the marble works at Lee, Mass., for the graves of the soldiers and sailors of this town who have died, and who have no stones to mark their graves.

Owners of fighting birds in West Lynn and Peabody met in the woods last Sunday afternoon between these two places, with their birds, and there were several lively fights. Considerable money changed hands, the loss falling heavily on the Lynnites.

Carpenters are building a frame house on the Upham farm at West Peabody, for the French Canadians, who will work the gravel pit for the North River filling. The job will probably last till November.

Complaint is made in regard to the slates on the corner of the roof of the South Church, that the first high wind will blow some of them off.

The most useful aid for housekeepers at this time is Mr. H. F. Lawrence, who is back at his old quarters, all reports to the contrary notwithstanding. He is doing lots of first class work.

A little girl named Gertie Crowley, wandered from her home on Willow street yesterday, and was found by Chief Peasley on Central street near the pottery, who returned her to her parents.

CATARRH.

BY A. P. LIGHTHILL, M. D.

The earliest symptoms of Catarrh is a discharge from the head, consisting sometimes of a clear acid fluid, but oftener of a thick, fœtid, purulent yellow or greenish matter, which is usually secreted in excessive abundance, and discharged through the nostrils or throat, and frequently by both channels.

The nature of this discharge varies in different cases, and even in the same individual at different times. In some it is copious, and of a loose or fluid character, while in others it is very viscid or gummy, adhering to the diseased membrane with glue-like tenacity; often this offensive matter concretes in dry, hard masses of crusts, which obstruct breathing, and are very difficult to detach, their dislodgment requiring most violent efforts. Sometimes these incrustations come away in lumps of a deep green tint, but occasionally in broad and flat casts of a notable size, on which traces of blood may at times be observed. This condition is very liable to run to serious ulceration, involving a loss of the bony structure of the nose and a subsequent flattening of that organ, and is invariably accompanied by a breath of exceedingly fœtid and sickening odor. In some cases it becomes so revoltingly offensive as to render the sufferer an object of disgust to himself as well as to others.

The nasal membrane is thickened and congested, causing the nose to be stopped up, sometimes on one side, sometimes on the other, and often on both, giving rise to a disagreeable, stuffy sensation in the head, and occasionally to violent paroxysms of sneezing.

A feeling of fullness, heat, irritation, soreness or pain is generally experienced in the nostrils, near the root of the nose, as well as in the upper part of the throat, above and below the soft palate. A distressing sensation of heavy weight or compression is usually complained of over the forehead, especially in the region immediately above and between the eyes. Sometimes the pain is obstinately fixed in one particular part, as in the temples, on top of the head, at the back of the neck, or behind the orbits; and occasionally it manifests itself in the face, of so severe a character that it is frequently mistaken for neuralgia.

The voice is generally affected, and becomes hoarse, weak and uneven, assuming a nasal character, or an unpleasant sniffling quality. Cough of variable severity is not unfrequently one of the symptoms and results of Catarrh.

The sense of smell is generally blunted or entirely lost, and a similar effect on taste may be occasionally observed. The eyes are apt to become irritable, and disposed to water excessively on exposure to the cold or wind, and a sense of weariness of sight is usually experienced after slight exertious. Hearing becomes frequently more or less impaired, and noises in the head very often add materially to the existing distress.

The stomach generally suffers more or less, and becomes weak and irritable; the appetite is capricious, and nearly always bad in the morning.

The patient often complains of lassitude and fatigue, an incapacity for either physical or mental exertions, and a constant disposition to drowsiness and sleep. The mental faculties are also sometimes slightly affected, loss of memory being not unfrequently experienced.

Catarrh may prove fatal, either by debilitating the system and wearing out the patient, or by travelling downward and producing consumption. This fact has been so repeatedly noticed that all experienced practitioners now look upon Catarrh as one of the earliest manifestations of this dreaded complaint. Among educated physicians in this or any other country, Dr. Lighthill was the first to devote his study and investigation to the cure of Catarrh and kindred diseases, and the happy results which attended his labor have been attested to by many of the most prominent citizens of Boston and vicinity. Cases abandoned as hopeless by other physicians have promptly yielded to his painless and effective treatment.

ASTHMA

For years Dr. Lighthill has made this distressing disease his special study, investigating carefully the causes that produce it; his labor was fully rewarded, for he not only established its true pathological condition, but also discovered a new and correct system of treatment for its cure. Hundreds of cases who have been under his care have found permanent relief from this wonderful discovery, from the beginning of this treatment prompt benefit is experienced which is ultimately followed by a complete and radical cure.

An experience of 30 years of constant practice enables Dr. Lighthill to decide on the first examination as to the cureability of any disease within specialty, and no case will be accepted for treatment unless the chances are for favorable results. His specialty comprises the cure of and affections of the Nervous system from whatever cause.

CHAS. MASON, Commissioner of Patents.

"Inventors cannot employ a person more trustworthy or more capable of securing for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office."

EDMUND BURKE, late Com. of Patents.

BOSTON, Oct. 19, 1870.

R. H. EDDY, Esq.—Dear Sir: you procured for me, in 1870, my first patent. Since then you have acted for and advised me in hundreds of cases, and procured many patents, re-issues and extensions. I have occasionally employed the best agencies in New York, Philadelphia and Washington, but I still give you almost the whole of my business, in your line, and advise others to employ you.

Yours truly, GEORGE DRAPER.

A Persian Wedding.

'WHEN THE BANDS BEGAN TO PLAY.'

At important Persian weddings there are two bands of musicians, Mussulmana and Jews, the latter a ragged and motley crew, but more skillful than their better-clad rivals. They carry with them their strange Old World instruments. Noticeable among the Mussulman musicians is the dohol player and his instrument. It is a species of big drum, used only at weddings, and once heard, the awful resonant roar it makes can never be forgotten. When all is ready, the master of the house, dressed in his best, gives a last anxious glance at the preparations, has an excited discussion with his wife or wives, waves his hand to the musicians and hurries to a seat near the door, to be ready to welcome his guests.

The music strikes up a merry tune; the tremendous din of the dohol is heard at intervals. Then, in a loud scream, rises the voice of the principal solo singer, who commences one of the sad-love songs of Persia in a high falsetto voice. He keeps correct time on the tambourine, which he plays with consummate skill. The rest of the musicians watch his every movement and all join in the chorus of 'Ah, Leila, Leila, you have made roast meat of my heart!'

The music is the signal to the invited guests, who now commence to arrive in crowds. The men appear in their best; the women, closely vailed, pass on into the anderun, where they unvail and appear to their delighted hostesses in their finest clothes and all their jewelry, and in most cases with their faces carefully painted.

As the dresses worn among Persian ladies for indoor use reach only to the knee and are very much bouffe, their wearers look like opera-dancers. The ladies' feet and legs are bare, as a rule; the colors of their clothes are of the brightest. Everyone takes tea, everyone crunches the sweets of various kinds which are piled on china dishes in huge trays in the center of the rooms.

At noon a heavy breakfast is served. Lutis or buffoons now bring their performing monkeys or bears.

Dinner is served on the same lavish scale as the breakfast. And now there is a hum of suspense. It is night, and the whole place is lighted up by lamps, candles in shades and lanterns. A noise of a distant crowd is heard. The procession of the bridegroom is approaching, and it must be understood that another grand party has been going on at his father's house. The musicians play and sing their loudest. The bridegroom and his friends arrive and are welcomed by the women with a peculiar echoing cry. Then the bride appears, carefully vailed. She goes to the door and mounts a gayly-caparisoned horse. All the male guests join the procession. Lighted cressets are carried on high poles to lead and light the way. As the procession approaches the house of the bridegroom, several sheep are sacrificed in honor of the bride; they are slain at her feet as she steps over her husband's threshold for the first time, accompanied by a female friend or two. Then, invoking blessings on the pair, all wend their way home and the festival is over.

HIS LOSS WAS HER GAIN.—"Well madam," said a fashionable physician to a wealthy lady patient, "if you don't like my prescriptions, perhaps you had better try Parker's Tonic, or some other quack stuff." "You don't mean it Doctor," she answered, "but your advice may be good for all that. Sometimes what you call 'quack stuff' is the best and most scientific medicine, after all." She got a bottle of Parker's Tonic and it cured her of neuralgia arising from disordered stomach and nerves. She told her friends, and now they all keep a doctor at home in the form of Parker's Tonic.

Mother, do not call me early,
  Let me rest in sweet repose—
Make a fire in the kitchen,
  Put away my Sunday clothes,
When you get the breakfast ready
  Keep it warm upon the shelf.
Don't forget your darling, mother,
  You were once a girl yourself.

Erie, Pa., Graphic.

Several papers in reporting the arrest of Dr. John H. Doherty for larceny from Chas. D. Wood, of Boston, described the doctor as of Salem, this is a mistake, as he belongs in Lawrence and was never in Salem, but a very short time.

MAYO'S

Compound Vegetable Anæsthetic.

A safe and pleasant substitute for gas and ether.

Discovered by Dr. N. K. Mayo of Boston, April 1883, subsequently administered by him in nearly two thousand cases, producing perfect slumber, being applicable to the child, the delicate sentitive woman as well as the hardy man. No ill effects have followed its use in any case, it acting rather as a vegetable tonic.

It controls the patient one-fourth longer than gas giving us time to remove from three to twenty teeth. It is with great confidence we have introduced it into our practice, giving very successful results.

EXZEMA OR SALT RHEUM.

ANOTHER CLEAR AND POSITIVE RECOVERY—

AN ELDERLY LADY'S LETTER.

Among the numerous letters received by Dr. Kennedy testifying to notable Salt Rheum cures, the following will be found of interest to our readers, who may accept our assurance of its perfect authenticity and truthfulness:

WORCESTER, Mass., March 23, 1884.

Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.

Dear Sir: Until recently I have been for three years a sufferer from Salt Rheum. It followed upon an attack of Erysipelas, for which I was for a long time under medical treatment. I placed myself again in the hands of the physicians who did, I have no doubt, all that could be done. One thing is sure, however, I was none the better for all the medicine they gave me. The painful and unsightly disease made continual progress, until I began to fear I should never get rid of it.

By means of one of those accidents that often result in so much blessing I had my attention called to your FAVORITE REMEDY, which I was told would surely do me good. I used it, and within a much shorter time than I would have believed possible, I received a permanent cure. I am now perfectly free from Salt Rheum. What a comfort this is, and how it places your wonderful medicine in my opinion, you may guess at, but never know. I keep it now constantly in the house as a family medicine. Yours truly, MRS. DINAH PHAIR.

Mrs. Phair sometime since, when on a visit to Kansas, found a case of Salt Rheum, could not get FAVORITE REMEDY, sent to New York City for it, and cured the case.

For all diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, Bladder and Digestive Organs, Dr. David Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY, Rondout, N. Y.

MALARIA.

As an anti-malarial medicine

DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S

FAVORITE REMEDY

has won golden opinions. No traveler should consider his outfit complete unless it includes a bottle of this medicine. If you are exposed to frequent changes of climate, food and water, Favorite Remedy should always be within your reach. It expels malarial poisons, and is the best preventative of chills and malarial fever in the world. It is especially offered as a trustworthy specific for the cure of Kidney and Liver complaints, Constipation and all disorders arising from an impure state of the blood. To women who suffer from any of the ills peculiar to their sex Favorite Remedy is constantly proving itself an unfailing friend—a real blessing. Address the proprietor, Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y. $1 bottle, 6 for $5. by all druggists.

Book Notices.

The contributions to the May number of the Magazine of American History are not only varied, scholarly, and valuable, but of a widely popular character. The opening is "Commodore Matthew Calbraith Perry," of whom William Elliot Griffis writes with a skill pen; the second article, "The Heart of Louisiana." Both of these notable papers are handsomely illustrated. "The Fallacy of 1776" is an earnest and comprehensive discussion of the real origin of our late civil war, by A. W. Clason. "The Ancient Races of America," by G. P. Thruston, of Nashville, Tennessee; "The Hungry Pilgrims," by E. H. Goss; "The Sackville Papers," by Prof. Channing, of Harvard College; and "Pocahontas and Captain Smith," by Charles Deane, LL. D., Vice-President of the Massachusetts Historical Society, are all excellent as well as readable. But the contribution that will probably attract the most immediate attention is that of "General Roger Enos—A Lost Chapter of Arnold's Expedition to Canada in 1775," by Rev. Horace Edwin Hayden. Charles Ledyard Norton concludes his "Political Americanisms;" Price $5.00 a year in advance. Published at 30 Lafayette Place, New York City.

"Ladies' Day at the Ranch" is the taking title of a paper in the forthcoming (June) Harper's describing life on a Western ranch, owned by "quite an ideal firm"—"consisting as it did of a Millionaire blissfully indifferent to the ways in which his millions were being spent a Man of Leisure, with nothing to do but to travel—for the best interests of the concern—between New York and Carnerio, and an enthusiast who desired nothing but the privilege of doing all the work." It was the Enthusiast, of course, who lived at the ranch, and one spring the family of the Man of Leisure took it into their heads to visit him, and liked the life so well that they stayed from April to November. The paper gives a very lively description of that life, its perils and fascinations—a strange enough piece of literature to those accustomed to the well-marked roads of settled states. The paper is written by Alice Wellington Rollins, and charmingly illustrated by R. Swain Gifford and his wife.

POLITICAL PULL is a rather uncertain thing to depend upon as a basis for obtaining the necessaries of life. With the frequent changes of party somebody is sure to get left, so that on the whole any man of brains and ability is really fortunate if, by missing a fat public job, he is compelled to take up some such business as an agency for Dr. Foote's "Plain Home Talk," which is sure to be a good paying business as long as he will devote himself to it. A really popular medical book such as "Plain Home Talk," sells at all times and in all places, and often the best ground for an agency is that which has already been plowed over once or twice by an agent. There is room for all who will apply to the Murray Hill Publishing Co., 129 East 28th St., N. Y. City, and "first come, first served."

FEW PEOPLE ESCAPE the taint of scrofula in the blood. With many it is hereditary; but it may also be acquired from want of air or lack of exercise, from improper food, or any cause which brings about weakness of the body and impurity of the blood. The disease is characterized by running sores, abscesses, swellings, enlarged joints, sore eyes, etc. No medicine has been so successful in curing scrofula, as Hood's Sarsaparilla. The most terrible running sores gradually disappear under the purifying and strengthening influences of this great medicine. If you are a sufferer from scrofula and desire more evidence as to the wonderful success of Hood's Sarsaparilla, send to C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass., for a book containing many remarkable cures.

A new novel, "Troubled Waters," by Beverley Ellison Warner, is announced for early issue by J. B. Lippincott Company. The work takes its name from the present unsettled relations of employer and employed, which receive much attention in the course of the narrative. In this respect it occupies middle ground between "The Bread Winners" and "The Money Makers," and suggests a more harmonious co-operation of labor and capital than at present exists. The author, having had considerable experience in the subjects incidentally discussed, has written a very interesting story, which displays much skill, and is likely to attract general attention.

The May number of the Young Ladies' Journal is received fresh from the International News Company of New York. It is needless to say that it is equal to any previous number. It contains hundreds of fashion plates, many of them on a mammoth supplement, and the usual colored plate supplement. The magazine contains a large number of different designs in fancy work and bric brac. It is indispensible in every family where they have children, or do their own dress making, as it contains more fashion plates than half a dozen ordinary fashion magazines.

BETTER THAN SHE EXPECTED.—"Your letter received. In reply I am happy to say that Parker's Hair Balsam did much more for me than you said it would, or than I expected. My hair has not only stopped falling out, but the bald spots are all covered, and all my hair has grown thicker, softer and more lively than it was before my sickness a year ago. Thank you again and again." Extract from letters of Mr. R. W. T., West Fifty-third street, New York.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Engineers was held last Wednesday evening. The committee to whom was left the matter of revising the By Laws, reported the following changes. The portion of Article 4 relating to the running of substitutes, was struck out. Article 6, that two first companies arriving at fire attach to hydrant and all others to report to Engineers or officers in command, was stricken out. Art 11, in regard to removal of property from the engine houses it was changed from requiring the consent of a majority of the Engineers to "require the consent of three of the Engineers or the Engineer in charge of the house." Art. 17 the full direction of a steamer is taken from the engineer running the engine and given to the foreman of the company, the part in regard to the handling of the engine being stricken out. The By Laws were then adopted as amended. Wm. H. Joll, Jr., was approbated a member of Steamer No. 1; Harry G. Robbins, as a member of Steamer 2, in place of W. C. Munroe, resigned; John F. Halpin to Hose 4, in place of F. H. C. Lord, resigned; Josiah B. Thomas and Wm. W. Doughty to Hose 1, in place of John H. Torr and William H. Joll, Jr., resigned, and John Boyle as substitute for J. B. Thomas. The matter of a gong for Steamer 2 and headlights for Hook and Ladder No. 1, was referred to Messrs. Roome and Tibbetts, report at next meeting. Voted that Chief Roome be authorized to purchase one dozen lanterns similar to the ones on Steamer 1, for the use of department. Engineer Reed was authorized to purchase curtains for Hose 5. Roome and Tibbetts were authorized to make necessary repairs on the steamers. Chas. Enos was appointed engineer of Steamer 1; John A. P. Sumner, engineer of Steamer 2; and Charles H. Smart, janitor of the brick house. It was voted to pay spare drivers $1.50 per day of duty. Wm. W. Reed was chosen Director of the Relief Association for the Board of Engineers. Voted that Roome, Tibbetts and Reed confer with the Selectmen in regard to changing the horse of Hose 1. John H. Tibbetts was added to the committee to procure new hose carriage for Hose 5. Bills were approved, and the repairs on the houses of Hose 2 and 4 were referred to the committee on that duty.

An alarm of fire was given Friday forenoon from the bell on No. 4's house for a slight blaze in the house of Mrs. Julia Cotter, on Shillaber street, just over the line in Salem. The fire, which caught from some clothes left hanging behind a stove, spread to the mantle piece and was running up on the side of the room when discovered. The woman of the house had stepped out to some of the neighbors and had left three small children in the house, two up stairs and one on the lower floor. When she opened the door the house was filled with smoke, but she rushed in and got out the child nearest her, and in a few minutes with the help of the neighbors got out the two who were above, who would have been suffocated in a few minutes more. The fire was put out with several buckets of water. The fire department made unusually good time, the apparatus from the brick house putting in an appearance at Pierpont street in less than five minutes from the time the bell on No. 4 struck and Hose 3 was only a minute or two behind. Hose 5 came down as far as the pumping station. Hose 4 was troubled with a balky horse on their return from the alarm. Engineer Tibbetts was in Salem, and received the alarm by telephone, but in just eight minutes he was in Peabody.

A little fire was discovered in the bark mill of Chas. Harrington & Co., on Walnut street, Thursday afternoon, which was extinguished without material damage.

Monday evening the annual meeting of the Relief Association was held in the Town Hall and the following officers were elected: President, D. S. Littlefield; Vice President, Charles G. Folsom; Secretary, John F. Moreland; Treasurer, Daniel B. Lord; Director, William W. Reed; Board of Engineers, George H. Carr, Steamer 1; M. W. Cummings, Steamer 2; Joseph H. Miller, H. & L. 1; Fred. B. Thomas, Hose 1; George O. Pierce, Hose 2; Charles H. Hooper, Hose 3; Charles A. Halpin, Hose 4; Walter Curtis, Hose 5. The association has paid benefits to five injured members the past year, amounting to $66, and now has a fund of $2331 on hand. The association is richer by over $200 than a year ago.

Chief Engineer Roome visited Lynn Monday morning, and in company with Chief Moody, inspected the department houses, the swing harnesses and electrical arrangements.

At the meeting of Steamer 2, held last evening, John F. Morland was elected Foreman in place of John A. P. Sumner, resigned, and H. J. G. Kimball Assistant Foreman, vice Chas. W. Childs resigned. The office of 2d Assistant Foreman was dropped as being unnecessary. George N. Miller and George A. Voorhees were elected members to fill vacancies. It was also voted to accept the invitation of Hose Company 1 to attend the supper given by that company at the engine house next Thursday evening.

Hose 1 will give a supper to the members of the companies in the brick house, the officers of the companies outside the brick house, the Board of Engineers, the old board, foreman of four out of town companies and other invited guests, at the engine house Thursday evening. This is to be a complimentary supper.

Saturday evening the members of Gen. Sutton S. F. E. Co. No. 1 presented Chief Engineer Roome with a fine white rubber service coat and a Chief's hat front. The chief responded, thanking the boys for their useful presents.

Ulick A. Brophy has been appointed fireman of Steamer 1.

Charles H. Stanton has resigned as a member of Hose 4, dating from May 5th.

Hose company 1 have just refurnished their room.

Saturday, Engineers Reed and Tibbetts went to Boston and closed a bargain with the Abbott Downing company of Concord, N. H., for the purchase of the hose wagon which that concern had on exhibition at the fairs in Boston last fall. The wagon is eight feet long, weighs 1400 pounds and is fitted with gong, hand rails for the sides and back of the seat, step behind, canvas cover tightly strapped to the top of the body to cover the hose, and has all the modern appliances of such a wagon. It is painted in lake with panels of blue and will be lettered "Hose Wagon 5, Peabody." The wagon was shipped to Concord, Monday, where it will be varnished, lettered and receive some slight improvements, and will be ready for delivery to the town in about three weeks. The cost was $510, or nearly $200 cheaper than a hose reel.

Steamer 2 will answer all first alarms for the rest of the month. Steamer 1 is being repacked and other improvements made.

The Engineers will probably dispose of "Old Charlie" the hose horse, and whoever gets him will get a prize, for he is a good horse to work and can be trusted anywhere.

The Senate on Thursday indefinitely postponed action on the uniform fire hose coupling bill. Z.

SOUTH PEABODY.

There will be a Sabbath School concert at the church vestry next Sunday evening.

Lynn street is in better condition now than it has been for several years. J. B. knows how to make a road and clean up as he goes along.

Mr. Thomas Larrabee has removed with his family to Woburn, to engage in farming at that place.

We are glad to know that the condition of Mrs. Wesley is very much improved.

Mr. Joseph Brown has removed to the house of Mrs. Tudbury's on Lynn Street.

The funeral of Mrs. Orranna Barrett took place from the residence of her sister, Mrs. J. M. Newhall's in Wyoma last Friday, a large circle of relatives and friends being present. The remains were placed in Cedar Grove Cemetery.

Rev. J. W. Colwell exchanged pulpits with Rev. Mr. Brickett of So. Lynnfield last Sunday.

H. N. Batchelder comes out with newly painted teams this spring, also three new horses.

The public telephone at the post office is to be removed the 15th of this month, on account of insufficient patronage. This is to be regretted as it is a great convenience to this part of the town and puts us an easy communication with the village. Probably if those who patronize it would guarantee a small sum each, it could be retained.

Mrs. Martha Basford's house on Washington street, is receiving a coat of paint very much to the improvement of the same.

The old, and at one time famous Granite House on Lynnfield street, is being remodeled and improved by Mr. Lev Spaulding, who is doing the carpenter work. A large barn will be built and the place put in thorough repair. It is at present owned by a Boston party.

The case of a few of the heirs of the late Mrs. Betsey Bowers, who sued the administrator of the estate, Mr. Lewis Brown, came up before Judge Allen, of the Supreme Court, in Salem, to day. After hearing the evidence on both sides, the Judge allowed the bill of Hartwell, in full. This is a case, the particulars of which we have given before. Hartwell's bill was for taking care of the old lady four years previous to death. The verdict gives general satisfaction in this part of the town.

RAILROAD HEARING.

About a dozen persons were present last Saturday afternoon, at the hearing given by the Selectmen, on the petitions of the Naumkeag Street Railway. Chairman Southwick read the first petition, which asked permission to lay a double track from the Salem line to Washington street. Mr. Edgar Upton wanted to know how much of the road would be taken care of by the company, and were informed that they took care of 18 inches outside of the tracks. Mr. N. H. Poor asked the reason for this proposed double track.

President Odell said there was considerable complaint, from Peabody people, caused by the cars having to wait, in order to pass on turn outs or double tracks, and with the proposed new track, the cars could go right along making better time. He also thought they would get a double track from the big tree to a point in the Hollow, where they could see the approach of cars coming in the other direction.

Supt. Ferguson said, that when the cars ran up as far as Endicott street, they would have to meet each time further this way, and if we had the double track we should not interfere with the Lynn cars.

Charles B. Farley thought the people would be better accommodated by granting the petition and allowing the track to be laid provided it could be done without injury to the abuttors. There being no further remarks Mr. Southwick read the second petition, which asked permission to straighten the track, beginning at the Warren National Bank and continuing to the present terminus of the track. There were plans submitted showing the track as straightened, and it run within a few inches of the curbstone in front of the Upton building.

Mr. Farley said representing the Upton estate he was opposed to the location of the track as shown on the plan. That the building had been used as a large manufactory at one time, and while perhaps it might not interfere with the present occupants, he didn't know how soon the building might be used for other purposes. He would ask the Selectmen to have the track carried over so far from the curbstone that there would be ample room for a team to back up to the stores. He thought they might make a slight curve from the Bank over toward the monument, and then again to a straight line up Lowell street. He thought it better to locate it right in the first place, than to change the track after it was down. Another reason for his change was, that a team coming from Foster street would have to cross both tracks according to the plan, but with the change he suggested a team could turn the corner without crossing the track at all. He objected to the location of the road as shown on the plan, but not to the straightening of the track.

Mr. Odell said the company were willing to leave the matter to the judgment of the Selectmen.

Mr. Ferguson said the tenant of the corner store wanted the track to come as near the curbstone as possible.

Mr. Farley said he and the tenant had a perfect understanding in regard to the matter, as he had given him to understand that there was no objection to his using the store for a horse car office, provided it was under his own supervision and was not sub-let to any one.

Edgar Upton said if the company would have at least twelve feet between the curbstone and track he would make no objection, although he had rather have it twenty feet. There being no further remarks the meeting adjourned.

The Selectmen voted to allow the Naumkeag Street Railway to extend the double tracks from the Salem line to Washington street, the new track to be a flat rail. They also voted to allow them to straighten their track near the Warren Bank building the double track to extend to the easterly line of Foster street from which point the track will be single. Voted to desire the exact location of the extension of the track up Lowell, as being in the centre of the street, from the easterly line of Foster street to Endicott street.

ASHTON

There is a class of people who manage to slip through this world without paying their debts, they run up a bill at one grocery store, and when paying time comes they transfer their patronage to another without paying the first. One of these families located in a respectable neighborhood, recently, hiring a house of a widow lady of limited means, and as they did not pay their rent she was obliged to lease her property to get rid of them. Their goods were finally put into the street, and remained out of doors two days, before they could find a landlord, who would let them have a house, so poor was their reputation.

A large black dog was seen to walk along Main street, the other day, at peace with all the world. He trotted leisurely into a store, and came out with a piece of meat, which he took to the other side of the street and quickly devoured. The store keeper had a revengeful look about the eyes, as he watched the dog eat his stolen meat. Afterwards he was seen coaxing that canine to again enter the store, and he succeeded. But alas for the poor dog, when he came out, there was a blown up paper bag attached to his tail and on it in plain letters the words, "Give this dog a kick." This invitation was readily complied with by the standing committee on the outside, and the dog went howling home to his master.

One of our fasionable boarding houses, and we haven't got many, has been victimized recently by a fellow giving his name as Henry Goodman, who claimed Rochester, N. Y., as his home. He engaged board three weeks ago, and was all the time expecting money from his father, or words to that effect. He had worked himself into the confidence and indebtedness of his boarding mistress, and last Sunday told her he intended to visit Lynn, and would return by nine o'clock. She has waited since for his return, and all she has got to show for three weeks' board is a two dollar dilapitated trunk with nothing in it and the word "Harry" in brass headed nails on the side.

Of course this didn't happen in town, or to any of our lawyers who lived some where else before they came here. But it is the way I heard it, and if the case should be called for trial, you would learn all the particulars. A young lawyer who still disseminates the wisdom of Solon, has threatened a suit worthy of mention. One of his friends engaged in the cigar and tobacco business was called upon by the young lawyer the first day, who after looking over the place and investing in a cigar, and having it put on the slate, inquired if the tobacconist had procured a license. He said he had, but as the show case was not arranged, it still remained in the envelope. With a parting injunction, he advised him to display the document, and departed, but came again, and had more cigars placed to his credit on the slate, and gave some more advice about the position the license should occupy. After a while the bill assumed princely proportions and looked as if it might have belonged to Gen. Grant, before he left off smoking. He presented the bill to the lawyer, and was confronted with one of about three times the amount for legal advice, about the license. The lawyer also said he was tired trading at that store, and would not take cigars for the balance of his bill, but would sue the dealer for counsel fees.

The last two or three warm days has brought a large number of couples to the old trysting place—the Swampscott road. This place is always the "lovers walk" of Peabody and almost any summer night many couples can be seen in "close communion, soul to soul."

General Passenger Agent Tuttle of the Boston & Lowell road now has in press one of the most elaborate pamphlets ever issued, giving a description of the White Mountains and all the other favorite resorts along that Company's line. The engravings and maps are all new and decidedly better than any ever sent out before, while the descriptive part, besides giving every possible bit of information that can possibly be desired by the summer tourist, will furnish really interesting reading.

Mr. Harry Livingstone, the manager of the Great Overland & Pacific Tea Company, 209 Essex street, Salem, lost a very valuable Sheperd dog on Monday morning. Fortunately, however, one of the drivers of his team found the puppy and carried it home last night.

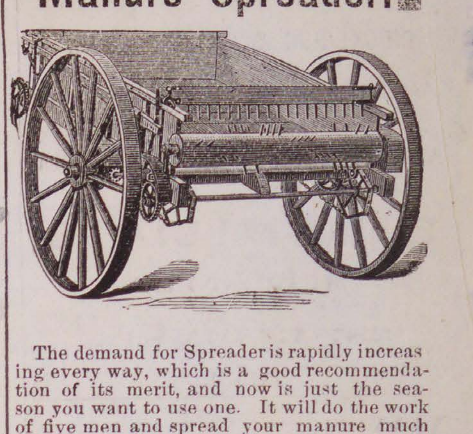
THE KEMPS

Manure Spreader.



The demand for Spreader is rapidly increasing every way, which is a good recommendation of its merit, and now is just the season you want to use one. It will do the work of five men and spread your manure much finer, so the first good rain will completely dissolve it and give to the grass and vegetable roots nourishment much quicker and more evenly, than when spread the old way, by the shovelful.

You can't afford to be without one.

Poet's Corner.

*A Bit of Experience.

BY STELLA.

I have met with a good many people
In jogging o'er life's varied way;
I've encountered the clever, the simple,
The crabbed, the grave and the gay.
I have traveled with beauty, with virtue,
I have been with the ugly, the bad,
I have laughed with the ones who were merry,
And wept with ones who were sad.

One thing I have learned in my journey,
Ne'er to judge one by what he appears,
The eyes that seem sparkling with laughter,
Oft battle to keep back the tears;
And long, sanctimonious faces
Hide often the souls that are vile,
While the heart that is merry and cheerful
Is often the freest from guile.

And I have learned not to look for perfection
In one of our frail human kind,—
In hearts the most gentle and loving
Some blemish or fault we can find.
But yet I have ne'er found the creature
So low, so depraved or so mean,
But had some good impulse, some virtue,
That 'mong his bad traits might be seen.

And too I have learned that most friendships
We make, are as brittle as glass.
Just let a reverse overtake us
Our friends on the other side pass.
But ah! I have found some few loyal,
Some hearts ever loving and true,
And the joy and the peace they have brought me,
Have cheered me my whole journey through.

A Transcontinental Kiss.

He tried to kiss Miss Ouri,
But she wouldn't let him do it;
And she hinted very broadly,
If he tried again he'd rue it.

Then he went for Mrs. Sippi,
A sweetly blushing widdah,
But she said, "Utah-dy fellah,
Your suit I can't considdah.

"For I'm just engaged to Georgie,
And I never can Nevada
Man so dreadfully persistent;
He's an awful woman-raidah!

"Idaho'd a field of cotton
Rather'n leave this healthy section,
And I never liked a fellah
With so Florida complexion.

"I wouldn't a gone off with him,
Oregon with any other,
But Iowa lot of money
To a cruel-hearted brother;

"I wish you'd asked me soonah;
As it is, I must decline, ah;
So just call on Louisa Anna,
Or visit Carolina."

But he went to Minnie Sota,
Dressed in a suit of kersey;
And he told her if she'd have him,
He would buy her a New Jersey.

And now they're wed and happy,
And they live in Indiana,
And they're seriously thinking
Of naming her Montana.

Under a Crazy Quilt.

BY GEORGE COOPER.

He slept, and dreamt that the kangaroo
Had given a fancy ball,
The elephant came with the festive gnu,
The mouse with the ostrich tall.
A funny giraffe, that did nothing but laugh,
Dropped in with a centipede;
And a cricket and flea, that had just been to tea,
Waltzed round with remarkable speed.

A wasp and a bumblebee had a chat
Just over his little nose;
And a boa constrictor, upon the mat,
Dressed up in his Sunday clothes.
A crow and a raccoon, in a fire balloon,
Paused over his bed to sing;
And a neat armadillo crept up on his pillow
To dance the Highland fling.

Then all, ere they left, made a graceful bow,
And out in the moonlight sped;
Except a ponderous brindle cow,
Which stopped to stand on its head.
The little boy woke, and grinned at the joke;
Sprang out of bed with a lilt,
"I will dream it all over," said he, "if they cover
Me up with a crazy quilt."

Selected Story.

How I Won Her.

BY AN EX-LOVER.

The opening of the Grand Industrial Exposition had brought me to the city of Berlin in the early part of the Spring of 1883.

Tired from long standing and walking round, more tired still by the shows and wonderful exhibitions of the mighty progress of civilization displayed at this Exposition, I turned my steps homeward one afternoon earlier than usual.

I had taken leave of my friends, making an engagement for a meeting later on in the evening, and directed my course to one of the quiet quarters of the city in which my hotel was situated.

The less frequent the bazars and show windows became, so much more insignificant became the number of foot passengers in the streets.

But it seemed to me a much more stylish-looking part of the city than the public drives of the central portion, because here the high, grave-looking houses were either government offices, or were inhabited by city officials or wealthy private citizens.

Before me walked for some distance a young and elegantly attired lady.

At a curve of the street I succeeded in getting a fleeting glimpse of her profile, and felt myself thereby urged to observe carefully even the knot of golden, blonde, sunshiny hair, half covered by the dark, pretty hat, as well as the extremely delicate, graceful figure of the still youthful girl.

Suddenly her step faltered, she half-turned, lingered for a moment, and then walked hastily toward me, past me, and back over the road by which she had just come.

Not far ahead of us came sauntering along an officer, with a lady on his arm, gayly chatting and laughing. Could they have frightened my Unknown?

A sudden interest stirred within me; I wished to gain some insight into her strange conduct, and therefore, made a hasty turn, following her and keeping only a few paces behind.

Then I saw how she pressed the little clenched hand passionately to her heart, and, with tears in her violet eyes and a half-sad, half-scornful expression, murmured something to herself which my excited imagination fancied to be:

'O, foolish heart, why art thou not quiet? Why mounts the blood to my cheek and compels me to turn back lest I betray myself?'

This childish ebullition moved me unconsciously, and a feeling of jealousy stole over me against that officer whom I had involuntarily thought of in connection with this young girl. If I had only dared to address her—but that I could not bring myself to do.

She evidently belonged to the first class of society, and nothing was further from my thoughts than a desire to insult or intrude upon her. But fortune favored her.

A small package which she had hitherto carried slipped from her arm without her having remarked it.

Quickly I picked it up and gave it back to its fair owner, with a few polite words.

She looked at me with a surprised, somewhat haughty glance, as I remained standing before her rather longer than was absolutely necessary. Her large, violet, child-like eyes were still filled with tears, and the delicate face was deathly pale.

'I thank you,' she said, briefly, taking the package from my hand.

But I did not allow myself to be dismissed thus quickly.

'You are not well, my dear young lady,' said I. 'Will you not command my services?'

Something in my voice—perhaps also, my quiet respectful manner, seemed to inspire her with confidence. She looked at me with wonder in her beautiful, tearful eyes, and said, less curtly than before:

'You are very kind, sir. I would like to have a droschky.'

I bowed, and while she stood at the window of a flower store, I hurried down the street, and soon found an empty vehicle, in which I joyfully and with a gentle feeling of expectation of what would happen next, drove back to my little Unknown.

Meanwhile, she had gained her self-command, only her hand yet trembled as she, in entering the carriage, laid it lightly in mine, and it felt ice-cold through her glove.

'Your residence?' I asked.

She named one of the elegant streets in the West End, and as I called the address to the coachman, I knew how certain I would be not to forget it myself.

I closed the carriage door; she then bowed her lovely head at the open window and thanked me for my services; but she spoke confusedly, and, in her embarrassment, her pale cheeks colored with a rosy blush, so that she appeared even much more charming than before.

'May I call to-morrow and inquire after your health?' I ventured to ask; but she seemed taken by surprise by the question, and hesitated to answer, while the blush deepened on her cheek.

'Hi!' cried the coachman at this moment; the horse started off, and as I stepped again on the sidewalk, the vehicle was already rattling away.

As in a dream, I entered my hotel.

I could not refrain from laughing to myself at this ardor, this interest about a young lady entirely unknown to me. More beautiful, more dazzling visions than this childish, shy girl had often, during my life, crossed my path without having attracted me particularly.

I was a riddle to myself; however, I made the firm resolve to find out by to-morrow some particulars about this new acquaintance.

A few hours later I sat with a number of pleasant friends in one of the best restaurants 'Under the Lindens.' The conversation was lively and cheerful, and there were many ladies and gentleman continually going in and out.

In the neighborhood of the table at which we sat and made ourselves merry was gathered a large party, joyous and gay like ours.

Some young, girlish faces before us having attracted me, I involuntarily looked around for my Unknown; but there—yes, certainly there she was next to the little blonde coquette, with the seductive little snub nose and the showy white felt hat—the officer, the same before whom my little friend had taken flight for although I had no foundation for the idea, since we had met many other men in the street, I could not help thinking of the large, showy, handsome, but utterly blase and insolent-looking lieutenant of infantry in connection with her.

'Who is that pale officer?' I asked of my friend Erich.

'Where?'

I indicated the direction to him.

'The one with the black beard, next to the little blonde lady.'

'He?' said Erich, and laughed. 'Why, he is the lately betrothed, the handsome Paumwolf. I thought you surely must know him.'

'No, no; but what is the story about him?' I inquired.

'Well, nothing more than that yonder blonde has — with some trouble, it must be admitted—captured him for life, after he has caused nearly ninety-nine others to dream of the same happy fate. For myself I never could have attained such an elegiac calm, after breaking off a love affair. But he has been unfortunate. Young ladies with and without pedigree, with and without money-bags, bow down to him, after half an hour, entirely conquered by his irresistible fascinations. And it is just the same with the old ones. Many, to be sure, allege indeed, that behind that Titanic brow there is nothing but a cornfield, and that a thrashed-out one!'

While Erich had been talking, my eyes had wandered away from Paumwolf.

His pale face, framed in by curling black beard and hair, reminded me, in fact, of the Zeus of Otricoll. To me it was in the highest degree repugnant.

'Enough tears have recently been flowing from beautiful eyes since his betrothal with Fraulein Josepha Maier has appeared in the Gazette.'

'Maier?' I involuntarily asked.

'Yes, yes,' laughed Erich; 'simply Maier with 'a-i,' but passably pretty, and immensely rich, of course. And since Fraulein Josepha does not look Jewish, Paumwolf can endure that his future father-in-law should have formerly been a cloth merchant in Frankfort-on-the-Main.'

The conversation having once turned on the handsome Paumwolf, it did not soon leave the subject.

On the other side of our table the people were whispering about him, and one said:

'It is quite incomprehensible to me that he did not rather take the little Gerdshof, whom he so recently courted. The girl is of altogether different stock from the Maiers, and she seems to be head-over-ears in love with him.'

'Yes, but the money—the money?' cried another.

'Well, at all events, this one is a blonde, too, and a rather rude one,' remarked a third.

An idea suddenly seized me.

'Where does Fraulein Gerdshof live?' asked I of Erich.

He looked at me a moment without speaking, and then laughed aloud.

'Well, you certainly are amusing this evening, with your abrupt questions. Beside being called Von Gerdshof, of old Margravite nobility her father is a pensioned general; but where she lives I do not know. Do you wish to console her for the loss of Paumwolf, old boy?'

I threw him a glance full of rage.

A young assessor who sat at our table, and seemed to have heard our dialogue, called out to me:

'I can give you the address. Baron ——, Kurprinzen street, No. 35.

Ah! that was the very dwelling of my Unknown. I felt all the blood rush to my heart; then, thanking him for the information, took my hat and stick, and without turning to reply to the jesting remarks of those remaining at the table, left the place to saunter, without aim or object, through the moonlit streets.

How, after long wandering hither and thither, I finally found myself before the much thought of house in Kurprinzen street, I surely cannot tell.

I went on the opposite side of the street and looked at the house standing before me in the clear moonlight. In the midst of blooming gardens, the dainty villa rose, with its antique, vine-covered and many-columned gallery in front, like the enchanted castles in story books. And the little fay who wandered about therein?

Was she still awake, sheltered behind the one single window of the gable-end, which was still lighted, grieving perhaps, about the unfaithful Paumwolf?

With pity, scorn and—yes, I will confess it—with burning jealousy in my heart, I at length turned my steps homeward to my quiet lodging.

After a rather sleepless and restless night, and several anxious morning hours, I made my way, at the proper time for visiting, to Kurprinzen street. Now I was on the steps.

Oh, the beating of my heart, the almost painful oppression that came over me. My pulses had not throbbed so wildly since long years ago, when the first volley of musketry whistled round my ears.

In the lonely old family estate of Barwalde in the Mark, the last few years had passed away so quietly and monotonously; grave studies and a practical application of knowledge gained in early and distant travels had occupied me so exclusively that the etiquette of the great world had become strange and unknown to me. And yet it was not timidity alone which caused the blood to fly like lightning through my veins, which made me remark with almost tender interest the elegant brass plate with the name engraved: 'Von Gerdshof.'

'Now! Courage! The bell is pulled! I am in for it.'

An old servant dressed in livery answered my ring, and on my asking if the master was at home, took my card and left me with the conventional, 'I will inquire,' but soon returned and opened for me the lofty folding-door to the left of the entrance. His assurance that the master would be pleased to see me sounded very consoling to me.

Within the elegantly furnished saloon I found the general, an old, dignified gentleman, with erect military bearing, a martial, but not unfriendly, countenance, and a long gray beard, which, however, was carefully shaved from the broad chin. After I had expressed to him my pleasure at being able to help his daughter in her dilemma, and he had thanked me for the slight service—he seemed to be informed of everything, and to expect me somewhat—we passed from the usual forms of politeness to a lively conversation that extended over every possible topic.

The time passed as if on wings; almost an hour was spent in chatting with the amiable old gentleman, and yet Frauline Eveline had not appeared. But when on parting the general said he hoped to see me often at his house during my stay in the city, I could not refrain from pressing his hand in deep heart-felt gratitude.

Not long afterward I received a delicately written card—decidedly a lady's handwriting; in which Herr General von Gerdshoff did himself the honor to invite Herr Baron von T——to dine.

I must confess I never had received an invitation with similar joy. What was the excitement and expectation of the first court ball as compared with the impatient throbbing of my heart, with which I, on the appointed day, betook myself to the dinner. A numerous company had already assembled; many of the persons present were known to me, were indeed friends, so that I soon found myself delightfully situated.

And the daughter of the house?

There stood Eveline with her friends, her graceful figure moving with bewitching grace among the guests; for she was obliged to assist that aged, somewhat conventual-looking lady, in doing the honors of the house—the general's wife had been dead many years—and I could not help admiring the tact and self possession with which she, in spite of her youth, so charmingly filled her position as hostess.

Here she asked an old gentleman after the health of his sick spouse; there, whispered some pleasant remark to a young lady about her tasteful toilet, or repelled a too gallant cavalier with a scornful glance, or a saucy answer.

With each and all she knew just the right tone to take. She was surrounded by all. Every one flocked about her, who, like an apparition out of a story book, moved around among those molded fashion plates.

And yet there lay in her violet eyes, when she believed herself to be unobserved, a sad expression, which did not accord with the conventional smile of the sweet small mouth.

At length the signal for dinner was given. Eveline laid the tips of her dainty fingers on the arm of a tall, blonde cavalier, a cousin of the family.

To my great annoyance my portion was Countess Soandso, no longer in the first bloom of youth. I must add I had secretly hoped to see Eveline's angelic head at my side.

With a mien which was certainly not very amiable, I offered the countess my arm, and led her to the place designed for us. Though otherwise a most estimable lady, she almost drove me to despair with her loquacity and while she, even before soup, inquired about my recent journey in the East, and expressed a desire to hear something about my last new work, my glance strayed impatiently past the questioner in a vain search for Eveline.

I had not the opportunity to exchange one word with her. She had only nodded to me from across the room, pleasantly and confidingly, as to an old acquaintance.

Pretty soon I felt a gentle touch on my arm, and a voice only too well remembered, asked shyly, and at the same time sadly:

'Does mein Herr no longer recognize his protege?'

I turned quickly, and yes, there, indeed, was Eveline who had been sitting next to me for full five minutes without my having observed her.

My neighbor, the countess, and Eveline's escort, the cousin in the Guards, very soon understood how much they might expect to be entertained by Eveline or myself during the four or five hours passed at the table.

How the time sped and what were the general conversation we never knew. But I was entirely

ASSESSORS' NOTICE.

To the Inhabitants and other Persons liable to pay Taxes in the Town of Peabody.

The Assessors of the Town of Peabody hereby give notice to the inhabitants of said town, and all other persons liable to pay taxes therein, that their office will be open on and after the first day of May until and including the first day of June, and all persons liable to be taxed in said town are hereby required to bring in at the said office true and perfect lists of all the polls (males twenty years old, and upward), and schedules and estimates of the personal estates for which they are liable to pay taxes.

Copartnerships

having a place of business in Peabody, and also in some other city or town within the Commonwealth, are especially notified to bring in a statement in accordance with the 24th section of the 11th chapter of the Public Statutes. Shipping and business income are not taxable to a firm, but each resident partner must include these items in his individual return.

Mortgaged Real Estate.

"Any mortgagor or mortgagee of real estate may bring in to the assessors of the town or city where such real estate lies," within the time specified in this notice, "a statement, under oath, of the amount due on each separate lot or parcel of such real estate, and the name and residence of every holder of an interest therein as a mortgagee or mortgagor. When such property is situated in two or more places, or when a recorded mortgage includes for one sum two or more estates or parts of an estate, an estimate of the amount of the mortgagee's interest in each estate or part of an estate shall be given in such statement." [Chap. 175 of the Acts of 1882]. When a statement in conformity with the law above quoted is brought in, the real estate therein returned will be assessed under sections 14, 15 and 16, of chapter 11 of the Public Statutes. But in cases where the mortgagor of the real estate has agreed in writing to pay all taxes assessed thereon, NO STATEMENT OR RETURN IS REQUIRED from either mortgagee or mortgagor, unless requested by the assessors in writing.

Estates in Trust.

Persons holding estates in trust, whether for minors or otherwise, are particularly requested to furnish the assessors with statements in relation to such estates. When trust estates, or estates of persons deceased, have been divided during the past year, or have changed hands from other causes, the trustee, executor or administrator, or other person interested, is required and warned to give notice of such change; and in default of such notice, will be held to pay the tax assessed, although such estate has been wholly distributed and paid over.

Any person bringing in a list of all his taxable personal property will be assessed upon the valuation thereof, and any one neglecting to furnish the assessors with such list within the time above specified will de doomed at a legal meeting of the Board of Assessors, agreeably to the law of the Commonwealth. All persons will take notice that statements of personal property must be in writing, and subscribed under oath before one of the Assessors, at their office, on or before the FIRST DAY OF JUNE, and that the personal property of all taxable persons must be estimated by the Board, NOTWITHSTANDING A VERBAL STATEMENT OR INFORMAL WRITTEN COMMUNICATION TO ANY ONE OR MORE OF THE ASSESSORS. [Pub. Stat., chap. 11, sec. 39 and 41.] When a person has failed to bring in a list or schedule of all his taxable property, in conformity to this notice, no abatement of a tax so assessed upon such person for personal property can be granted, "unless such tax exceeds by more than fifty per cent. the amount which would have been assessed to that person on personal estate, if he had seasonably brought in said list; and if said tax exceeds by more than fifty per cent. the said amount, the abatement shall be only of the excess above the said fifty per cent. [Pub. Stat., Chap. 11, Sec. 73.]

Any person taxable in Peabody for personal property can obtain a BLANK SCHEDULE for making a list of such property, with directions for properly filling the same, by applying at the assessors' office.

Literary, Benevolent, Charitable and Scientific Corporations.

The attention of the Officers of all Literary, Benevolent, Charitable and Scientific Corporations, located in Peabody, is particularly called to the requirements of Chapter 217 of the Acts of 1882, as the property of said corportions, both personal and real, will be subject to taxation unless the law is complied with. Blank forms for the purpose can be had at the office of the assessors.

Three Peculiarities

Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier and regulating medicine, is characterized by three peculiarities, namely:

1st: The combination of the various remedial agents used.

2d: The proportion in which the roots, herbs, barks, etc., are mixed.

3d: The process by which the active medicinal properties are secured.

The result is a medicine of unusual strength and curative power, which effects cures heretofore unequalled. These peculiarities belong exclusively to Hood's Sarsaparilla, and are

Unknown to Others

Hood's Sarsaparilla is prepared with the greatest skill and care, by pharmacists of education and long experience. Hence it is a medicine worthy of entire confidence. If you suffer from scrofula, salt rheum, or any disease of the blood, dyspepsia, biliousness, sick headache, or kidney and liver complaints, catarrh or rheumatism, do not fail to try

To The Public.

Dr. Gray informs the people of Peabody and vicinity that he is now prepared to administer "Dr. Mayo's vegetable anæsthetic," which is giving universal satisfaction in New England. This anæsthetic is purely a vegetable compound and can be administered with perfect safety to children and people in delicate health. It has no after effect as is apt to be the case in Nitrous Oxide Gas and Ether.

An Editor's Dream.

The last "hand" had been into the sanctum asking for money, and had departed unsatisfied; the last proof for the day had been read, and the hook had been supplied with copy for the succeeding day. The editor leaned his tired, aching head on his desk for a moment's rest and to compose his nerves before seeking his home. He was aroused by a voice at his side, which he recognized as coming from the president of the local horticultural society, who said; You have been a good friend to the society in years past and have done a great deal of gratuitous work for us in your paper, and have helped us in many ways. Here is the copy for a pamphlet descriptive of our work, which we wish you to print in good style, and charge us a fair living profit to partly make yourself whole for previous favors to us. I assure you that the other members of the board of directors, as well as myself, appreciate your efforts for the society, and feel that you ought not to work for us for nothing. Besides this we shall give you a good generous advertisement when the time comes for our annual exhibition."

Such unsolicited and practical manifestations of good will so astonished the editor as to render him almost speechless, and before he could recover, his senses the customer had gone.

As he left, a young man entered. He said: "I see you devote considerable space each week to the Y. M. C. U. Does it pay?"

"Only indirectly as I feel satisfaction in knowing that I am doing good," responded the bewildered scribe.

"But that does not buy white paper or pay for the wear and tear of type. I have just been elected president and shall recommend at the next meeting of the trustees that a standing paid advertisement of a quarter of a column, with our officers, night of meeting, appeal to young men, etc., be kept in your paper as long as you continue to be so liberal with us in the news columns. We have no right to ask you to work for us for nothing."

A large pompous man had entered while the conversation was going on, and when the young man had left and even the sound of his footsteps had died in the distance, he stuck his tobacco-fumed face into the editor's and whispered:

"I have got some land down on the 'Point' that I want the borough to buy for a park, and here is a communication which I have got 'Squire Andrews to write in favor of the scheme. It is signed "Pro Bonno Publico." Now if you will print it as a communication,—you need not indorse it yourself,—I will pay you for it just as if it occupied so much space in the advertising columns."

"Most certainly I will," said the newspaper man, from whose stomach all gauntness passed away as he counted up the words and lines, estimated the space, fixed a price, and saw the small pile of silver dollars, transferred from among the tobacco crumbs in the chewer's pocket to his editorial table.

'Is this the editor?" said the meek, careworn face of a plainly dressed woman.

"Yes, ma'am,

"Here is an appeal to the voters to vote against license and for the protection of our homes." (Here a tear came to her eye.) "It was circulated among the ladies in town by the W. C. T. U. We would like to have you print it, if you will do so gratuitously, for we have not much money in our treasury———"

"By George, that was a good report you had of our club anniversary last week. Let's have a dozen copies of the paper," interrupted a dudish looking young fellow with a tooth pick in his mouth who had just entered. When the papers were counted out and paid for, the lady continued:

"But if you will put it into the paper this week continued the lady," we will take a hundred copies to circulate among some of the voters who do not read it regularly.

"Thank you, madam, I will print the article with pleasure" responded the man whose head seemed in a whirl.

The next comer was one of the local magnates of the place, a former state senator, a justice of the peace, and a man of some means.

"Are you alone" said he?

"Yes."

"Well, I have been wanting for several months to have a talk with you, about what may seem to be none of my business,—and that is your income. I notice you are always thorough in your local work, but that in additon to your strictly legitimate business of gathering local items, you devote much time and space to various matters of public improvement, good roads, temperance, the cause of morality, and so on. Is this last phase of your work a ource of revenue to you."

"No," replied the editor, I think that faithful local reporting alone, would bring me in as many dollars as my present course, but I feel that I am making myself worth more to the world and am more nearly approaching my ideal."

"Just about as I supposed," said the visitor. "I presume you are very often thanked for such excellent work."

"Very seldom; more often criticised from those who do not understand my motives, or whose opinions do not agree with mine. An unkind critical word seems to come easier than commendation."

"About as I thought. Hereafter you may send me two copies of your paper instead of one, and you may also send one to my old classmate, Dr. Jones, who used to live here but who has been in Texas for twenty years, and I guess you had better send one to my son at Harvard. I have been sending him mine after I read it; but that isn't just the way to serve you."

"Thank y——"

"Wake up, wake up. Can you pay these bills?" It was the gas man with two months' overdue bills. The editor had been dreaming. He aroused himself with a sigh at the interruption, telling the man to come in again "next week," and slowly walked home to his waiting supper, reflecting bitterly on the amount of work that every one called upon him to do without pay, and the number of items, "just to fill up," handed to help all sorts of people and institutions but himself, and the trouble to get enough funds to meet his honest debts.—Exchange.

THE DRAMA

Mr. Hoyt's very amusing piece, "A Rag Baby," will remain another week at the Bijou. The desire to see it has been so great that on several occasions money has been turned away from the box office because there was absolutely no room left in the theatre. "A Rag Baby" is capitally acted, and altogether deserves the high degree of public favor it has gained.

Augustin Daly's company will reappear this week at the Museum, in a revival of Mr. Daley's comedy, "The Big Bonanza." This piece, which is an adaptation of Von Moser's "Ultimo," was first played at the Museum ten years ago, and was so successful that it ran more than a month. It will be cast as follows: Mr. Barron, Alfred Hudson, Geo. W. Wilson, Geo. R. Parks, Ewdin Arden, J. Burrows, C. S. Abbe, J. Nolan, C. E. Boardman, H. James, Annie Clark, Mrs. J. R. Vincent, Blanche Thompson, Kate Ryan, Louise Jordan, May Russell, E. Trites. "The Big Bonanza" will be played until Saturday evening, when for the benefit of Miss Annie Clark, "A Scrap of Paper" and "Sweethearts" will be performed, with the beneficiary and Mr. Barron in both pieces.

At the Boston Theatre, Miss Minnie Palmer will this week play the last engagement she will fulfill in America for at least two years, as she is next month going abroad for a protracted tour. She will appear in a new version of "My Sweetheart;" the cast will be as follows: Miss Minnie Palmer, Chas. Arnold, T. J. Hawkins, Lawrence D'Orsay, Augustus Cook, H. R. Davies, Eugene O' Rorke, Mattie Earle, Mrs. Mary Myers.

At the Park Theatre, M. W. Hanley's company will give the first performance in Boston, of Mr. Edward Harrigan's latest comedy, "Are You Insured?" This piece has been successfully played in Philadelphia and New York, and on this occasion will have the following strong cast: Chas. Stanley, William Fitzgerald, N. S. Daboll, Dan Collyer, George Merritt, Dan Hart, Joseph M. Sparks, Edward Eggleton, Jennie Yeamans, Fanny Wentworth, Sophia Hummel, Fanny Daboll, Annetta Zelna, Jennie Bajard. The engagement is for one week only.

At the Howard Athenaeum, by an arrangement with Messrs. Charles Frohman, and Frank L. Goodwin, an English version of Belot's famous melodrama. "The Strangers of Paris," will be played this week, with a strong cast of characters.

BETTER THAN SHE EXPECTED.—"Your letter received. In reply I am happy to say that Parker's Hair Balsam did much more for me than you said it would, or than I expected. My hair has not only stopped falling out, but the bald spots are all covered, and all my hair has grown thicker, softer and more lively than it was before my sickness a year ago. Thank you again and again." Extract from letters of Mr. R. W. T., West Fifty-third street, New York.

THERE IS an increased demand for steel rails. The Pennsylvania mills recently made a contract for the delivery of 50,000 tons for summer and fall construction. Supt. Ferguson, of the Naumkeag Street R. R., at the hearing last week, said that never in the history of the country were steel, rails as cheap as at present.

THE ICE business in this vicinity is a very important industry. A few years ago one iceman could easily attend to all orders, and then not be employed all the time. In those days only a few people took it, and they covered a small piece with flannel and put it in the bottom of an ice chest. Now every one has a refrigerator and few can keep house in the summer time without a liberal supply of ice. Some fifteen or twenty teams are regularly employed in delivering ice in this town, and at the different seasons gives employment to a large number of people.

IT WAS a little surprise party for those not in the ring, when it was announced last week that the President had named Mr. R. F. Dodge, of Salem, as Collector of that port. This seems to have been brought about by the friends of Ex-Mayor Hill, when it was found there was no chance for their man. Mr. Dodge did receive sixteen votes at the meeting to consider the matter a short time ago, but he declined in favor of Mr. Hill, and in return received the support of the Hill faction with the result above stated. To the average Republican the appointment gives satisfaction. Mr. Dodge being a genial gentleman and one of the regular out and out party democrats, and one that hates the "Mugwumpocrats" worse than he does a Republican. It is probable he will make "clean sweep" of the subordinate offices. To the victors belong the spoils.

THE LOWER branch of the Legislature has passed the Metropolitan Police Bill for the city of Boston by a vote of 121 yeas to 90 nays and 7 pairs, and it is more than probable it will be carried by the Senate to-morrow. The passage of this bill will be welcomed by all lovers of law and order, as it has been fought every inch of the way by the combined rum interest of the city of Boston, and the opponents of the bill have resorted to every known questionable parlimentary trick to defeat it. The fight has been watched with universal interest and the friends of the bill have shown great wisdom in their efforts to rid the city of Boston of a police system controlled almost wholly by the liquor power, and the substitution of a system that shall be administered in the interests of good government. Our representative, Wm. H. Brown, voted against the bill, and we regret that Peabody's vote could not have been recorded on the other side. But we know our representative to be a man of strict integrity, and have no doubt that he voted as his conscience dictated. This was not a party measure, and men of both parties voted on their own convictions.

PEACE or a postponement of hostilities seem to be indicated from the reports across the water, but suppose Russia's ambition should be gratified and Persia, Afghanistan and British India fall under her power, probably the next step would be the conquest of China, and thus would the Czar rule half the human race. The Atlantic in speaking of this, says: "The British are detested by the Hindoos who will welcome any change, not so much that they have been badly governed, as on account of the humiliation to which they have been subjected by the British authorities. Natives are allowed to fill but few and those the minor offices of trust or honor in Hindoostan. The principal ones are filled by importations from the United Kingdom, and hence the desire is universal to throw off the British yoke." It is scarcely to be believed that the change would better the condition of the Hindoos, but still it is a matter of history that Russia has proved a great civilizing power in Central Asia. Not civilization as we see it here but law and order has been introduced, has been extended over a part of the earth's surface hither-to-fore given over to semi-barbarism, and the Czar's form of government has brought under control the wild tribes who have in ages past placed Central Asia outside of civilizing influences. There is a strong bond of friendship between Russians and Americans, and the child is living who will probably witness a vast extension of Russian power, and it is believed by many who are making a study of the swift extension and increase in members of our own country, that this country and Russia are destined to be the growing powers of the world.

CAN IT BE possible that all the newspaper stories about the management of the Department of Agriculture are true and that our handsome doctor Loring, who has been at the head, has made a failure of it? Report says that Mr. Colman, his successor, finds the affairs in confusion and the money all spent, and he was obliged to suspend work until things could be straightened out. We, in old Essex, who have been taught from our boyhood to look upon the doctor as our ideal farmer, who have listened to his eloquence at agricultural fairs and have known him as a flatterer and a tricky politician, cannot, no we will not believe that he has bought peas at $7 a bushel, and a three years' supply in advance of the demand; that out of an appropriation of $100,000 only $32 remain; that he bought 13,000 pounds of beet sugar seed in excess of what was required; that he bought 1700 bushels of sorghum seed of a friend in New York at $2.95 a bushel, when another firm stood ready to deliver the same quality for a dollar a bushel, in fact, did deliver 500 bushels at that price. No, no that is asking too much. How we regret that his attempt to raise the office to the dignity of a cabinet position did not succeed, as his management shows that he was specially qualified for a cabinet officer—he knew nothing about the business he was called to perform. That is the way of the world, men set up their idols, and while they worship at their shrine, they are ruthlessly torn away. And so it is in this case, the idol of the farmers of Essex County is made the laughing stock of the nation. We expect the Salem papers will loose lots of sleep writing columns in his defense, unless the Doctor will kindly furnish them himself, a thing not unknown in his career. No doubt everything will be fixed however, the doctor will give the county press a neighborly call, and the Agricultural society will resolve that the lustre of their ex-President's brilliant career shall not be deemed, and the Doctor will announce himself as a candidate for Congress from this district or for Governor of the state, or some other position to which he never could be elected. We would advise the Doctor to retire to his farm in South Salem, and by persistent attention to the details of farm work learn to be in reality a "tiller of the soil."

OUR TOWN, as a place of residence, has many advantages which we fear are esteemed but lightly by our citizens. We are located on fairly elevated ground and are surrounded by several hills which give the town a natural drainage to Goldthwait's brook, which can easily carry off any unhealthy matter. Our land is about equally divided, while some sections are gravelly and rocky, other sections contain deep rich soil suitable for market gardening. Being within a few miles of the ocean, and having salt water within our limits, gives us constant changes of atmosphere, which purifies and makes more healthy the town. It is of interest to look over the records of the town, as it shows that ever since its settlement the people have been noted for their longevity and well preserved vitality. We have an abundance of high service water supplied from ponds within our midst. The water works are established on a good paying basis, and at the same time are brought within reach of all. Our educational and religious privileges are unsurpassed. Our schools and school buildings are abreast of modern times, and our public school system fully equal to the standard, and show the wisdom of the large and liberal expenditure upon them. The free public library, founded by the late George Peabody, and the superior reference library maintained by the generosity of Mrs. Eliza Sutton, are never denied to our humblest citizens, and have been a great help in promoting education in our town. We have eight churches—seven Protestant and one Catholic. They are all conveniently located and administered over with earnestness and a liberality that keeps pace with the times. Two railroads connect us with the outside world. No less than thirty trains of the Boston & Maine stop at our station daily, while some eight or ten on the Boston & Lowell road also stop here. This does not include a very large number which stop at West Peabody. Horse Car connections put us in easy communication with Salem and Lynn, and when the road is completed between Peabody and Danvers, the old town of Danvers will be more united than it ever was before. We are thus in easy access to the watering places along the line of the Revere Beach road, also Nahant and Swampscott, the Salem Willows, or the North Shore. Again should one prefer the country there are beautiful drives through West Peabody and Lynnfield, along the shores of beautiful inland lakes, or through the woods to Middleton and Topsfield. All these things which go to make life pleasant and enjoyable are within our reach. Next we may mention the business activity of the town. We have a large local manufacturing business, and the town has been built up by the importance of its manufactures. It has not grown as some places by being made the home or rather sleeping room of city merchants. It is a self reliant community, and millions of dollars are invested in our industries. Our people are industrious and thrifty, and our savings bank contain thousands of dollars, the savings of a prudent people. While there is always a good demand for tenement houses, a large number of our people live in houses of their own. While many of our business men have acquired wealth or at least a fair competency, they have all earned it by their own industry and business tact, and nearly every one of them started with limited capital. Thus there is no overshadowing by a wealthy class, all are on equal footing, and honesty and enterprise meets recognition. Probably there is not another town in the state where secret orders, benevolent societies, military organizations, temperance and reformatory societies, receive more encouragement than here. And a stranger coming here must find some things congenial to his tastes. Our town is progressive and while all these advantages which we enjoy have got to be paid for, it is better that we enjoy them without grumbling. Our town has plenty of room in it still, and a welcome for all new comers. New streets are constantly being laid out, and desirable house lots are offered for sale at reasonable prices. We might go on and write pages on this subject, but sufficient has been said to show that with a proper appreciation of our advantages, our town is not surpassed by any in Massachusetts.

The Report of the State board of health, lunacy and charity, informs us that there are 5700 insane persons in this state and that the death rate among this class is 88 per cent. The cost to the state of maintaining insane persons is nearly $950,000. The cost of maintaining the six hospitals and asylums last year was near $560,000, nominally state paupers were committed to the several lunatic hospitals the past year. But for the removal of insane persons to towns and country hospitals, the hospitals maintained by the State would be crowded beyond their present excessive numbers. It is already a question, as much from the large increase of expense, as to the causes which are producing the large increase of insane persons. The increase has been 50 per cent, while the number of curable cases is less than 27 per cent. It is noticed that the cities furnish a larger proportion of incurable cases than the rural districts.

PEABODY

John A. Logan, was elected yesterday to the United States Senate, from Ill., after all this delay, and the death of several members of the Ill. Legislature.

There will be a meeting of the Old Ladies' Home Auxiliary Society, at the vestry of the Orthodox church, Friday, May 22d, at four o'clock. Every member is requested to be present to take action on the amended constitution and by-laws.

By mistake Mr. Henry Wilson was sold a piece of land by Mr. James P. King that covered a right of way claimed by Mr. Carleton. After some delay a new lot near the old one and on the proposed street, or right of way, was sold him.

Mr. Francis H. Appleton's residence at West Peabody, has been connected by telephone. This is the first telephone to be put in at West Peabody, and the line will be taken from Lynnfield, but it will communicate with the central office in this town.

There is not a pleasanter or more convenient office in town than that of O. B. Chadwick & Co., the Insurance folks in Allen's Block. The walls have recently been tinted an azure blue color, and the whole place has a tidy and neat look. Call in and see them.

An agent was delivering trees here a few days ago which were ordered last fall, and quite a number are complaining that the trees are not what they were represented to be. Some folks are never satisfied unless they occasionally get swindled by some stranger.

The following is a very simple receipt for getting rid of moths. If once found to be established in a carpet, take a wet sheet of cloth, lay it down on the carpet, and then rub a hot iron over it so as to convert the water into steam. This permeates the carpet and kills the moths.

An open wagon containing a man, woman and two boys arrived in town last Monday night and were given shelter at N. M. Quint's from the rain. They claimed they were on their way from Providence to Chicago. The next morning quite a number wished them bon voyage.

Rope jumping is now in order for the little folks. The danger is in trying to see how many times they can jump without stopping. The youngsters should be cautioned with regard to this, as such over-exertion has not infrequently produced very serious, and occasionally fatal results.

Just at this time of house cleaning, pamphlets, papers and old magazines are being routed out of garrets and closets to be sold for old paper at a merely nominal price, simply to get them out of the way. Take them to H. P. Brooks, 224 Essex Street, Salem, and exchange them for any style of book binding you want.

A young son of John Mokesley had the misfortune to nearly sever his foot at the ankle last Friday. He was chopping wood when the axe slipped and struck him just on the instep, cutting through the flesh to the bone. He was taken to Dr. Foster who drew the edges of the wound together with several stitches and he is doing well now.

Mr. John Perkins brought a steam launch of the U. S. Steamer Powhattan, from the Charlestown Navy yard, last Monday, to the machine shop of John Boyle. It is 35 feet in length, 8 1-2 feet beam and 5 feet depth of hold. It will be fitted with a boiler and engine, and is the property of a Mr. Williams, of Damariscotta, Me.

A well known teacher has a novel method of preventing tardiness. She has found it very successful. When a pupil enters the school late, the school repeats the following verse in concert:

"Five minutes late and the school has begun,
What are rules for if you break every one?
Just as the scholars are seated and quiet,
You hurry in with disturbance and riot.
Why did you loiter so long by the way?
All of the classes are formed for the day,
Hurry and pick up your reader and slate,
Room at the foot for the scholar that's late."

Lowell street in front of the town house is being graded. The grade will be made by filling the side next to the town house high enough to shed the water to the other side of the street. The side walks will be raised on the side next the PRESS office, leaving a deep gutter to carry off the surface water.

C. H. Goulding has just received a new lot of Children's Carriages, rattan, slat, etc., with both Canopy and Parasol top, which he is selling at reasonable prices. He also has the adjustable wire window screens for only 50 cents. Purchasers would do well to call and examine his stock before purchasing elsewhere.

The names of thirty-three ladies have been obtained and a charter applied for, to form a Ladies' Relief Corps, to work in conjunction with Post 50, G. A. R. The first meeting of this Corps for organization and choice of officers, will be held at G. A. R. Hall, Thursday evening, May 21, at 7.30 o'clock. All are earnestly requested to be present as the business is very important.

The new moon is not old yet!

Several parties have asked the town for edge stones and will put down brick or concrete sidewalks. Mr. James Cook, on Washington street, is having a side walk laid by Mr. Andrew Gray. The brick walk in front of Baldwin's Hotel is being taken up, and the edge stones will be extended to the end of the house and a new walk laid. But the greatest improvement will be the placing of edgestones, and the laying of a concrete walk, beginning at the Warren Bank on Main street, and passing Warren Trask and George Stevens' stores around the corner of Foster street, past Blaney's Block and possibly to Summer street.

A little child about four years old was given a pocket knife as a plaything the other day, and, child like, said he was going to cut off the heads of his playmates, and commenced to slash right and left. A little son of Dr. C. S. Wright was struck in the face making a painful wound. A knife should not be put in the hands of children. The Doctor's child is not seriously injured.

At a meeting of Emerald Court of Foresters, last Wednesday evening, Mr. John J. Bartlett was presented with a neatly engraved silver policeman's badge. Mr. Bartlett is one of our newly elected constables. The badge was made by Starr C. Hewitt. On the face is engraved, "Peabody Police," and on the reverse, "Presented to J. J. Bartlett by members of Emerald Court, M. C. O. F., May 13, 1885."

One of the pleasing and innocent pastimes of young ladies is said to be placing apple seeds on a hot stove. Each seed is named after some gentleman friend and admirer. The seed that pops toward the damsel, who is intently watching the operation, is considered an omen indicative that the person whose name it bore is a promising beau, and one who is worth looking after.

The police have been investigating in a quiet way, the conduct of a couple of boys, who are credited with doing a successful business in stealing hens in different parts of the town and selling them. It is said that the business has paid so well, that one of the young men bought a bicycle with his share of the profits.

Sanger's Laundry, over Nathaniel Simonds' store, is receiving a very generous patronage and is giving excellent satisfaction. Could Mr. Sanger have all the work done for people in this town he would soon be able to build a five story brick block, and put in a steam boiler to do the work.

Mr. Jas. W. Farnsworth, formerly of this town, recently brought a suit against the Boston Herald for libel, and at the Superior Court at East Cambridge last week, the jury returned a verdict of $1000 for Farnsworth.

Mrs. Frank Tigh has returned from Montreal, where she has been on a visit.

Dr. C. C. Pike has resigned from the Board of Health. The vacancy will have to be filled by a special election.

Frank E. Farnham, Esq., and Thomas H. Jackman will attend the meeting of the Service Pension Committee at the Parker House to-night, representing Union Post 50, G. A. R.

At Reith's Millinery Store you can find a full line of Hats and Bonnets, Flowers, Fancy Scarfs, also a large stock of summer trimmed millinery, all at reasonable prices.

At a shoot held at the new range on Forrest street, last Monday, George Walton broke 26 balls out of 30 and he will hold the medal for this year.

Mr. John A. Lord, Jr., has put in another scouring machine.

Mr. William P. Clark has gone to Rangely Lakes.

Mr. William Farnham will remove to Gloucester.

Mrs. John Pinder has gone to Newark, N. J.

Unparalleled success of the Wilmot Clothing Co., 250 and 254 Essex street, Salem. Ready money works wonders. What can be found there? Anything from a wedding suit to a pair of overalls. Anything from a fine laundered shirt to a pair of ten cent suspenders. Anything from a wedding necktie to a five cent bow. Any style of furnishing goods and underwear for the male persuasion that can be found in Boston can be duplicated for less money at Wilmot's Clothing Store. They also offer great bargains in Bicycle suits, having just furnished suits for the Bicycle clubs in Marblehead, Beverly, Danvers and Hawthorne club of Salem. Everything is marked down to rock bottom prices. We never before saw clothing so cheap. If you don't believe it—why take a look at their stock, where you will be shown every attention.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

Commander Geo. F. Barnes of Union Post 50, G. A. R., in issuing his orders for Memorial Day, says: No day of the year is more sacred to the Grand Army of the Republic than this, which has been set apart for our observances. It is to us the Memorial day of stalwart bravery, of patriotic heroism, of national faith and of a nation redeemed. Let us pause to remember those of our comrades who have obeyed the call of the Great Commander and have gone to their reward. It is hoped that all comrades of the G. A. R. will appear in the ranks on that day and loyally and lovingly join in keeping alive the memories of those who died that the country might live. The Post will assemble at headquarters in full uniform, Saturday, May 30, at 8 o'clock, A. M. The line will be formed at 8.30, and the Post accompanied by the Salem Brass Band, will march to the square and decorate the Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument then down Main street to the Old Monument, and after decorating, will take Horse Cars for South Peabody and decorate the graves in Cedar Grove and Emerson Cemeteries, then returning to headquarters the Post will be dismissed. At 1.30 P. M. the Post will re-assemble to attend services at Town Hall at 2 30; Comrade George H. Patch, of Boston, will deliver the Memorial Address. At the conclusion of the services the Post will march to the Old Friends' and Monumental Cemeteries and there decorate the graves of our dead comrades. On Sunday, May 24, the Post will attend services at the Rockville Church by invitation of Rev. J. W. Colwell.

About 9 30 o'clock Saturday evening a leak was discovered in the main water pipe on Spring street. The break, which was ten inches long by four inches wide, took place at the corner of the four family house of Dennis Reagan, and the volume of water, when it first broke away, was throwing a stream as large as a hogshead completely over and on to the house, which is two and one-half story's above the basement, and on to a house situated in the rear. Large stones, bricks and dirt were thrown with great force breaking windows, etc. The street was torn up a distance of about ten feet or more near the break, and the sidewalk and street were badly washed out to Foster street. Daniel B. Lord was sent for and it took some time to get everything in readiness to shut off the water from Spring street, which was finally done, a little before eleven o'clock. Work was begun as soon as the water stopped running by Mr. Lord and his men, and was continued through the night, and by ten o'clock the break was repaired and the hole in the street filled up. It required six cart loads of gravel to fill up. The cause of the leak was the breaking away of the cement lining of the pipe and causing a small hole in the sheet iron casing which the pressure soon enlarged. The pressure was reduced just three pounds by the gauge at the pumping station, only one foot of water running from the tank, in all about 25,000 gallons.

Last Saturday afternoon while a party of little girls were playing in the field above N. M. Quint's house, two of their number, named Annie Warner and Bessie Jessamine, about six years of age, were enticed to another part of the field and assaulted by Arthur W. Carr, a boy about thirteen years of age. The boy was arrested and the case came before Judge Merrill yesterday afternoon. Dr. Morse, of Salem, who attended the Warner girl, testified that while there was a rupture, no serious results need be anticipated, and with the other girl the result is the same, although no physician was called. State Agent, Geo. A. Hunt, representing the State Board of Health, Lunacy and Charity was present, and made an argument favoring the putting of Carr on probation. Other witnesses testified to the character of the boy previous to this assault. Judge Merrill said he considered the case a very serious one, and one that he should have to give more thought, before deciding, and he would continue the case four weeks, and the boy was put under bonds.

A walk around town shows the variety of tastes in house painting, as shown by the different owners. The dark shades are fashionable, but are apt to have a gloomy cast when unrelieved by a brighter tint here and there. There are some who prefer the old fashioned white paint and green blinds, while their next door neighbor has a crushed strawberry; further up the street a striking effect is made by a bright yellow with white trimmings; in another street you will see a white house with lavender borders. The most shocking to a sensitive and artistic taste is one on——— street, which is butter cup yellow with a smashed elderberry stripe at each corner, while the bow window is painted a moss green. The number of white houses grows less every season.

Billy Hayes was called before Judge Brigham for sentence at Lawrence, last Monday, but the sentence was deferred until a consultation could be had with Judge Pitman, who tried the case. Hayes' counsel raised the point that the jury was not warranted in finding the indictment they did, and the court ordered the counsel to present their objections in writing. The judge stated that four counts covered an attempt to set fire and came under the general statutes for attempts, while the other two were for consummation and came under another statute. Several well known citizens testified to the good character, etc., of Hayes. This attempt of these citizens to assist a desperate criminal like Hayes is condemned on all sides. Hayes will probably be sentenced to-day or to-morrow.

At East Weymouth, last Sunday night, two men, named James Sullivan and Patrick Lyons, while passing by the "Hotel du Italy," became involved in a quarrel with a dozen or more of the inmates. The Italians, becoming exasperated, drew stilletos, and both the men were badly cut and lacerated. Sullivan was thrown into a ditch, and would undoubtedly have perished, but for the timely arrival of friends. Lyons was cut in more than a dozen places. A physician was summoned and the wounds dressed. Sullivan's condition was such that the doctor ordered his removal to the Massachusetts General Hospital. Lyons is reported comfortable. The man named Lyons referred to in the above is the father of P. J. Lyons, the barber, in this town.

The railroad connections are already made at West Peabody for running the gravel trains from Rev. W. G. Spaulding's lot to Salem to fill the North River basin. A steam shovel will be procured from the New York and New England Railroad, and will be run by Mr. James Cahill. A switch has been put in at Carltonville, and the first train for filling should be run by the last of the week. Probably most of the work will be done after hours at night to avoid snarling up the trains on the Essex branch. French laborers will be employed, and they will live in barracks at the gravel pits. The electric lights will be used.

The editor of the Georgetown Advocate, Mr. William B. Hammond, is engaged in rejoicing over the arrival of a new comer in his household. Since he deserted the printer's case in this office and started the Advocate he has become very prosperous, and money has flown into his coffers. William has got a farm and he stands squarely on the principle of the Scriptural injunction, "Multiply and replenish the earth." The last arrival came on the 12th, is a female and would probably bring down the beam at about eight pounds. Many happy returns.

The measles are fighting their annual campaign with unusual vigor this season and the doctors say that typhoid fever and other ills are quite apt to follow in their wake. Pneumonia has pretty much retired from the field, but the cold, wet weather which abounds favors the multiplication of rheumatic complaints. This last malady has found its way to many a joint of late where its pangs were before unknown. People don't exactly like to admit that they have the disease, but they have to.

The PRESS of this week states that the Baptist convention would be held next Thursday, when in fact it was held last Tuesday. You are too young, Albert. If you had only been born when we were you would not get so badly left.—Item Correspondent.

We suspect that item got left over from the week before. But speaking of being born, you probably were a chum of Methusaleh's, and his 969 years(revised edition) are nothing compared with yours.

The Selectmen and School Committee held a meeting last Saturday afternoon to elect a member of the school committee in place of Rev. W. Sperry resigned. There were several candidates, and after a number of ballots had been taken Horace K. Foster, M. D., was elected. Mr. Foster is a young man who is building up a fine practice here, coming from North Andover, where his parents reside, a few years ago. He is in every way qualified for the position.

George A. Hammond and James H. Wells, of Lynn, were arrested on the Square, Sunday evening, by the police. They were in a carryall, and drove up Main street at a terrific pace, beating the horse, which was all of a reeking sweat. They came from Salem, where they had run into one of John Linnehan's coaches, on Federal street. They were fined $1 and costs for drunkenness, and $10 and costs for overdriving, amounting to $18.50 each.

We fear our hasty item last week, in regard to the whipping case in the Bowditch school, did an estimable young lady an injustice, as the striking of the boy on the head was purely accidental, and wholly his own fault. As our report came indirectly from the boy's family, we were led into error.

SOUTH PEABODY.

The L. & B. R. R. have been at work grading the track on this end of the road the past two weeks.

The G. A. R. Post 50 will attend services at the church next Sunday afternoon, at 2.30 o'clock, in a body, Rev. J. W. Colwell officiating.

A very interesting Sabbath School Concert was held at the vestry last Sunday evening.

Mrs. Emily Dakin is spending a few days at Seabrook, N. H.

The entertainment committee are preparing for a concert of war songs, particulars of which will be given later.

If the residents of South Peabody desire to retain the telephone at Mrs. Tudbury's, they can do so by a guarantee of forty dollars a year to the Company. A subscription paper can be seen at the post office, for all those who wish to subscribe.

Mrs. Joseph Rhoads has been quite sick the past week, at her residence on Lynn street.

Frank Williams killed a black snake five feet long at Spring Pond last Sunday.

Rev. J. W. Colwell was elected Scribe at a meeting of the Essex South Conference at Swampscott last Thursday. Miss Mary J. Floyd took part in the discussion.

Thursday while crossing a piece of meadow back of Brown's pond, South Peabody, the horse attached to one of J. B. Newhall's ice teams, got badly mired by the roadway sinking out of sight, and surrounding the wagon with water. The horse went in up to his hips and it required considerable hard labor to extricate him. A young man on the seat of the wagon became rather frightened and stood up on the highest point of the wagon shouting "where'll I jump?" The roadway was built some time ago, three loads of cobble stones being put in to drain it, and these have all sunk out of sight leaving a soft mud.—Item.

WEST PEABODY.

The Church, last Sabbath morning, (17 inst) passed a unanimous vote of thanks to the First Congregational Church of Danvers, for the generous gift of $115.50 for the building fund of the proposed new chapel, to be erected sometime the present year. Special mention should be made of Mr. Wm. Siner, Jr., a former resident of this place, who circulated a subscription paper and secured the above amount, Mr. G. H. Peabody heading the list with the liberal sum of $25. The Dane Street Church, of Beverly, has just donated the sum of $38.70 for the same object, in addition to the gift of $25 from the Sabbath School. The South Church, of Peabody, have also started a paper among their members in behalf of the same object, Mr. Chas. Haskell heading the list with $50. Thus one by one the Congregational Churches in this Conference are giving in their aid to this most worthy cause.

The young friends of Gardner Viles of West Peabody gave him a birthday surprise party last Friday night. Music, both instrumental and vocal, was in attendance, and a pleasant evening spent. They went in Linehan's barge.

At the last meeting of the W. C. T. Union, the following resolution was passed:

Resolved, That in the removal of Mrs. M. O. Stevens, Vice President of our W. C. T. Union, to another place of residence, we lose one of our most earnest workers, and one who has ever shown an untiring devotion to the cause of Temperance and Prohibition. As she goes from us, our prayers and good wishes will follow her wherever she may be called to labor.

Letters advertised at the Peabody Post Office, May 20,1885.—Mary Arlen, Mary Brien, D. E. Cross, Maria Corcheran, Katie Conners, John Desmond, Ada J. Francis, W. H. Gregory, T. F. Grantly, J. G. Knapp, Sam'l. Little, Flo. McCarthy, S. A. McIntyre, W. F. Mahoney, Dennis O'Connor, Rebecca Pratt, E. H. Paige, Henry Rogers, W. H. Sherman, W. H. Swan, Carrie Stevens, Michael Twoey, Norman Wallace.

Daniel Goodwin, the insane youth who has before been sent to the Danvers Asylum, put in an appearance here yesterday from California. He was locked up by Officer Goodwin and commenced to smash things up at the police station, including pots and kettles, and an excelsior mattress. Doctors Pike and Worcester were called and on their certificate he was taken to the Danvers Asylum.

F. D. Tarlton, 42 Main street, advertises a choice line of light and dark prints, a large assortment of ladies' cotton underwear, and also keeps constantly on hand all sizes of Dr. Warner's Health and English sateen corsets. Read his advertisement in another column.

John Bagley & Co., charged with keeping liquors with intent to sell, were fined $50 and half the costs each by Judge Merrill last Saturday morning. They appealed and were put under $300 bonds. They were unable to secure bail until late in the afternoon, when John Cleary stood for them.

CATARRH.

BY A. P. LIGHTHILL, M. D.

The earliest symptoms of Catarrh is a discharge from the head, consisting sometimes of a clear acid fluid, but oftener of a thick, fœtid, purulent yellow or greenish matter, which is usually secreted in excessive abundance, and discharged through the nostrils or throat, and frequently by both channels.

The nature of this discharge varies in different cases, and even in the same individual at different times. In some it is copious, and of a loose or fluid character, while in others it is very viscid or gummy, adhering to the diseased membrane with glue-like tenacity; often this offensive matter concretes in dry, hard masses of crusts, which obstruct breathing, and are very difficult to detach, their dislodgment requiring most violent efforts. Sometimes these incrustations come away in lumps of a deep green tint, but occasionally in broad and flat casts of a notable size, on which traces of blood may at times be observed. This condition is very liable to run to serious ulceration, involving a loss of the bony structure of the nose and a subsequent flattening of that organ, and is invariably accompanied by a breath of exceedingly fœtid and sickening odor. In some cases it becomes so revoltingly offensive as to render the sufferer an object of disgust to himself as well as to others.

The nasal membrane is thickened and congested, causing the nose to be stopped up, sometimes on one side, sometimes on the other, and often on both, giving rise to a disagreeable, stuffy sensation in the head, and occasionally to violent paroxysms of sneezing.

A feeling of fullness, heat, irritation, soreness or pain is generally experienced in the nostrils, near the root of the nose, as well as in the upper part of the throat, above and below the soft palate. A distressing sensation of heavy weight or compression is usually complained of over the forehead, especially in the region immediately above and between the eyes. Sometimes the pain is obstinately fixed in one particular part, as in the temples, on top of the head, at the back of the neck, or behind the orbits; and occasionally it manifests itself in the face, of so severe a character that it is frequently mistaken for neuralgia.

The voice is generally affected, and becomes hoarse, weak and uneven, assuming a nasal character, or an unpleasant snuffling quality. Cough of variable severity is not unfrequently one of the symptoms and results of Catarrh.

The sense of smell is generally blunted or entirely lost, and a similar effect on taste may be occasionally observed. The eyes are apt to become irritable, and disposed to water excessively on exposure to the cold or wind, and a sense of weariness of sight is usually experienced after slight exertions. Hearing becomes frequently more or less impaired and noises in the head very often add materially to the existing distress.

The stomach generally suffers more or less, and becomes weak and irritable; the appetite is capricious, and nearly always bad in the morning.

The patient often complains of lassitude and fatigue, an incapacity for either physical or mental exertions, and a constant disposition to drowsiness and sleep. The mental faculties are also sometimes slightly affected, loss of memory being not unfrequently experienced.

Catarrh may prove fatal, either by debilitating the system and wearing out the patient, or by travelling downward and producing consumption. This fact has been so repeatedly noticed that all experienced practitioners now look upon Catarrh as one of the earliest manifestations of this dreaded complaint. Among educated physicians in this or any other country, Dr. Lighthill was the first to devote his study and investigation to the cure of Catarrh and kindred diseases, and the happy results which attended his labor have been attested to by many of the most prominent citizens of Boston and vicinity. Cases abandoned as hopeless by other physicians have promptly yielded to his painless and effective treatment.

ASTHMA

For years Dr. Lighthill has made this distressing disease his special study, investigating carefully the causes that produce it; his labor was fully rewarded, for he not only established its true pathological condition, but also discovered a new and correct system of treatment for its cure. Hundreds of cases who have been under his care have found permanent relief from this wonderful discovery, from the beginning of this treatment prompt benefit is experienced which is ultimately followed by a complete and radical cure.

An experience of 30 years of constant practice enables Dr. Lighthill to decide on the first examination as to the cureability of any disease within specialty, and no case will be accepted for treatment unless the chances are for favorable results. His specialty comprises the cure of and affections of the Nervous system from whatever cause.

Book Notices.

Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine for June completes the Seventeenth Volume, with a number of exceptional interest. The opening article is by the eminent traveler, Alvan S. Southworth, and entitled "Catholic Missions in the Far East' principally Farther India, China and Japan; the labors of St. Francis Xavier and his successors are graphically described. The article on "Bible History," tells of the conquest of Canaan under Joshua, and the history of the Israelites under the rule of the Judges. This article has twelve illustrations. Portraits and short biographical sketches are given of the three new English Bishops. The Sacred Musicians described are Madame Sainton Dolby, who recently died, and Anton Rubinstein; and the Parables of Christ have reached their thirteenth number with "The Barren Fig-tree." Farjeon's story, "Love's Harvest" reaches an interesting point, and Mrs. Farmer's serial "What She Made of Her Life," progresses favorably. There are several very beautiful poems, and a varied and attractive miscellany, at 25 cents a number, or $2.50 a year, postpaid. Published by Mrs. Frank Leslie, 53, 55, and 57 Park Place New York.

The North American Review concludes its seventieth year with its June number. It never had so large a circulation, nor greater influence, nor a more brilliant staff of contributors. This number discusses seven topics of vital public interest by no less than fourteen eminent writers, not including the short contributions in "Comments." "Shall Silver be Demonetized?" is answered, pro and con, by three distinguished economists Sumner, Laughlin and Walker, representing Yale and Harvard Colleges, and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. "The Tardiness of Justice" is discussed by Judge W. L. Learned, and "Prohibition in Politics" by Gail Hamilton; "The Swearing Habit" by E. P. Whipple, and "French Spoliation Claims" by Edward Everett. The policy of the Roman Catholic hierarchy toward our Public Schools is assailed in a learned essay by a new polemic, Mr. M. C. O'Byrne, of North Carolina, and defended by Bishop Keane, of Virginia, with equal erudition. It is a most interesting double presentation of an impending issue. "How Shall Women Dress?" is answered by Charles Dudley Warner, Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, Dr. W. A. Hammond, Dr. Kate J. Jackson, and Mrs. E. M. King, the English leader of the dress reform movement.

We have just received Ballou's for June. It opens with an interesting illustrated article on the Island of Borneo, by Capt. Howard Hulburt; followed by a continuing chapter of Mr. Thomes' story "Lewey and I; or, Sailor Boys' Wanderings," which still keeps up its thrilling interest of the boys' adventures. It also contains a large amount of entertaining stories, instructive and amusing reading, housekeeper's and fancy work departments, etc., making it well worth the price. For sale by all newsdealers. Price, 15 cents per copy, or $1.50 per year. Address, Thomes & Talbot, 23 Hawley St., Boston.

DECORATION DAY.—The page of original literature issued by the American Press Association for publication on the 30th of May, will contain an admirable decoration day story by Col. Donn Piatt, entitled, "The Lone Grave of the Shenandoah." This story is from the Colonel's field book, and has the brightness and strength for which this famous writer is noted. Also, a poem on Memorial day by Ella Wheeler Wilcox, together with other interesting matter. Price $3.00 for the page of 6 columns, 120 inches. American Press Association, 39 & 41 Park Place, New York.

HIS LOSS WAS HER GAIN.—"Well madam," said a fashionable physician to a wealthy lady patient, "if you don't like my prescriptions, perhaps you had better try Parker's Tonic, or some other quack stuff." "You don't mean it Doctor," she answered, "but your advice may be good for all that. Sometimes what you call 'quack stuff' is the best and most scientific medicine, after all." She got a bottle of Parker's Tonic and it cured her of neuralgia arising from disordered stomach and nerves. She told her friends, and now they all keep a doctor at home in the form of Parker's Tonic.

TOWN OF PEABODY.

BOARD OF HEALTH REGULATIONS.

THE Board of Health appointed by the Town hereby make and publish, as required by law,* the following "Regulations for the Public Health and Safety:"—

REGULATION 1ST. It being the duty of the Board of Health, of the Town of Peabody, to make such examination of the premises of persons residing in said town as they shall deem necessary for the public welfare, the Board hereby give notice and require that all premises within said limits shall be ready for inspection by the Board on and after May 15th, 1885.

REGULATION 2D. No house offal, filthy water, dead animals or refuse of any kind, shall be thrown upon the streets by any resident; and no butcher, fishmonger, or vender of merchandise, shall leave any refuse upon the streets of this town.

REGULATION 3D. If, upon inspection, any rubbish, offal, decaying animal or vegetable matter, or filth of any kind be found in, under or about any building, within any yard or enclosure, upon any premises, or in the ponds or water courses of said Town of Peabody, or if any privy or drain be found so discharging as to prove a nuisance, and offensive or deleterious to the public health, the owner or occupant of such property or premises shall be notified by the Board to remove or abate such nuisance within 24 hours after said notice has been served.

REGULATION 4TH. If any owner or occupant of property as aforesaid, after having been duly notified, shall neglect to comply with the requirements of the above section, the Board of Health shall cause any and all nuisances to be removed or abated at the expense of the owner or occupants.

REGULATION 5TH. No hogs or goats shall be kept within the limits of this town, except in pastures, or in enclosures kept free from standing water, and regularly and freely disinfected.

REGULATION 6TH. It shall be the duty of occupants of dwellings in which any person or persons may be sick with small pox,* diphtheria or scarlet fever, and Physicians attending such cases forthwith to notify the Board of Health of the fact.

REGULATION 7TH. The occupants of buildings or dwellings where small pox exists, or has existed, shall prohibit and prevent the removal of clothes, bedding and upholstering, or other articles from the infected buildings or dwellings, except the removal is made by permission, or under direction of the Board of Health.

REGULATION 8TH. The occupants of buildings or dwellings where Scarlet Fever and Diphtheria exist shall withdraw all children attending school from the same; and the teachers of said schools shall not allow children thus withdrawn to re-enter the school until they shall present a certificate from the attending Physician vouching for the safety thereof.

REGULATION 9TH. Night soilcarts shall not be allowed to pass through the streets in the thickly settled portions of the town between sunrise and sunset, from May 1st to Nov. 1st, without a special permit from the Board of Health.

These Regulations will be Strictly Enforced.

MAYO'S

Compound Vegetable Anæsthetic.

A safe and pleasant substitute for gas and ether.

Discovered by Dr. N. K. Mayo of Boston, April 1883, subsequently administered by him in nearly two thousand cases, producing perfect slumber, being applicable to the child, the delicate sensitive woman as well as the hardy man. No ill effects have followed its use in any case, it acting rather as a vegetable tonic.

It controls the patient one-fourth longer than gas giving us time to remove from three to twenty teeth. It is with great confidence we have introduced it into our practice, giving very successful results.

EXZEMA OR SALT RHEUM.

ANOTHER CLEAR AND POSITIVE RECOVERY—

AN ELDERLY LADY'S LETTER.

Among the numerous letters received by Dr. Kennedy testifying to notable Salt Rheum cures, the following will be found of interest to our readers, who may accept our assurance of its perfect authenticity and truthfulness:

WORCESTER, Mass., March 23, 1884.

Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.

Dear Sir: Until recently I have been for three years a sufferer from Salt Rheum. It followed upon an attack of Erysipelas, for which I was for a long time under medical treatment. I placed myself again in the hands of the physicians who did, I have no doubt, all that could be done. One thing is sure, however, I was none the better for all the medicine they gave me. The painful and unsightly disease made continual progress, until I began to fear I should never get rid of it.

By means of one of those accidents that often result in so much blessing I had my attention called to your FAVORITE REMEDY, which I was told would surely do me good. I used it, and within a much shorter time than I would have believed possible, I received a permanent cure. I am now perfectly free from Salt Rheum. What a comfort this is, and how it places your wonderful medicine in my opinion, you may guess at, but never know. I keep it now constantly in the house as a family medicine. Yours truly,

MRS. DINAH PHAIR.

Mrs. Phair sometime since, when on a visit to Kansas, found a case of Salt Rheum, could not get FAVORITE REMEDY, sent to New York City for it, and cured the case.

For all diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, Bladder and Digestive Organs, Dr. David Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY, Rondout, N. Y.

MALARIA.

As an anti-malarial medicine

DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S

FAVORITE REMEDY

has won golden opinions. No traveler should consider his outfit complete unless it includes a bottle of this medicine. If you are exposed to frequent changes of climate, food and water, Favorite Remedy should always be within your reach. It expels malarial poisons, and is the best preventative of chills and malarial fever in the world. It is especially offered as a trustworthy specific for the cure of Kidney and Liver complaints, Constipation and all disorders arising from an impure state of the blood. To women who suffer from any of the ills peculiar to their sex Favorite Remedy is constantly proving itself an unfailing friend—a real blessing. Address the proprietor, Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y. $1 bottle, 6 for $5. by all druggists.

happy the whole time.

Not once did I discover in her eyes that melancholy drooping which had before made me anxious.

Oh, if I could only succeed in making her forget Paumwolf? To this fond proud thought I concentrated all my mind and efforts.

With rapture I noticed how her eyes hung so earnestly on my lips as I told her of my distant travels and of my restless wanderings about from one land to another.

And when I spoke of my dear solitary Barwalde, with its sombre fir trees and its rush grown ponds; of my immense library, and the beautiful grand piano which I often trusted to the hands of my overseer, just to give some accompanying instrument to my beloved violoncello, when I said:

'Surely Fraulein Eveline also plays on the piano, and very much better, too, than my overseer,' a thoughtful smile spread o'er the dear sweet face. She loved music very much, she replied, and it would give her pleasure to accompany me some day.

'I hope you will do that at Barwalde,' I cried passionately.

She dropped her lids over her clear violet eyes, and a deep blush spread over her cheek.

Eight days afterward Eveline was my betrothed. What did I care for all the Paumwolfs in the whole world.

On one of the very first days of our engagement we met the betrothed pair, Maier and Paumwolf in the street.

'Shall we turn back, Evie' I asked, playfully, though I could not prevent a slight feeling of anxiety from rising in my heart. She became very grave for a moment, then nestling closer to my side, looked up at me with her innocent, child-like eyes.

'You know I have left all that behind me,' she said softly.

I pressed her arm more closely to me.

'Oh, Evie! my own sweet Evie!'

I was so happy, so proud, that even the bold curiosity with which Lieutenant Paumwolf stared at us in passing could not irritate me.

Eveline and I have lived many years at our quiet old Barwalde, where the sun never seemed to have risen until Eveline's blonde head flitted through the house and grounds. But the happiest hours in our blissful life are those in which we sit confidingly together after the cares and duties of the day are over, and the tones of the piano and violoncello mingle their sounds on the still evening air.

The Old Mill.

Here from the brow of the hill I look
  Through a lattice of boughs and leaves
On the old gray mill, with its gambrel roof
  And the moss on its rotting eaves,
I hear the clatter that jars its walls,
  And the rushing water's sound,
And I see the black floats rise and fall
  As the wheel goes slowly round.

I rode there often when I was young,
  With my grist on the horse before,
And talked with Nellie, the miller's girl,
  As I waited my turn at the door.
And while she tossed her ringlets brown,
  And flirted and chatted so free,
The wheel might stop, or the wheel might go—
  It was all the same to me.

'Tis twenty years since last I stood
  On the spot where I stand to-day,
And Nellie is wed and the miller is dead,
  And the mill and I are grey;
But both, till we fall into ruin and wreck,
  To our fortune of toil are bound
And the man goes on and the stream goes on,
  And the wheel moves slowly round.

Some one has said that modesty is a quality that highly adorns a woman, but ruins a man. There are not many men ruined in that way. At least such ruins, like those of ancient castles and temples, would be worthy objects of pilgrimage.

Nothing makes a fat man learning roller skating so mad as to have the band come in with a terrific clash on the cymbals every time he sits down real hard.

"Rents are high this year," sadly murmured the tramp as he borrowed a pin with which to hold his coat-tail together.

"There are poems unwritten and songs unsung." "Yes," says an editor, "it is this that reconciles us to life."

Last Thursday evening, upon invitation of Foreman Thomas and the members of Hose Company No. 1, about fifty guests sat down to a clam chowder, prepared by Caterer Herbert L. Foan, at the engine house. After discussing the bountiful supper provided, cigars were lighted and remarks were in order. Foreman Fred B. Thomas as master of ceremonies called on Foreman John Lovett, of Steamer 1 of Salem, who made a few remarks on the benefits derived from such social gatherings and complimented Foreman Thomas and his company for the manner in which their efforts had been carried out. He was followed by ex-Engineer George O. Pierce, in his usual good style, Chief Engineer Roome, Assistants Johnson and Tibbets, John Linnehan, whose humorous remarks called forth the applause of the company present, Foreman Farrington, of Hose 2, Miller, of Hook and Ladder 1, Moreland, of Hose 4, and the representatives of the PRESS, News and Item, all of whom made impromptu speeches (written for the occasion.) Engineer Johnson, with his usual liberal spirit, kept his eye on the Sparks reporter, and eat not only his share of the chowder, but had his eye on the bowl of the News reporter at the same time, as he did not wish the two scribes to be troubled with indigestion. After supper the party adjourned to the rooms of the company, which have just been refurnished, new carpet and pictures being purchased. Accompanying foreman Lovett was assistant Chamberlin, and Clerk Kimball of the same company. The members of Hose 1 did all they could to entertain the party, and their efforts were successful. But for a terrible storm, which was raging at the time, a larger crowd would have been in attendance. As for the supper, it was well got up and well served. We hope when it comes cool weather again, to see many just such gatherings, as they serve to promote harmony in the department, and that is what is needed at all times, for effective work. The party broke up about 11 o'clock, well pleased with the evening's entertainment.

Steamer No. 1 was taken to the brook on Endicott street, Saturday morning, and worked both by draughting and from the hydrant, and was found to be in perfect order.

Saturday afternoon the large gray horse, owned by Henry Batchelder, was hitched into Hose 1, and given a trial which was very successful. Monday another gray was tried, belonging to J. B. Thomas, no decision has been arrived at yet. In our opinion, the first horse tried will be the best suited for the business, as he is heavier and better able to carry the load, which he will often times be called upon to run with.

The Abel Proctor H. & L. Truck have had their by-laws neatly printed and framed, and also have issued a new printed roll of members for their roll frame.

The Engineers have had their new by-laws printed, and they will probably be distributed to the companies this week.

The Board of engineers hold a meeting to-night. Z

This is the most delightful season of the year. Everything is suggestive of joy and life, with nothing in nature to remind us of sorrow and death. The growing vegetation, the budding flowers, the sweet odors wafted on the balmy air, the singing birds, the springing shoots of tender grass, fills us with a buoyancy that is sufficient to overcome the profoundest melancholy.

"Yes," said the dude, as he gathered himself up, "the hardest think about roller skating is the floor."

SKATING RINK NOTES.

Those who have witnessed the Gloucesters slugging games here, will enjoy the following from the Chelsea Telegraph:

Great big Gloucester fellows
Polo try to play,
At the Soldiers' Carnival,
Sluggers all are they;
Crazy for first money,
Oh! how hard they did play,
For between them and the referee,
Had it their own way.

Salem sends the champions
Of the New England League,
Who the Gloucesters cannot beat
Only by intrigue;
Full of science of Polo,
Can, oh can it be,
That a slugging team should win,
By a poor referee.

Cambridge boys were anxious
To obtain first cash,
And if they had played Polo,
Would have downed the Gloucester trash
Fish is first class brain food,
Keep this fact in view,
Perhaps if we came from fishy town
We would be sluggers too.

Watch the Gloucester sluggers,
Playing at a will,
Bay States can always beat them,
When allowed to show their skill:
Goals are won by tripping,
And this is not the only way,
For the Gloucester fishermen are rightly called
The champion sluggers of the day.

W. H. Adams.

Union Post 50, G. A. R., have hired the rink for three nights, commencing next Wednesday evening, and for the attraction have secured the Somerville polo club who will play the Peabody's for a purse of $75. The second game will be played on Tuesday evening, June 2d, and the third on Tuesday evening, June 9th. The Somervilles are a very strong team and play a scientific game. Tickets are for sale by the members of the Post.

Manager Bartlett says that skating rink proprietors must shut their doors during the summer time if the sport is to last. Keeping them open summer and winter is too much of a good thing. The people will become tired and sick of roller skating after a while if this is not done. He claims that base ball would lose its interest if pursued all the year round. Fortunately there is the necessary let-up in the winter and this serves to increase the interest in the summer time. So it would be with roller skating, and we think Manager Bartlett is right.—Waltham Record.

The editor of the Chelsea Telegraph prides himself on what he knows about polo. In speaking of a game in Chelsea the other night between two female clubs, he said they were "appropriately costumed and wore undervests trimmed with gold braid" That is getting the description business down fine.

Last Saturday evening the Father Matthews, of Peabody, defeated the Young Men's C. T. A. polo team of Beverly, three straight goals and also an exhibition goal.

There will be a game of polo between the Niagaras and Cresents, two female polo teams, who belong in Chelsea.

With the advent of spring the editor of the Georgetown Advocate goes hunting for Indian relics and his readers are inflicted with a couple of columns a week on what he knows about arrow heads, broken tomahawks, etc. If he should only follow up the Indian war now going on between the Naumkeag and Wilmot's clothing store, he would get all the broken spears and implements he wants.—Peabody Press.

That's so, friend PRESS, but according to the pictures in the Salem dailies, broken wheelbarrows and clothing signs seem to be all that are scattered around. It looks as if a few scalps might be secured out of the Archer, Nevins, Symonds massacre. —Georgetown Advocate.

Naumkeag Clothing Co., 177 Essex street, Salem, advertises their great May sale of Suits and Overcoats. No such opportunity will be offered again this season to obtain a stylish Spring suit at so low a figure. They also have, undoubtedly, the largest and handsomest assortment of Boys' Suits, which they propose to reduce by sacrificing ripces.

The enterprising firm of D. B. H. Power & Co., of Marblehead, send us their opening card, consisting of a pretty designed steel engraving. They have recently added a large stock of furniture, and now have one of the largest stores this side of Boston. It would pay anyone contemplating housekeeping, to see what they offer before going elsewhere.

FROM ALL parts of the country comes the report of a revival in business. The depression which has depressed every active industry, is fast giving way to healthful activity. Iron is the first always to start and the smoke-stacks, which stood as grim monuments, are now pouring forth smoke, and the forges which have been idle are quickening into life. The recuperation power of this country is again exhibiting itself with force and intensity.

LIVE WITHIN your income is the advice often given to young men, and as often forgotten. Everyone on a salary should have a system of saving. Keep a business like account of daily expenditures and separate the items at the end of the week into two accounts, necessary and unnecessary. Just try this once and you will see how foolishly you have spent your money. Then you can commence to retrench on the luxuries, live just as comfortably, and save a little each week. Don't buy anything unless you have the money to pay for it and you are bound to save. If there comes a time when you have been obliged to run in debt for coal, for instance, or have had sickness and a doctor's bill has got to be paid, commence right off systematically, start a sinking fund as it were, and lay by so much a week for the purpose, and it will surprise you in how short a time you can be out of debt. It was Ex-Senator David Davis who said he owed the three millions he is worth to simply adhering to the resolution adopted in early manhood to lay aside part of his annual income, and never to dabble in stocks or margins. The system of making both ends meet is simple. Keep your expenses within your income, and then we shall hear less of hard times and less distress that are the direct results of prodigality.

GENEROUS BEQUESTS FOR UNIVERSALIST PURPOSES.—The will of the late Miss Harriet H. Fay of Marlborough, Mass., contains the following gifts to various interests in the Universalist Church: $3000 in trust to the Massachusetts Universalist Convention, to be used as follows: The income shall be paid to the Marlborough Universalist parish as long as said parish shall maintain preaching by clergyman in the fellowship of the Universalist denomination, and in case said parish shall not have preaching or shall go out of fellowship, the State convention may use the fund at its own option; $2000 to the Universalist General Convention and $2000 to the Woman's Centenary Association and Universalist women's missionary organization. These are the only special bequests, and all the remainder of Miss Fay's property is left to Tufts College to establish a professorship of English literature. The amount is not exactly known at present but it will probably reach $40,000 or more.

NINE MILES IN TEN AND ONE-HALF MINUTES.—One of the best known conductors in New England is the genial Sam Lunt of the Boston & Maine R. R. (Eastern Division). Sam is well known and very popular among those of our citizens who have occasion to travel over the above road. After a few minutes conversation with him one feels entirely at home and the journey is made very pleasant. Last Tuesday night as the train leaving Portland at 6 o'clock was starting out of the depot, 15 minutes late, having waited that time for the Ogdensburg train, Sam passed through the cars and it seemed as if every passenger in the train knew him, for on all sides it was "Hello, Sam," and in every case he responded pleasantly and with a social greeting passed through the train. When he returned to the smoking car, the writer, an acquaintance of his, asked him if the 15 minutes would be made up before arriving at Boston, and he replied in a pleasant manner that it would. The train was now fairly flying over the steel and in a few moments Sam returned to the smoking car and said "the last nine miles have been made in ten and one-half minutes." A traveler who was known to the writer as having visited all parts of the globe remarked that he had never made such time before, for all it had been claimed that the New England trains were slow. The experience of riding along at that speed is delightful, and with the reliable and safe engineers of the Boston & Maine and complete telegraphic arrangements on that road, so that a collision is almost impossible, it is very enjoyable to make a quick run. The train arrived in Boston on time.—Waltham Record.

"Yes," remarked the old lady, "I expected your father would hurt that dog when he threw the poker at it."

A FEW HINTS ON THE CENSUS.—Census enumerator Hunt has commenced his duties in earnest, and is hard at work. The position of census taker is a hard one at best, and a few words of gratuitous advice as to how to treat the gentleman when he comes around to ask you how many children you have and twenty-nine other questions, may not be amiss. If he should ask you how old your mother-in-law is, kindly tell him the lady's exact age without any undue excitement. The same question asked of your maiden aunt will probably engender some ill-feeling, but it is all for the good of the commonwealth and must be endured. Questions as to the exact age of each of your offspring you'd better let your wife answer, as she can probably come nearer to it with the fact that one of the other children had the measles about the same time, than you can by the family Bible. The family Bible however, is an excellent reference book in this, as on many other occasions, and it would be well to hunt it up beforehand; possibly it may need a little dusting.

Try and arrange so as not to have too many of the neighbors in the house when the critical moment arrives, as it makes it hard for the census-taker and embarrassing for the neighbors. Should several members of the family be absent, it would be well to provide tags suitably inscribed with the name, age, occupation, height, color, complexion, place of birth, mental, moral, physical, matrimonial and financial condition of the absentee, and any other statistics which may occur to you at the time, which tags can be presented to the census man upon his arrival.—The above scheme is not copyrighted.—Should the gentleman arrive at your house about dinner time, always invite him in to dinner. He will probably be very dusty and tired and exceedingly thirsty from having to talk so much. Above all things keep your temper, while being questioned. It is highly important that you tell the truth, somewhat essential that you tell the whole truth, and absolutely necessary that you tell nothing but the truth. As the taking of the census will probably require several weeks, do not take it too much to heart if you are not called on immediately. Keep the bull-dog chained, lay in a good stock of patience and politeness, and you can await the coming of the census man without fear.—Milford Gaett

Mrs. Lot M. Morrill has again appeared on the surface of the political sea and will endorse the application of Col. Morton to be postmaster at Augusta, Maine. It is expected that she will again tell what her husband would have done if he had not left her a widow. She will endorse Mr. Morton for the same reason that the Herald does. He is particularly obnoxious to Mr. Blaine. The mugwumps, regular democracy and Mrs. Lot M. Morrill will probably be too much for Mr. Blaine.—Lynn Bee.

A gentleman in Germantown, Pa., who was greatly annoyed by a colosy of sparrows that had taken up their quarters in a mass of ivy covering one side of his house, got rid of them by a novel expedient. One day he purchased half a pound of red pepper and, going up to the third story, opened the windows and sifted the pepper down through the ivy. The alarm of the sparrows was evinced by the haste with which they left their hiding places. Every bird took its departure, and his premises are now clear of them.

The clumsy passenger who, in entering a street car, tramps upon the rows of toes in the aisle, is better than a red-hot stove to warm up the atmosphere.

Poet's Corner.

The Wounded Soldier.

(The following is said to be one of the finest battle poems ever produced by an American. Its author is J. W. Watson of New York.

Steady, boys, steady!
Keep your arms ready!
God only knows whom we may meet here,
Don't let me be taken;
I'd rather awaken,
To-morrow in—no matter where,
Than lie in that foul prison-hole—over there.

Stoop slowly!
Speak lowly!
These rocks may have life;
Lay me down in this hollow;
We are out of the strife.
By heavens! the foeman may track me in blood;
No! no surgeon for me—he can give me no aid;
The surgeon I want is the pick-axe and spade.
What, Morris, a tear? Why, shame on ye man!
I thought you were a hero; but since you've began,
To whimper and cry like a girl in her teens,
By George! I don't know what it means.

Well! well! I am rough; 'tis a very rough school,
This life of a trooper—but yet I'm no fool!
I know a brave man and a friend from a foe;
And, boys, that you love me, I certainly know.

But wasn't it grand,
When they came down the hill, over sloughing and sand?
But we stood—did we not!—like immovable rock,
Unheeding their balls and repelling their shock?
Did you mind the loud cry,
When, as turning to fly,
Our men sprang upon them, determined to die?
Oh! wasn't it grand?

God help the poor wretches who fell in that fight,
No time was there given for prayer or for flight;
They fell by the score, in the crash hand to hand,
And they mingled their blood with the sloughing and sand.
Huzza!
Great Heavens! this bullet hole gapes like a grave—
A curse on the aim of the traitorous knave!

Is there never a one of ye knows how to pray,
Or speak for a man as his life ebbs away?
Pray!
Pray!
Our Father! Our Father! Why don't you proceed?
Can't you see I am dying? Great God how I bleed!
Ebbing away!
Ebbing away!
The light of the day
Is turning to gray—
Pray!
Pray!
Our Father in Heaven—boys, tell me the rest,
While I staunch the hot blood from this hole in my breast;
There's something about a forgiveness of sin—
Put that in—put that in—and then
I'll follow your words and say an amen.
Here, Morris, old fellow, get hold of my hand;
And Wilson, my comrade—oh! wasn't it grand?
When they came down the hill like a thunder charged cloud,
And were scattered like mist by our brave little crowd!
Where's Wilson, my comrade?— here, stoop down your head;
Can't you say a short prayer for the dying and dead?

"Christ God, who died for sinners all,
Hear thus this suppliant wanderer's cry;
Let not e'en this sparrow fall
Unheeded by Thy gracious eye.
Throw wide thy gates to let him in,
And take him pleading to thine arms.
Forgive, O, Lord! this life-long sin,
And quiet all his fierce alarms."

God bless you, my comrade, for singing that hymn!
It is light to my path, when my sight has grown dim!
I am dying—bend down, till I touch you once more—
Don't forget me old fellow—God prosper this war!
Confusion to enemies—keep hold of my hand—
And float our dear flag o'er a prosperous land!

Brought Home in a Wagon.—Louisville, Ky.—Mr. J. Helmus, Vice President of the City Brewery, was brought home in a wagon, carried up stairs by two of his men and laid on the bed. He was suffering with a severe attack of rheumatism contracted in the ice vaults of the brewery. He refused to have a doctor, but dispatched a servant for a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil, with the result that in one week he was entirely cured and able to return to his desk.

Selected Story.

A Night in Eden.

BY MISS G. A. G.

It was evening at the Eden Musee. A stream of visitors was steadily pouring in, some pausing on the threshold to convince themselves, American fashion, that the red man at the door was not flesh and blood, his placarded injunction of 'Don't touch me?' rousing rather than allaying their suspicions. Some stopped to interrogate the handsome policeman at the ticket office, and to indignantly call his attention to the pick-pocket near by, then sheepishly went on their way when the grins of the ticket-sellers revealed to them the fact that they had been addressing 'the figgers.'

Profiting by the mistakes of my neighbors, I successfully avoided their Scylla and Charybdis, and steered my way into the hall, where, having at length exhausted both my curiosity and strength in making a tour among the notables, I sank for a few moments' rest upon a bench in the vicinity of the 'lovely and loving couple.'

Overcome by the warmth of the place and the all-pervading odor as of a thousand wax candles, I felt my eyes closing, and, in spite of myself, was soon fast asleep. Not, however, before I had enjoyed a hearty chuckle at some of the visitors, who, deceived by my languid position, had stopped curiously before me, and exclaiming, 'Could anything be more perfect?' passed on, leaving me to meditate on this unconscious tribute to my vanity.

A mischievous desire to encourage the delusion caused me to assume a rigidity of aspect which soon induced somnolency, and, for the next hour or two, I suppose I was subjected to a running fire of comments upon my perfections, to which, unfortunately, I turned as deaf an ear as any of my waxen neighbors.

I was aroused from my nap by the deep tolling of an adjacent church-bell, striking the hour of midnight. I sat up and rubbed my eyes. The place was deserted. A few gas-jets, turned low, shed a feeble light on the pallid features of 'the figgers.' All was deathly still, but, as the bell ceased, to my infinite surprise, there was a general buzz and murmur throughout the room. The Rulers of the World commenced an animated discussion, all talking together and wagging their heads excitedly. The group in the center of the apartment became equally active, and soon the whole scene was one of life and animation.

But my attention was called to the couple near whom I sat. The arm of the young man, which had always been in close proximity to the shoulders of his companion, now gently encircled them, and her head sunk upon his breast.

'Dearest Alphonso,' she murmured.

'Sweetest Melissa.' And their lips met in a kiss which I am sure was 'wax to receive' if not 'marble to retain.'

Conceiving it indelicate on my part to be an eaves dropper on the tender confidence of this loving pair, I arose and sauntered around the corner, where I found the survivors of the 'Jeanette' expedition blowing their fingers and stamping their feet. They were in full view of the Father of his country, who gave them words of praise and encouragement, saying he could appreciate their feelings entirely, as he, too, felt chilly after the passage of the ice-bound Delaware. Sir John Franklin, on the other side, also seemed to lend an ear to these glowing words and to derive warmth and comfort from them.

I now turned from the cold atmosphere of these gallant men toward the centre of the room, where there was a lively buzz of conversation; but everybody seemed to be talking at once, and nobody listening to anybody in particular. Victor Hugo was vainly endeavoring to call the attention of the company to extracts from 'Les Miserables,' which he held before him. Fanny Davenport was striking Fedora attitudes for the benefit of Sardou, who was too much engrossed in a conversation with Madame Nilson to notice her. This amiable songstress appeared to be distracted between the attentions of the dramatist and the efforts of Gounod, who was kindly giving her some hints as to what he considered the correct rendering of certain passages of 'Faust.' Just beyond those the Jersey Lily was lending a delicate waxen ear to the artist Mackart, at her elbow, who was eloquently imploring her to let him paint her as Eve.

M. de Lesseps was boring Sara Bernhardt with the Panama canal, and Patti was informing Wagner how thoroughly she detested German opera.

In the midst of this confusion a motion was made by some of the Rulers of the World that Patti should favor the company with a song; but this the prima donna refused to do, unless a purse of a thousand dollars was made up on the spot. This seemed to cast a damper over the company, but Cardinal Antonelli, who was mounting the steps near by, here turned round and obligingly offered to hand round his hat, which was a wide one, and see if the sum could not be made up. After a tour of the room, however, to the chagrin of all, it was found that the hat contained only ninety-nine cents, and that principally in pennies, so all expectation of hearing the Diva was abandoned.

Madame Nilson was now appealed to in the hope of finding her more obliging, but Christine was miffed at not having been asked first, and declined; but, after some persuasion, finally compromised on one verse of the 'Suwanee River,' saying she was in too bad voice to attempt any of Marguerite's parts, especially after M. Gounod's criticisms.

The music seemed to have an inspiring effect, for Wagner, leaping over the railing, found his way to the piano in the Winter Garden, and soon a selection from Tannhauser, floated through the rooms. At its conclusion, he struck into a waltz, the strains of which were so inspiring that the loving couple near the door were soon whirling round the room in each other's arms. Sara Bernhardt even condescended to accept M. de Lesseps for a partner, glad to bid a truce to the canal question; and Patti playfully snatched M. Hugo from 'Les Miserables,' and soon all were spinning around the room.

'Partners for a quadrille,' shouted Wagner, from the piano, and the company, now fully in the spirit of the thing, made a rush for the Winter Garden and commenced clearing the floor for a set.

Here the Rulers of the World from their elevated perch, loudly lamented their inability to join in the revel, on account of their deficiency in lower limbs.

'Oh that we had legs!' exclaimed President Arthur, slapping Queen Victoria upon the knee, (or at least the place where her knee should have been.) But the queen resented this familiarity.

I now saw that the Prince of Wales and the Crown Prince of Germany, the only members of the group furnished with those necessary appendages for dancing, were making frantic efforts to get to the front, and the Queen, at an ejaculation from the Pope, turned just in time to see her son leap over his Holiness' head, who sat directly before him. She pre-emptorily ordered him to be quiet, and the Emperor William bent so stern a glance at the Crown Prince, that they both retired abashed to their corner, where they were forced to content themselves with sundry shuffles and an occasional pigeon wing.

I now followed the rest of the company into the Winter Garden, but the set had not yet formed, for all the ladies were surrounding Mr. Cleveland, and begging the honor of his hand for a dance. But the President-elect, smiling benignly upon the crowd of fair petitioners (which had been increased by two Japanese ladies, the Huntress, the Statuette Seller, and even the cynical young lady from the upper balcony) declared that as it was impossible for him to dance with all, he would have to decline dancing with any.

Here they all piteously clamored for some souvenir, or that he would promise to write in their autograph albums, and the President could only pacify them by distributing among them the parings of his waxen finger nails, with which they all retired delighted, and dancing began.

I now concluded to take a peep into the Cyrpt, or Chamber of Horrors, below stairs, having some curiosity to know what the demons down there were after.

Arriving at the Cyrpt, I found that the denizens of that gloomy region were having even a livlier time than the ladies and gentlemen above stairs, enjoying themselves after their own fashion. The Indian brave and the squaw were executing a war dance around their victim, waving his bloody scalp triumphantly. The Cannibals across the way were stirring the fire under their unfortunate captive, who sweated great drops of black wax, while his tormentors grumbled loudly at the unpromising aspect of their dinner.

'Tough old blackamoor!' they exclaimed. 'Wish we had a white missionary. He'd be a far more toothsome tidbit than this old fellow. You bet, Blackie 'll be harder to digest than a tract or a hymn-book.'

Then they broke out in the following wild song, which to my surprise they sang to the tune of one of Moody and Sankey's hymns.

"Cannibals in every clime
Have eaten Missionaries from time to time,
But the Cannibals of Timbuctoo
Eat the Missionaries and the hymn-books too."

The horror of these words froze the blood in my veins, and my dismay was increased by perceiving that all the other inhabitants of these gloomy precincts were equally intent upon the administration of their several modes of torture. The knout, the sword, the guillotine, and the Knag, were all working away, and from some remote recess I heard the violent shaking of iron bars, as from some caged lion, and a voice cried:

'Let me out! Let me out! I'm a Stalwart of the Stalwarts, and don't you forget it!'

The appalling words caused me to turn and flee precipitately up the stairs. Here a scene of dire confusion presented itself. The dancers, in one of their 'promenades-all,' had tripped over the body of O'Donavan Rossa, and this gentleman, protesting against being thus sat upon, and attempting to arise, had been prevented by Mrs. Dudley, who with leveled pistol, refused to let him budge.

'Just stir, old Dynamite,' she exclaimed, 'and I'll finish you.'

With some difficulty Yseult was bound over to keep the peace, and the dance was about to continue when another interruption occu r d.

The colored couple who had been sipping their wine at one of the tables when the Winter Garden was invaded, and who had been ignominiously pushed to the wall along with the tables, now proposed to take a turn with the white folks, but were indignantly refused. This led to high words (and low ones, too), and in the midst of the wrangle who should appear in the doorway but the tall form of Abraham Lincoln.

'What is this I hear?' he demanded in stern accents. You refuse to dance with our colored brother and sister! The oppressed race for whose freedom we fought and died on many a bloody battle-field! Shame upon you! Black wax is as good as white wax any day.'

At this eloquent and indignant words the company trembled visibly, and their agitation was still farther increased when the Martyr President, turning to where the Liberated Slave had been crouching at his feet, beckoned her to approach.

'Come hither, freedwoman,' he said; 'I myself will lead the dance with you.'

The delighted African arose briskly, lightly shaking off her shackles and tossing her piccaninny in Gen. Butler's arms, who kissed and cuddled the infant upon his soldierly breast.

The company, abashed, began to resume their places, but the negress, pausing awkwardly before her deliverer, said:

'I clar' fo' de Lord, Mars Linkum, I dunno nothin 'bout dese yer Conestoga Lances' and dem oder tings de white folks dance, but ef you jist let Sambo, dere, pat jubber for me, I kin jig for you till day de break.'

At this the Negro, Shaving, threw down his razor and came joyfully forward with lathered face. Assuming a half bent attitude, he commenced a vigorous patting upon his thighs, while he chanted in deep gutteral tones:

"Jubber dis and jubber dat,
Jubber kill der yaller cat,
Jubber dis and jubber dat,
Jubber kill de yaller cat."

and the negress shuffled in unison.

This monotonous refrain, with no variation, was kept up for some time, when suddenly looking up towards the glass roof of the Winter Garden he sang out:

"Chicken crow for middle night
Chicken crow for day,
I tink I year dem ladies say
Time to git away;"

and with a succession of double pigeon wings, he was back before his little glass, razor in hand.

The company simultaneously looked upward. Through the glass dome the first streaks of day were stealing. In greatest haste they rushed around to resume their accustomed positions. Their fun was over for the nonce, and in a trice the 'figgers' had returned to their normal stillness and rigidity, just as the janitor's key was heard in the front door. I slipped out as he opened it.

'Hello, young man,' he called after me, 'been on a spree?' but I eluded his questionings and sped on my way to my rooms.

Dawn was paling the electric lights on Madison Square, I felt dazed and bewildered, and thoroughly used up from my unusual dissipation.

'Well, old fellow,' I said, 'now for a turn of a few hours, and then coffee and chops at Delmonico's.'—New York Dispatch.

To Sleepy to Tell the Truth.—A commercial traveler writes to a New York paper about a strange, unconquerable drowsiness that comes over him when he gets on the train, and tells wonderful stories about it; how in one instance he got on the train to go thirty-two miles, fell sound asleep in five minutes, and awoke next morning 194 miles beyond his destination. Now, I have no desire to cast any shadow of doubt upon the brother's narrative. I know that men do grow very drowsy on the cars, and that a passenger might sleep 194 miles beyond his destination. I know that he might. But also, dearly beloved, I know that he doesn't. Because—let me whisper in your ear—while the passenger might be very drowsy, the conductor isn't. He is painfully wide awake. You try him once. You buy a ticket to Peekskill and then try to sleep through to Albany, and observe how awfully, how adamantically hard is the platform at Po'keepsie when you land down on it. Ah, no, brethren, even the sleepiest men do not sleep 194 miles beyond the limit of their ticket. They are willing to; they try to, sometimes, but they don't do it. In order to insure the successful performance of this feat of drowsiness, the conductor must be as sleepy as the passenger. Which he never is.—Burdette.

The Chicago Times: Mr. Halstead has taken a fresh look at the cabinet. He says: "Bayard is looked upon as incompetent and a failure by the Democrats; Vilas as a purist, and of no account beyond some unavailable eloquence; Whitney as a rich young dude, and of no use except to the gigantic monopoly he represents; Endicott is considered a highly respectable nobody; Lamar is laughed at, and the Democrats sing 'Rockaby, Baby,' when his name is mentioned. Manning is the rock of their salvation, the anchor of their hopes. Through him they hope to reach the doughty head of the government, and that failing, the corpse will be given over to the mugwump maggots." Mr. Halstead, it is feared, is attributing to the Democrats views concerning the cabinet that are entertained very unanimously by himself, and it is evident that he has not yet recovered from chagrin and disappointment that President Cleveland declined the cabinet he had taken so much time and trouble to make for him, and insisted on making his own cabinet.

ASSESSORS' NOTICE.

To the Inhabitants and other Persons liable to pay Taxes in the Town of Peabody.

The Assessors of the Town of Peabody hereby give notice to the inhabitants of said town, and all other persons liable to pay taxes therein, that their office will be open on and after the first day of May until and including the first day of June, and all persons liable to be taxed in said town are hereby required to bring in at the said office true and perfect lists of all the polls (males twenty years old, and upward), and schedules and estimates of the personal estates for which they are liable to pay taxes.

Copartnerships

having a place of business in Peabody, and also in some other city or town within the Commonwealth, are especially notified to bring in a statement in accordance with the 24th section of the 11th chapter of the Public Statutes. Shipping and business income are not taxable to a firm, but each resident partner must include these items in his individual return.

Mortgaged Real Estate.

"Any mortgagor or mortgagee of real estate may bring in to the assessors of the town or city where such real estate lies," within the time specified in this notice, "a statement, under oath, of the amount due on each separate lot or parcel of such real estate, and the name and residence of every holder of an interest therein as a mortgagee or mortgagor. When such property is situated in two or more places, or when a recorded mortgage includes for one sum two or more estates or parts of an estate, an estimate of the amount of the mortgagee's interest in such estate or part of an estate shall be given in such statement." [Chap. 175 of the Acts of 1882]. When a statement in conformity with the law above quoted is brought in, the real estate therein returned will be assessed under sections 14, 15 and 16, of chapter 11 of the Public Statutes. But in cases where the mortgagor of the real estate has agreed in writing to pay all taxes assessed thereon, NO STATEMENT OR RETURN IS REQUIRED from either mortgagee or mortgagor, unless requested by the assessors in writing.

Estates in Trust.

Persons holding estates in trust, whether for minors or otherwise, are particularly requested to furnish the assessors with statements in relation to such estates. When trust estates, or estates of persons deceased, have been divided during the past year, or have changed hands from other causes, the trustee, executor or administrator, or other person interested, is required and warned to give notice of such change; and in default of such notice, will be held to pay the tax assessed, although such estate has been wholly distributed and paid over.

Any person bringing in a list of all his taxable personal property will be assessed upon the valuation thereof, and any one neglecting to furnish the assessors with such list within the time above specified will de doomed at a legal meeting of the Board of Assessors, agreeably to the law of the Commonwealth. All persons will take notice that statements of personal property must be in writing, and subscribed under oath before one of the Assessors, at their office, on or before the FIRST DAY OF JUNE, and that the personal property of all taxable persons must be estimated by the Board, NOTWITHSTANDING A VERBAL STATEMENT OR INFORMAL WRITTEN COMMUNICATION TO ANY ONE OR MORE OF THE ASSESSORS. [Pub. Stat., chap. 11, sec. 39 and 41.] When a person has failed to bring in a list or schedule of all his taxable property, in conformity to this notice, no abatement of a tax so assessed upon such person for personal propeaty can be granted, "unless such tax exceeds by more than fifty per cent. the amount which would have been assessed to that person on personal estate, if he had seasonably brought in said list; and if said tax exceeds by more than fifty per cent. the said amount, the abatement shall be only of the excess above the said fifty per cent. [Pub. Stat., Chap. 11, Sec. 73.]

Any person taxable in Peabody for personal property can obtain a BLANK SCHEDULE for making a list of such property, with directions for properly filling the same, by applying at the assessors' office.

Literary, Benevolent, Charitable and Scientific Corporations.

The attention of the Officers of all Literary, Benevolent, Charitable and Scientific Corporations, located in Peabody, is particularly called to the requirements of Chapter 217 of the Acts of 1882, as the property of said corportions, both personal and real, will be subject to taxation unless the law is complied with. Blank forms for the purpose can be had at the office of the assessors.

A Great Victory

A Terrible Case of Scrofula Cured by

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"In the winter of 1879 I was attacked with Scrofula in one of the most aggravating forms. At one time I had no less than thirteen large abscesses over and around my neck and throat, continually exuding an offensive mass of bloody matter disgusting to behold, and almost intolerable to endure. It is impossible to fully describe my sufferings, as the case was complicated with Chronic Catarrh. After three years of misery, having been treated by three physicians, I was worse than ever. Finally, on the recommendation of W. J. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, I was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. And now, after having taken twelve bottles, within the last twelve months, the scrofulous eruptions have entirely ceased, and the abscesses have all disappeared, except the unsightly scars, which are daily becoming 'smaller by degrees, and beautifully less.' I do not know what it may have done for others, but I do know that in my case, Hood's Sarsaparilla has proved an effective specific indeed. As an evidence of my gratitude I send these facts unsolicited, and I am ready to verify the authenticity of this cure, by personal correspondence with any one who doubts it." CHARLES A. ROBERTS, East Wilson, N. Y.

This statement is confirmed by W. J. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, N. Y., who calls the cure a great victory for Hood's Sarsaparilla. Send for book giving statements of many cures.

THE DRAMA

At the Boston Museum this week, the last of the dramatic season there, will be devoted to the revival of another of Mr. Augustin Daly's delightful comedies, "Lemons," with the following cast: Charles Barron, George R. Parks, Alfred Hudson, Geo. W. Wilson, C. S. Abbe, J. H. James, Annie Clark, Mrs. J. R. Vincent, Miriam O'Leary, Elizabeth Robins, Agnes Daly, and Louise Jordan. "Lemons" will be played every night except Friday. That evening is reserved for the annual benefit of Mr. Charles Barron. The bill will include "Our Boys" and "Black-Eyed Susan," with the beneficiary, Mr. Wilson, Miss Clarke and the principal members of the company in both pieces.

At the Bijou Theatre, Mr. Jacques Kruger and his company will appear this week in "Dreams, or, Fun in a Photograph Gallery," a revised and improved version of the piece written by Mr. Nat Childs for Mr. Willie Edouin, and well remembered here as one of the best of its class. Mr. Kruger will re-appear in his original creation of the Photographer, with an excellent cast of characters.

At the Boston Theatre, the supplementary season will be opened with the production of Mr. George W. Peck's famous absurdity, entitled "Peck's Bad Boy." The "every-day life" of this renowned and mischievous youngster will be illustrated by Atkinson's comedy company, which has been very successful during the past two seasons in all parts of the country, and the stage will represent in turn the "Grocery Store," the "Home of the Pecks" and the "Picnic at Wauwatosa."

At the Howard Athenaeum, the Boston Theatre Company this week will fulfil the last engagement it will ever play as an organization. Its farewell appearance will be made in "Silver King," and the cast will be as follows: Frazer Coulter, Rachel Noah, Ethel Chiocchi, Mamie Welter, D. J. Maguinnis, Frank M. Burbeck, Thomas H. McGrath, E. A. Eberle, H. E. Chase, Phineas Leach, F. Lewis, E. Y. Backus, W. E. Evans, Chas. H. Nason, D. J. Sullivan, F. Clive, M. L. Heckert, T. G. Brooks, T. J. Hines, W. Graham, E. H. Porter, Grace E. Thorne, Albertine Marshall, Miss A. Fisher.

The production of "Bottom's Dream" at the Park Theatre is one of the most interesting events of the week. The several scenes of the four acts with the lines of Will Shakespeare, as amended and added to Mr. William T. W. Ball, and the twenty or more musical numbers contributed by Mr. John J. Braham, affords an interesting opportunity to compare the customs, costumes and culture of the ancient and modern Athens. The leading members of the cast are as follows: Bottom, a weaver, N. C. Goodwin; Quince, a carpenter, Henry Donnelly; Snug, a joiner, Thomas Edwards; Flute, a bellows mender, William Gill; Snout, a tinker, Edward Goodwin; Starveling, a tailor, George A. Schiller; Oberon, king of the fairies, Pauline Hall; Titania, his queen, Fanny Rice; Puck, a "shrewd and knavish sprite," Daisey Murdock; Tambo, "the Nast Minstrel," James Radcliffe; Dudeington, Edward Temple; Addie Alpaca, Genevieve Brett; Bertha Bombazine, Helen Weathersby. These principals have the assistance of a large chorus and an orchestra of picked musicians, in the presentation of Mr. Braham's numbers.

MOOSEHEAD AND RANGELEY LAKES.—The announcement made by the Boston and Maine Railroad that the ice is out of these prominent fishing resorts, and that sportsmen's excursion tickets are now in readiness for those who would avail themselves of the exhilarating sport which the waters of those lakes afford, will no doubt be hailed with pleasure by a large number, many of whom have in the past enjoyed the trip greatly to their benefit. As will be seen by advertisement in another column, trains leave Boston daily at 9 A. M. and 7 P. M. Parlor cars on day train and sleeping cars on evening train, and the tickets have been placed at figures which make the excursions moderate in expense. Tickets are to be had at 280 and 306 Washington street and at the Haymarket and Causeway street depots.

A SAD DEATH.—In Philadelphia recently at a coroner's inquest over the body of a child, the jury returned a verdict that death was caused by the administration of a patent cough syrup, containing morphia. Dr. Sam'l. K. Cox, of Washington, states that not one cough medicine in ten is free from this objection. After careful analysis and practical tests he endorses Red Star Cough Cure as being purely vegetable, absolutely free from opiates, poisons and narcotics. He regards it as a most happy and valuable discovery.

EDITING A NEWSPAPER.— Editing a newspaper is a very nice business, says a contemporary, and those who know nothing about it consider a very easy business. If we publish jokes, people say we are rattle-headed, and if we omit jokes, we are an old fossil. If we publish original matter, they blame us for not giving selections, and if we publish selections, folks say we are lazy for not writing something they had not read in some other paper. Ignorant of what good editing is, people imagine the getting up of selected matter to be the easiest thing in the world to do where it is really the nicest work on a paper. If they find the editor with scissors in hand, they're sure to say, "Eh, that's the way they get up original matter, eh?" accompanying their new and witty questions with an idiotic wink or smile. The facts are, that the interest, the morality, the variety and usefulness of a paper depend in no small degree upon its selected matter, and a few men are capable of the position who would not be able themselves to write many of the articles they select. A sensible editor desires considerable selected matter, because he knows that one mind can not make as good a paper as five or six. If we give a man a complimentary notice, we are censured for being partial, and if we fail to give complimentary notices, we are informed that we are a hog.

If we insert articles that please the ladies, the men are jealous, and if we do not cater to the wishes of the ladies, the paper, in the ones' opinion, is not fit to make a bustle of. If we remain in our office and attend to our business, folks say we are too proud to mingle with our fellows, but if we go out they say we never attend to our business. If we wear old clothes, it is insinuated that business is bad, and if we wear good ones, they say we are extravagant.

A newspaper and a newspaper editor that people don't talk about and sometimes abuse are rather poor concerns. The men and business that an editor sometimes feels it a duty to defend, at the risk of making enemies of another class, are of the very first to show ingratitude. The editor who expects to receive much charity or gratitude will soon find out his mistake; but he should go ahead and say what he conscientiously thinks right, without regard to the frowns of grumblers. He should collect his subscriptions promptly and keep his weather-eye on the postoffice or some other good government job. Send the grumblers to the rear.

THE PUZZLED EXECUTOR.—There was a Turkish gentlemen whose property consisted of seventeen valuable horses. The beauty of the animals made him both rich and famous. His stables were visited by princes. There were no horses like his.

He was taken suddenly ill, the doctor gave him no hope, and, in much confusion of mind, he made his will.

He had three sons. To the first he gave one half of his seventeen horses.

To the third he gave one ninth of his seventeen horses.

And he died.

After his funeral, his executor called together the three sons to divide among them the horses.

"Seventeen," he said, "will not divide by two, nor by three, nor by nine. I wish to be just. What am I to do?"

The sons could not answer.

While the question was puzzling the brains of the four, a dervish came riding that way. The sons proposed submitting the question to him.

Now a dervish is a Turkish monk, who lives in poverty and is supposed to be very pious, wise and just.

He heard the case, and considered it, and at last said—

Take my horse, add him to the others, then you will have eighteen."

The executor then made the division.

He gave the first son one half of the horses,—nine.

The second one third of the horses. —six.

The third one ninth,—two

In all,—seventeen.

The dervish then said,—

"You will not need my horse, since you have an equal division. I will take him back again."

And the dervish rode away.

The sons rejoiced that there was such a wise man about, and all were happy.—Ex.

NEXT SATURDAY is Memorial Day. Let us reflect a little. Twenty years have come and gone since the close of that great civil war, which marked the destiny of this nation. Soldiers and citizens alike who saw it are rapidly passing from the scene, and another twenty years will find but few survivors of those historic days. But as the events of those stirring times recede from our view, the North and South grow nearer together and latent patriotism comes to the front with a united nation ready to stand by the old flag. And this feeling of love is fanned into a brighter and warmer flame as Memorial day approaches, and the tributes of affection are laid on the graves of those who fought on both sides with courage and convictions only those of a true American. And as we decorate these graves it seems to soften the heart, and quicken the sympathies, and all over this fair land, both the blue and the gray are performing a like mission. Let us all join in these beautiful ceremonies, not send a few interested ones, but close our stores and factories, turn out en mass and while we listen to the sad requiem of the band and the patriotic sentiments of the orator, try and better appreciate the freedom of freedom's homes. Then we can strew flowers on the silent graves and feel that it is the least we can do to show our love for the brave and generous dead. There is hardly a cemetery in our broad land, but what among its beautiful monuments or its tangled grass and rough grown hedge may be found a soldier's grave. And on May 30th these graves will be sought out and decorated by comrades who shared their perils, and who themselves will ere many memorial days share their silent sleep. It is but fitting that ladies should associate themselves with the members of the Grand Army, and from the headquarters of the Women's Relief Corps comes the following fitting sentiments:

"Women of the Relief Corps, be it yours to twine these garlands of imperishable love. Be it yours to teach your sons and daughters to gather the treasures of wood and lawn, to wreathe them into crosses that shall tell of sacrifices endured, into crowns that tell of glory won. Let every Relief Corps prepare a Memorial for the Unknown Dead. Let a mound, or urn, in every churchyard be heaped with flowers, in memory of the half million men, above whose far Southern graves no mother's tears shall ever fall, no daughter's hand plant sweet for-get-me-nots. Let a call be made in every community asking those whose dear ones sleep on the battlefield, or in the National Cemetery to add a testimonial of flowers, with a card attached to each, bearing the name, company and regiment to be remembered.

Nor should the graves of the patriotic women be forgotten. Above the lowly mounds of the army nurses; of those who rendered loving service to the Union soldier; of those of your own number who have fallen by the way, never again to respond to the call, 'Come and help us'; let tender hands strew the flowers that shall tell the story of loyalty and love. With every token of the highest and purest patriotism, let the Nation's Memorial Day be forever linked. Let it be a holy day, consecrated to valor and to love."

MEMORIAL SUNDAY.

About forty members of Union Post 50 G. A. R., in command of Captain George F. Barnes with Junior Vice Commander Benjamin Beckett, Jr., attended divine service at the Rockville church in South Peabody Sunday afternoon, leaving the square at 1. 30 o'clock on a special car over the Lynn horse railroad. The pulpit was appropriately draped with the flag of the union and a large display of beautiful flowers were tastefully arranged about the platform. The service opened with the singing of Mrs. Julia Ward Howe's "Battle Hymn of the Republic" by the choir, the congregation joining in chorous. After the reading of scripture and prayer, the pastor, Rev. Mr. Colwell, preached the following eloquent discourse:

I Samuel, 7:12, "Then Samuel took a stone, and set it between Mizpeh and Shen, and called the name of it Ebenezer, saying, Hitherto hath the Lord helped us."

The men of Israel had just gained a signal victory over the armies of Philistia. Twenty years before this event, they themselves had met with a terrible defeat on this very spot at the hands of their now prostrate foe. The ark of God, which had been taken from the Sanctuary in the city of Shiloh, and carried into battle, was captured by the Philistines. The city itself was sacked by the ruthless invaders and the people massacred with fire and sword. The great disaster was branded into the memory of the Israelites. A son born at this crisis to one of the Priests that had been slain in battle was named by his dying mother "Ichabod," as a memorial of this awful hour, for she said, "The glory is departed from Israel; for the ark of God is taken;" thus voicing the anguish and despair of all the people. The first period of Jewish history—from Moses to Eli—terminated with the fall of the Sanctuary of Shiloh; even as the second period ended with the destruction of the second sanctuary—the temple of Solomon; and as the third in the yet greater overthrow of the last Temple of Jerusalem by the armies of Titus.

But with this victory of Israel over Philistia, a new era was drawing upon the chosen people; an era wherein the nation would reach its meridian of power and splendor. The glory which had departed was to be restored. At the warning of the Prophet Samuel, the people put away their false gods, and gathering together at Mizpeh with confessions and fasting they pour water upon the ground, a symbolic rite, emblematic of the act of pouring out their hearts in penitence before the Lord; while in their behalf the prophet lifts up his voice in earnest prayer. While thus engaged, the Philistines, having learned the situation and hastily prepared for battle, burst suddenly upon the worshipping host. But Jehovah gives the victory to Israel. The invaders, repulsed with great slaughter and utterly routed, flee from the scene of their former success; while their victorious enemy wipe out the disgrace of their former humiliating and bitter defeat. In commemoration of this great deliverance a huge stone was set up, which long remained as a standing memorial that the Lord had thus far helped his people.

This Memorial season, fraught as it is with such stirring recollections, and tender memories, is, to the people of this land, what the stone, which Samuel set up between Mizpah and Shen, was to the people of Israel. It marks the great victory which God gave our armies over the rebellious hosts that fought to sever the Union. It marks, also, the new era of peace and prosperity, of union and liberty, upon which the nation has entered—whose blessings all our people share—a bright, happy, glorious day, which, please God, shall never have a setting sun. A pious and a patriotic people will commemorate the great deliverance God wrought for us in the day of our distress and anguish, by honoring the dead who fell in that righteous cause. It is no unmeaning service which calls us together to-day. We meet here prompted by a common impulse—that impulse is, the desire to keep green the memory of those who sacrificed their lives in the defence of the nation. It is no spirit of "hero worship" that inspires our breasts to-day. No! Not this! A better spirit stirs our hearts—the spirit of humble gratitude to our Common Heavenly Father, because he raised up from our quiet homes, and from the peaceful pursuits of life, heroes—who were willing to exchange the home for the camp; and the blessings of life, for the grim field of death, in order that the union might be preserved.

This hallowed season should ever be to us the Memorial of the Divine deliverance wrought through the instrumentality of loyal and willing hearts. An old Latin poet has said, "It is sweet and glorious to die for one's country;" not that life is not dear to the patriot; not that home, friends, yea! all that we love and prize are bonds which hold him in an unwilling captivity. But the call of country, ringing out like the blast of a bugle, strikes the ear, and he hastens to obey that call. With other loyal hearts, he quickly rallies to her defence. What now is life to him compared with her welfare? Yea! what would life be worth with the country destroyed—and her cherished institutions overthrown? It is by such considerations as these that the Latin, much more the Christian patriot, counts it as "sweet and glorious" to die for country. There are some things dearer than life itself, and in the hour of his country's peril the patriot withholds not this precious offering if her safety requires it. The heroes of Balaclava heard the order, "Forward, the Light Brigade," and they sprang to duty,

> "Into the jaws of death
> Into the mouth of hell."
> "Their's not to make reply,
> Their's not to reason why,
> Their's but to do and die."

Even so the true, loyal hearts hasten to obey the call of Country. Personal comfort and safety are not matters of supreme moment, when cry of her distress is heard. It seems but yesterday when the emotions quickened by this hour calling up memories of the past, that the nation's dead went forth, a strong mighty army of living men; an army far exceeding the number of those who first responded to the call of President Lincoln for volunteers; for half a million men from the North and South fell in the terrific struggle

> "Some things are so worthless,
> And some others so good
> That nations who buy them,
> Pay only in blood."

We live over again the days of that long and bitter strife. We remember the painful anxiety which filled every heart as the war cloud slowly gathered and overcast our peaceful sky; the preparations made by disloyal men to destroy the Union; the thrill of indignation as the startling news of the bombardment of Fort Sumpter flashed through the land; the great uprising of the loyal North when the Presidents proclamation called for defenders of the old flag; when every city and town sent forth its bravest and best; when ministers of the Gospel took for their texts stirring words like those of the Hebrew warrior poet, "In the name of our God we will set up our banners." We believed that our cause was just; that truth, and mercy, and righteousness were upon our side; and knowing well what Gen. Sherman afterwards declared, that "War is cruel and you cannot refine it," we yielded to the dire necessity and vigorously employed this terrible weapon which Providence placed in our hands, to crush out the slave holder's rebellion.

The sequel to this great uprising proved that the popular enthusiasm was no mere ebullition of showy sentiment. It was an enthusiasm born of deep conviction, of devotion to country, of loyalty to truth, and fed by the fires of courage and faith. On the 19th of April, 1861, just eighty-six years after the first blood of the Revolution stained the green in front of the Lexington meeting house, the gallant "Massachusetts Sixth" spilt some of her brave blood in the streets of Baltimore; and as the touching order of Gov. Andrew reached the commander of the Sixth to send home the boys that had fallen, and to "handle them tenderly," the determination which had sprung up in every loyal heart to throttle the wicked rebellion was deepened and strengthened; even as the purpose of our Revolutionary fathers to put down oppression, was quickened by the scenes at Lexington and Concord. But in the fulfilment of this purpose a long and desperate struggle was entailed upon the country. There were reverses as well as successes in the gradual attainment of the end for which we toiled, fought and prayed.

But while our first defeat at Bull Run was hailed with joy by the South as decisive of the final success of the secession cause; and many at home and abroad regarded it as full of evil omen for the cause of the Union, it simply taught the courageous and hopeful leaders and their followers that we had undertaken a heavier task than we had supposed. Throughout those long four years of the war the immensity of our resources became apparent. Traitors, who had been holding high places of trust in the nation hand managed to deplete our Treasury, to rob our forts and arsenals of their arms, and to scatter our army and navy far and wide. But the effort to so cripple the nation that it would be unable to force the seceding states back into the Union proved abortive, and showed how short sighted the Southern people were as to the resources, power, and spirit of the North.

The disadvantages by which the South hoped to paralize our efficiency were in time overcome. We had the brain, the skill, the muscle, and the natural resources, to more than make good our loss. Money flowed in from all sides. Arms were manufactured! Men were not wanting! Food was abundant! As a peaceful people we had to learn the art of war. Few of the officers of our great armies had been educated at West Point. A number of the most skilful graduates of that institution struck hands with the rebels and employed the education given them by the country in efforts to destroy it.

Many a brave soldier gave his life on the bloody field. Many perished from exposure, and the burning fever. Many languished in rebel prison pens, their pitiful needs unministered unto save by the poor service which their starving companions were able to render. The shadows deepened about many a home when the long list of killed, wounded and missing was telegraphed over the land after every engagement. The silent General, who had driven the enemy from the western borders, and had opened the great rivers to our shipping, took command of the union armies, now having the discipline and determination of veterans. The Army of the Potomac which had long waited for the right leader now pushed "On to Richmond," and soon the skill and tenacity of Grant, supported by the dauntless Sherman, the brave Thomas and the gallant Sheridan, led our brave boys to victory. In the long struggle the nation was born again, but the baptism of blood was terrible. In common with the humblest patriot our martyred President sealed his devotion to the country with the rich drops from his great warm, honest heart.

Can we ever forget the time when the "Boys in Blue" returned to their homes, their faces bronzed by exposure; their flags that had waved over many a bloody field, tattered and torn; their once full ranks depleted by the bullet, the sword and the malaria of Southern Swamps. No! No! A grateful nation will not suffer the memory of her heroes to grow dim. The glory of their deeds will be enshrined in every loyal heart as well as cut in tablets of marble and brass.

Two prominent features of the war demonstrate the Divine help given in the time of our country's distress.

First, the terrible suffering through which our soldiers passed. I refer to the ordeal of battle when brave men were called upon to face death amid all the horrors of the bloody field, to the deadly attack of disease in a hundred forms, more fatal than the murderous shot and shield, and to the Southern prisons.

Ninety-six thousand Union soldiers perished on the field of battle or in hospitals from wounds received in battle. One hundred and eighty-four thousand died in hospital of disease; not to speak of the thousands, who, wounded or sick, went home to linger out their few remaining days amid the scenes of childhood. Thousands starved in Rebel prisons. Such were the terrible ordeals through which thousands were called to pass before victory crowned our banners. Who, but the God of nations and armies could inspire feeble men with the courage, self-sacrifice, devotion, and resolute purpose sufficient to meet unfalteringly these bitter experiences?

The second feature of the war, which discloses the mighty working of the Omnipotent hand, was the freedom which it brought to the slaves. The history of slavery in this country and its being the immediate cause of the war, the difficulties experienced by the government during the war in deciding the question which was settled in 1863 by the glorious Emancipation Proclamation of President Lincoln was ably treated by the speaker.

Little did old Puritan John Brown think, as he stood like a hunted animal at bay, in the Arsenal at Harper's Ferry, with one son lying dead at his feet, another dying beside him—whose pulse he felt with one hand, as with the other he grasped a rifle—that in three short years, the accursed system which his righteous soul abhorred and which he had dealt some stalwart blows in preempting the soil of Kansas for Freedom, would meet its doom. But so it was. The body of the old Apostle of liberty swung dead upon the gibbet, but his spirit permeated the hearts of the loyal North, until the end for which he prayed and toiled and fought was reached. "His soul went marching on." As the splendid army of Sherman—"sixty thousand strong" began its memorable "March to the Sea," the bands struck up the stirring "John Brown Chorus"—and thus inspired, our brave veterans cut a "thoroughfare for Freedom" through the land of slavery, and hastened the downfall of its power. "The price of Liberty was, indeed, great, but we rejoice to-day that the blood and treasures so freely given, proved efficacious under God in the removal of that which all our people now recognize as having, been a curse to the country—as a system detrimental to the highest material welfare of the nation, obstructive to a complete Union, and hostile to the spirit of our free institutions and the traditions of our people.

Every white stone that marks the spot where a Union soldier lies buried is a memorial of the Divine aid—an Eben-ezer—a stone of help. Again the Nation turns aside to visit the graves of her sleeping defenders. They hear no longer the roll of the drum, the bugle call, the hurried command, and the noise of camp and battle. Their earthly warfare is ended; they are at rest; and with you, their "Comrades in Arms," we bear the flowers of affection to lay upon their honored graves. But there remains other things of a sterner nature, to which we must address ourselves, if we would rightly cherish their memory. Who would not drop a flower upon a soldier's grave? But the fragrant rose, the pure lily, the modest violet, the sweet lilac, all will fade. It is the noble sentiment which prompts the beautiful tribute that must be cherished, that will make fertile the nature for the growth of principles. There must be other than the towering monument, the humble slab, the "storied urn or animated bust," and the annual decoration of our dead heroes' graves set up before the gaze of posterity as the memorials stones of God's help in the time of the nation's peril.

If the present and the succeeding generations of our people will but act in harmony with the spirit of the noble utterances of Christian patriotism, the country will live to fulfill her beneficent mission among men. In this way we shall best honor the memory of those who fell in the great struggle to save the Union, and express our reverential gratitude to Him who gave success to the cause for which they fought. Let us resolve to set up these memorial in appreciation of what God wrought through them for the lasting good of our native land.

First, let every patriot do what in him lies to further the material interests of the whole country, respecting the rights of property, the interest of Capitol and labor, the laws of legitimate trade, and the development of our natural rescources. Then we should remember that the several sections of our country are interdependent, and that whatever is detrimental to one is hurtful to the other. We are one people, a united country, and as our interests are mutual we must remember that the prosperity of each section cannot be a matter of indifference to us.

Secondly, let us set up as a memorial the sacred truth that we are a Nation, not a compact, not an alliance of so many independent Sovereign States. The old heresy of "State Sovereignty" has been vanquished in the forum and on the battle-field.

Every state has its "Constitutional Rights." But "Sovereignty" in this country resides not in States, not in executive Legislature and Judicial offices, but in the people. We are a Nation, not a confederation.

Thirdly, let Patriotic devotion to the welfare of our beloved Country dominate all our action as Citizens. Love of country must be stronger than love of party.

Fourthly, let us endeavor to lay broad and deep, as the fundamental elements of National Character, a wise intelligence, and a Christian morality. Ignorance, the mother of superstition and vice, must not find a home on our shores, for an enlightened conscience has a vital part to play in the promotion of the Nation's well-being. A free and honest ballot is, under God, the Nation's safeguard. We are called upon as patriots to fight against these evils; to do what we can to further those efforts whose aim is the intellectual and moral enlightenment of our people. The school, the press, the platform and the pulpit, the great educators, must not give forth an uncertain sound; and the truths which they utter must find a response in the hearts of our countrymen, must meet with their hearty approbation and must have their earnest support.

We look forward into the future of our country. We think of the grand mission she may yet accomplish among the nations of the earth. We know that dangers will beset her on every hand; that the Prince of the Power of Darkness, marshalling his legions of night, will contest every step as she advances toward the attainment of her high destiny. But with this hallowed memorial season reminding us of what God wrought through the heroic sacrifices of our noble dead, our faith as to the future of our beloved land is unshaken. We believe that the succeeding generations of our people, inspired by the spirit of the nation's high mission, will set up the memorial stone and inscribe thereon these words: "Hitherto hath the Lord helped us." The services closed by singing "America."

At this season of the year it will profit you to use Ferrated Hygienic Wine, to cleanse your blood of all poisonous humor. tf

Health is of more consequence than wealth Many sick ones might be cured by using Ferrated Hygienic Wine. tf

Now is the time to rid the system of humors and all Blood impurities. Ferrated Hygienic Wine is a most effective remedy. tf

HOME HAPPENINGS.

Last Thursday afternoon, while engaged in repairing the roof of the Bleachery house on Washington street, H. Coleman Farrington, a carpenter employed at the Bleachery, was thrown to the ground, a distance of about thirty-five feet by the slipping of a roof hook attached to the ladder. In his fall he struck on an awning, and received injuries from which it was thought at first that he could not recover. He was taken up and carried to his residence on Parson's court and Dr. Osborne sent for. Upon examination it was found that the left leg was shattered just below the thigh, both arms were badly fractured at the elbow, his nose broken, and his face otherwise badly bruised. It was also thought that he had received internal injuries. The condition of the sufferer was so bad, that it was deemed advisable to have him removed to the Salem Hospital which was immediately done, and at last accounts was as comfortable as could be expected. It was thought at first that the fractured leg would have to be amputated, but the surgeons in charge now hope to save all his limbs. Mr. Farrington is a man about 50 years of age, and was a soldier during the war, serving in Capt Devereaux's Company in the 19th Reg. He was color bearer at the battle of Fredicksburg, where he received wounds in his right leg, which has always troubled him since.

The will of the late Andrew Torr, bearing date May 10, 1876, has been presented for probate and a hearing will be given at Salem on the third Monday in June. The instrument leaves the entire estate to his wife, Clarissa, during her lifetime, and at her decease the homestead on Washington street, with the land under and adjoining, and the old homestead house in the rear with all furniture, etc., is to be given to his daughter, Mrs. Harriet Ellen Wingate, during her lifetime, and at her death to her children. The real estate on Foster street, with the tannery and currying shop, goes to Henry C. Torr. All notes, accounts and debts due from John S. Torr are giving to him outright. The balance of the estate and property is left in trust to James P. King as Trustee. If Henry C. Torr so elects he can purchase the eight acre lot adjoining the Gallows hill pasture for $1200, within six months of the decease of his wife. The sum of $6000 is to be safely invested and the interest together with the income of the Osborne pasture, so called, to be paid to John S. Torr during his lifetime, and at his decease to be equally divided between his children. The balance of the estate is to be converted into money and paid over equally to his three children, John S. Torr, Henry C. Torr and Harriet Ellen Wingate. He leaves the widow as executrix.

Captain Charles H. Manning, a former resident of this town, died in Washington, D. C., at the age of 64 years. He was a son of the late Richard Manning of Salem, and carried on the business of cabinet making in South Danvers before the war. In 1861 he enlisted in the Fourth Light Artillery and was sent to Ship Island, serving in the department of the Gulf. He was adjutant of the Second Regiment of Artillery. His command was present at the surrender of Forts Jackson and St. Phillip and later at New Orleans and Camp Parapet at Carrolton. Failing health compelled him to resign. He removed to Washington after the war, and was appointed doorkeeper of the House of Representatives and a member of the Capitol police. He was a member of the Salem Common Council in 1861, resigning to go into the army. He was a member and a Past Grand of Essex Lodge of Odd Fellows, having been taken in Feb. 20, 1854. He leaves a widow, one son and three daughters. His funeral took place from the Universalist Church, Sunday, at 1 o'clock.

Ground was broken on the square last Thursday for the horse railroad improvements and extensions. The track on the right hand side of Main street was taken up just beyond the curve on the hill in front of Warren Bank building, and the track has been straightened out by being carried about eight feet nearer the sidewalk at the corner of Foster street, at which point a switch has been put in connecting the other track. The line is being laid on Lowell street about twelve feet from the curbstone in front of the Upton building, and will be continued in the middle of the road to Endicott street. A flat rail is being laid with block paving between the rails and outside for about eighteen inches. Monday morning work was begun on the Danvers road in front of the Boston & Maine station. Large gangs of men are at work on both roads, and the work will be pushed ahead rapidly. H. Gore, a Boston contractor, is doing the work.

Thomas Trask, formerly a respected resident of this town, died in Danvers, Thursday, at the age of 75 years 11 months and 18 days. He built the building known as Sutton block, then called Trask's building, and carried on the furniture and upholstering business in rooms on the second floor. Previous to his going into the furniture business, he had a grocery store in the large building which formerly stood where the fountain, in front of the depot, now stands and used to receive and fill orders from the Boston firm of J. Osborne & Co. The house was purchased by Thos. Stimpson and removed to Lowell street opposite School street. He was also an auctioneer, carried on harness making, and was for several years sealer of weights and measures. He also served as town liquor agent with his agency in what is a part of the store now occupied by Wm. F. Sawyer. He also served in the fire department previous to the division of the town, and was a member of the old Danvers Light Infantry. Mr. Trask sold the estate to William Putnam of Danvers, and removed to that town himself, where he engaged in the manufacture of shoes. During his residence in this town, he was much interested in a remnant tribe of Indians, who used to accompany an Indian doctor on his travels, and these Indians always stopped at Mr. Trask's during their visits here, and would give exhibitions of their skill as marksmen, and tricks of legerdemain in the old Town Hall. Deceased had been residing in Salem, but had removed back to Danvers, only a short time before his death. He leaves a widow, a sister of Henry M. Osborne of this town, one son and a daughter. The funeral took place from Danvers, Sunday, the remains being interred in Monumental cemetery in this town. Rev. F. W. Sprague, of the Universalist church, attended the funeral.

Rev. George N. Anthony, formerly pastor of the Congregational Church in this town, died at his home in Newton Highlands Sunday after a long sickness, death resulting from consumption. He was born in Kingston, R. I., Nov. 17, 1823, and graduated from Brown's University in the class of 1850. He studied theology at Andover and was ordained pastor of the Congregational Church in Great Falls, N. H., in 1855. From Great Falls he removed to Marlboro, Mass., and settled in this town in 1869, remaining here until some time in 1877, when he resigned on account of ill health. He was elected on the School Committe in 1870 for a term of three years and at the expiration of this term was re-elected for three years. His first wife died during his ministry in this town, and for his second wife he married Miss Emily Poole, of this town, who died about two years ago. Mr. Anthony removed from this town to Newton Highlands, where he has since resided. For several years he has held the position of Treasurer of the Massachusetts Home Missionary Society. Deceased leaves one son and a daughter. The funeral services will be held this afternoon in the Seminary Chapel, in Andover.

Monday noon a small boy by the name of James Toole, aged about 14 years, climbed through a window at Larry Cuddire's on Mill street, and stole a package, containing $35 in money from a bureau drawer. The loss was soon discovered, the police notified and officer Goodwin was soon on the track of the boy, and after chasing him through several streets was playing hide and seek with him around the Unitarian church, when Chief Peasley appeared on the scene and the boy was captured by Goodwin and locked up. He had thrown the money away, but it was found on Franklin street by Chief Peasley. The boy had a bottle in his pocket, which he said he had been sent, by his mother, to get filled with whiskey. A patent catarrh medicine was also found in his pockets, and it is thought that this was stolen from Grosvenor's drug store. The boy has been in several scrapes of this kind before, but has always got out of them on account of his age. He will probably go to the Reform School this time. The case came before the court this afternoon and was continued until the last Wednesday in June. The boy plead guilty.

Next Saturday will be Memorial Day and business as a general thing will be suspended around town. The banks will remain closed for the day and the Post Office will only open for a few hours in the morning. The order of exercises of the day were published last week and below will be found the programme of exercises at the Town Hall in the afternoon.

John F. Pickering has sold his residence on Franklin street to William H. Perkins.

The liquor dealers were jubilant last week when it was announced that the present term of the court had no power to try the appealed cases. A special act of the legislature was obtained to allow the May term of the Superior Criminal Court to come in on the first Monday in May instead of the second. This was done and now exceptions have been filed on the ground that the court had no jurisdiction, as it was not the term to which they were continued. The matter has been submitted to the Supreme Court. A similar state of affairs came up in 1866 and at that time some three hundred liquor cases were thrown out. Those cases which were sentenced at the present term of the court, which were affected by this act, have been suspended until after the decision of the Supreme court has been received.

The annual convention of the Master Car Builders Association, will be held at the Hotel Hygeia, Old Point Comfort, Va., June 9th, going in the steamship "D. H. Miller," Frank M. Howes, commander, from Central Wharf, Boston, June 6. This New England Railroad Club was organized March 21, 1883. The following are the officers: President, J. W. Marden; Vice President, J. N. Lander; Secretary and Treasurer, J. M. Ford; Executive Committee, J. W. Marden, Chairman, F. N. Adams, J. N. Lander, O. Stewart, John Kent, D. C. Richardson, C. J. Post, F. C. Moseley, G. H. Billings; Finance Committee, S. D. Nye, F. M. Curtis, Osgood Bradley, Henry L. Leach, Geo. W. Peck, Geo. Buntin, F. S. Sherburne, T. W. Getman.

The Lawrence American speaks thus of Billy Hayes' appearance in Court: About 12.15 o'clock "Billy" Hayes was brought into court and assigned a seat in the prisoners' dock. All eyes were soon upon him. He appeared much younger and a different looking man than when seen by the American scribe after his arrival at the Lawrence jail. He was attired in a new and neat-fitting suit of clothes. His face was cleanly shaved, and the imperial worn by him after his arrival from New Orleans had been removed, adding greatly to his appearance. Of course he displayed that care-worn look that is noticeable on individuals who have been confined in prison. Each of his counsel shook hands and conversed with him for a brief period.

Sunday morning William Dunney, Dennis McCarthy and John Gill were arrested by officers Peasley and McKean, of the Peabody police, and officer Barrenson of Salem, for amusing themselves by riding on the backs of some of N. M. Quint's cows and chasing them around the pasture until the cows were nearly dead. As the event took place just over the Salem line, they were taken to Salem and were tried in the district court Monday morning. Gill and McCarthy were fined $10 and costs each and Dunney was fined $1 and costs, $7 in all for drunkenness. They all appealed and were held in $300.

The Fort Wayne Journal of Friday says: On Wednesday afternoon about 3 o'clock, while five men were loading lumber at Peabody, a few miles west of this city on the Nickel Plate, a bolt of lightning struck one of them, John Wolford, on top of the head, tearing the crown of his hat out, tore a hole in the skull, ran down his neck and body to hips, where it apparently went to the inside of the leg and tore off his boot, killing him instantly. While this happened in Peabody, it was Peabody, Indianna, instead of Massachusetts.

The newly-formed Ladies' Relief Corps met in G. A. R. Hall, Thursday evening, and organized with the choice of the following officers: President, Mrs. S. F. Kittredge; Senior Vice, Mrs. George F. Barnes; Junior Vice, Mrs. Charles H. Goulding; Treasurer, Mrs. Benjamin Beckett; Secretary, Addie Little; Chaplain, Miss M. O. Barrett; Conductor, Miss Minnie Osborne; Guard, Mrs. W. W. Reed. The corps has thirty-four members and will be instituted in a few days. The corps will assist Post 50, G. A. R., in their work of charity.

Dr. Pike and party started for Moosehead Lake, Monday evening. Besides Dr. Pike the following gentlemen are in the party: Chas. A. Haskell, F. Osborne, Jacob Osborne, S. E. Cassino, Frank T. Arnold, Rev. W. G. Sperry and Wyman B. Richardson of Peabody. Dr. C. W. Haddock of Beverly, W. T. George of Lynn, and W. S. Nevins of Salem. They will remain away about a week or ten days.

Dr. Loring answers the charges of mismanagement of the finances of the Bureau of Agriculture as follows: On April 6, 1885, the day the new commissioner took charge of the department, there was remaining to the credit of the department an unexpended balance of $189,265.90, which included $103,000 for the bureau of animal industry, $1759.56 for the forestry division, $10,050.95 for the States trial division, $5259.28 for labor, and $178.28 for the sod division. There was also an unexpended balance of $43.33 for salaries, $7446 for the entomologist investigations and $3746 for contingent expenses.

CATARRH.

BY A. P. LIGHTHILL, M. D.

The earliest symptoms of Catarrh is a discharge from the head, consisting sometimes of a clear acid fluid, but oftener of a thick, fœtid, purulent yellow or greenish matter, which is usually secreted in excessive abundance, and discharged through the nostrils or throat, and frequently by both channels.

The nature of this discharge varies in different cases, and even in the same individual at different times. In some it is copious, and of a loose or fluid character, while in others it is very viscid or gummy, adhering to the diseased membrane with glue-like tenacity; often this offensive matter concretes in dry, hard masses of crusts, which obstruct breathing, and are very difficult to detach, their dislodgment requiring most violent efforts. Sometimes these incrustations come away in lumps of a deep green tint, but occasionally in broad and flat casts of a notable size, on which traces of blood may at times be observed. This condition is very liable to run to serious ulceration, involving a loss of the bony structure of the nose and a subsequent flattening of that organ, and is invariably accompanied by a breath of exceedingly fœtid and sickening odor. In some cases it becomes so revoltingly offensive as to render the sufferer an object of disgust to himself as well as to others.

The nasal membrane is thickened and congested, causing the nose to be stopped up, sometimes on one side, sometimes on the other, and often on both, giving rise to a disagreeable, stuffy sensation in the head, and occasionally to violent paroxysms of sneezing.

A feeling of fullness, heat, irritation, soreness or pain is generally experienced in the nostrils, near the root of the nose, as well as in the upper part of the throat, above and below the soft palate. A distressing sensation of heavy weight or compression is usually complained of over the forehead, especially in the region immediately above and between the eyes. Sometimes the pain is obstinately fixed in one particular part, as in the temples, on top of the head, at the back of the neck, or behind the orbits; and occasionally it manifests itself in the face, of so severe a character that it is frequently mistaken for neuralgia.

The voice is generally affected, and becomes hoarse, weak and uneven, assuming a nasal character, or an unpleasant sniffling quality. Cough of variable severity is not unfrequently one of the symptoms and results of Catarrh.

The sense of smell is generally blunted or entirely lost, and a similar effect on taste may be occasionally observed. The eyes are apt to become irritable, and disposed to water excessively on exposure to the cold or wind, and a sense of weariness of sight is usually experienced after slight exertions. Hearing becomes frequently more or less impaired and noises in the head very often add materially to the existing distress.

The stomach generally suffers more or less, and becomes weak and irritable; the appetite is capricious, and nearly always bad in the morning.

The patient often complains of lassitude and fatigue, an incapacity for either physical or mental exertions, and a constant disposition to drowsiness and sleep. The mental faculties are also sometimes slightly affected, loss of memory being not unfrequently experienced.

Catarrh may prove fatal, either by debilitating the system and wearing out the patient, or by travelling downward and producing consumption. This fact has been so repeatedly noticed that all experienced practitioners now look upon Catarrh as one of the earliest manifestations of this dreaded complaint. Among educated physicians in this or any other country, Dr. Lighthill was the first to devote his study and investigation to the cure of Catarrh and kindred diseases, and the happy results which attended his labor have been attested to by many of the most prominent citizens of Boston and vicinity. Cases abandoned as hopeless by other physicians have promptly yielded to his painless and effective treatment.

ASTHMA

For years Dr. Lighthill has made this distressing disease his special study, investigating carefully the causes that produce it; his labor was fully rewarded, for he not only established its true pathological condition, but also discovered a new and correct system of treatment for its cure. Hundreds of cases who have been under his care have found permanent relief from this wonderful discovery, from the beginning of this treatment prompt benefit is experienced which is ultimately followed by a complete and radical cure.

An experience of 30 years of constant practice enables Dr. Lighthill to decide on the first examination as to the cureability of any disease within specialty, and no case will be accepted for treatment unless the chances are for favorable results. His specialty comprises the cure of and affections of the Nervous system from whatever cause.

"Inventors cannot employ a person more trustworthy or more capable of securing for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office."

EDMUND BURKE, late Com. of Patents.

BOSTON, Oct. 19, 1870.

R. H. EDDY, Esq.—Dear Sir: you procured for me, in 1870, my first patent. Since then you have acted for and advised me in hundreds of cases, and procured many patents, re-issues and extensions. I have occasionally employed the best agencies in New York, Philadelphia and Washington, but I still give you almost the whole of my business, in your line, and advise others to employ you.

Yours truly, GEORGE DRAPER.

How They Referred a Question of Marriage to Providence.

In the days when Congressman John D. Long, of Massachusetts went a courting, his inamorata was not entirely free from the tinge of superstition which possessed almost everybody, that is, she didn't care to spill the salt, or sit with thirteen at the table, and all such innocent diversions. Withal, she was the most charming and cultured of ladies. Well, after John had burned the old man's anthracite for the usual two years, and escorted the young lady to the conventional number of husking bees and phantom parties, he mustered up courage (he was awful bashful in those days) to get down on his hunkers and pop the question.

'Du tell, John,' said the fair one. 'So you want me to wed?'

'You bet!' said the future legislator.

'Wa'al, neow, John, splicin' is one of the solemnest things that one kin dew—'

'It needs two,' interrupted the embryo husband.

'And so,' she continued, 'it hadn't oughter be entered into without some consideration. I love you, John, but I want to know whether the Lord sanctions it.' Here John began to murmur something about the Lord's business.

'So, John, I'm going to open the good book and decide by the verse my eye lights on whether it's right or not.'

'Oh, pshaw!' said John; 'that's all in your eye.'

'But that's the way John Wesley used to decide things, John.'

'But I'm not asking John Wesley. I'm asking you, dear,' said John. 'But go ahead.'

'You'll abide by the decision?'

'That depends,' muttered John, sotto voice.

After some little search the old family bible was hunted up, but as it was night, and they could not find a hoe to remove the accumulated dust, they were again in a quandary. At last John picked up a volume of selected poems, and proposed that she use that. At first she demurred, but eventually gave in. If John ever did any praying in his life, he did it then.

Solemnly she opened the book, and with a murmured invocation cast her eye upon the page and read:

"Man wants but little here below,
Nor wants that little Long."

'Oh John!' screamed the maiden, falling into tears. 'Oh John it cannot be! I'm so very big, John, and see, it mentions your very name. Oh, dear!'

'But,' said John, it don't say anything about what women want, and you're not a man.'

'No, John.'

'And you do want this little Long?'

'Yes, dear.'

'Then that settles it. Man don't want me, but you do. Q. E. D. What could be plainer? Come kiss me, darling,' said the sophistical lover.

'Oh, no, John! it means that we must not be wed. I know it does! Oh, dear!'

'Oh, bother!' said John excitedly. 'Let me see the confounded book. Eureka! You were altogether too previous, my dear. Listen to the next line. I go by the book every time, I go by the book:

'Tis not with me exactly so,
But 'tis so in the song.'

There, if that don't mean that Providence means that you must marry me, I shall take another course in English.'

'Oh, John!'

And they flopped.—St. Paul Herald.

HIS LOSS WAS HER GAIN.—"Well madam," said a fashionable physician to a wealthy lady patient, "if you don't like my prescriptions, perhaps you had better try Parker's Tonic, or some other quack stuff." "You don't mean it Doctor," she answered, "but your advice may be good for all that. Sometimes what you call 'quack stuff' is the best and most scientific medicine, after all." She got a bottle of Parker's Tonic and it cured her of neuralgia arising from disordered stomach and nerves. She told her friends, and now they all keep a doctor at home in the form of Parker's Tonic.

Wife—"If I were to die, dear, what would you do?" Husband (with emotion)—"I cannot imagine such a possibility; but if such an affliction should come to me I suppose I would do as thousand of other husbands have done—grin and bear it."

TOWN OF PEABODY.

BOARD OF HEALTH REGULATIONS

THE Board of Health appointed by the Town hereby make and publish, as required by law,* the following "Regulations for the Public Health and Safety:"—

REGULATION 1ST. It being the duty of the Board of Health, of the Town of Peabody, to make such examination of the premises of persons residing in said town as they shall deem necessary for the public welfare, the Board hereby give notice and require that all premises within said limits shall be ready for inspection by the Board on and after May 15th, 1885.

REGULATION 2D. No house offal, filthy water dead animals or refuse of any kind, shall be thrown upon the streets by any resident; and no butcher, fishmonger, or vender of merchandise, shall leave any refuse upon the streets of this town.

REGULATION 3D. If, upon inspection, any rubbish, offal, decaying animal or vegetable matter, or filth of any kind be found in, under or about any building, within any yard or enclosure, upon any premises, or in the ponds or water courses of said Town of Peabody, or if any privy or drain be found so discharging as to prove a nuisance, and offensive or deleterious to the public health, the owner or occupant of such property or premises shall be notified by the Board to remove or abate such nuisance within 24 hours after said notice has been served.

REGULATION 4TH. If any owner or occupant of property as aforesaid, after having been duly notified, shall neglect to comply with the requirements of the above section, the Board of Health shall cause any and all nuisances to be removed or abated at the expense of the owner or occupants.

REGULATION 5TH. No hogs or goats shall be kept within the limits of this town, except in pastures, or in enclosures kept free from standing water, and regularly and freely disinfected.

REGULATION 6TH. It shall be the duty of occupants of dwellings in which any person or persons may be sick with small pox,* diphtheria or scarlet fever, and Physicians attending such cases forthwith to notify the Board of Health of the fact.

REGULATION 7TH. The occupants of buildings or dwellings where small pox exists, or has existed, shall prohibit and prevent the removal of clothes, bedding and upholstering, or other articles from the infected buildings or dwellings, except the removal is made by permission, or under direction of the Board of Health.

REGULATION 8TH. The occupants of buildings or dwellings where Scarlet Fever and Diphtheria exist shall withdraw all children attending school from the same; and the teachers of said schools shall not allow children thus withdrawn to re-enter the school until they shall present a certificate from the attending Physician vouching for the safety thereof.

REGULATION 9TH. Night soilcarts shall not be allowed to pass through the streets in the thickly settled portions of the town between sunrise and sunset, from May 1st to Nov 1st, without a special permit from the Board of Health.

These Regulations will be Strictly Enforced.

CHAS. G. WESTON, M. D. Chairman THOMAS J. RELIHAN, Clerk, CHARLES C. PIKE, M. D., JOHN SHANAHAN, M. D. WILLIAM S. OSBORNE,	Board of Health.

*The Board shall make such regulations as it judges necessary for the public health and safety * * * Whoever violates any such regulation shall forfeit a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars.—[Extract from the Public Statutes Chap. 80, § 18.

*Section 1, chap. 98 of the laws of 1884. When a householder knows that a person within his family is sick of small-pox, diphtheria, scarlet fever or any other disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the selectmen or board of health of the town in which he dwells, and upon the death, recovery or removal of such person, the rooms occupied and the articles used by him shall be disinfected by such householder in a manner approved by the board of health. Any person neglecting or refusing to comply with either of the above provisions shall forfeit a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars.

MAYO'S

Compound Vegetable Anæsthetic.

A safe and pleasant substitute for gas and ether.

Discovered by Dr. N. K. Mayo of Boston, April 1883, subsequently administered by him in nearly two thousand cases, producing perfect slumber, being applicable to the child the delicate sentitive woman as well as the hardy man. No ill effects have followed its use in any case, it acting rather as a vegetable tonic.

It ... the patient one-fourth longer than gas giving us time to remove from three to twenty teeth. It is with great confidence we have introduced it into our practice, giving very successful results.

EXZEMA OR SALT RHEUM.

ANOTHER CLEAR AND POSITIVE RECOVERY—

AN ELDERLY LADY'S LETTER.

Among the numerous letters received by Dr. Kennedy testifying to notable Salt Rheum cures, the following will be found of interest to our readers, who may accept our assurance of its perfect authenticity and truthfulness:

WORCESTER, Mass., March 23, 1884.

Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.

Dear Sir: Until recently I have been for three years a sufferer from Salt Rheum. It followed upon an attack of Erysipelas, for which I was for a long time under medical treatment. I placed myself again in the hands of the physicians who did. I have no doubt, all that could be done. One thing is sure, however, I was none the better for all the medicine they gave me. The painful and unsightly disease made continual progress until I began to fear I should never get rid of it.

By means of one of those accidents that often result in so much blessing I had my attention called to your FAVORITE REMEDY, which I was told would surely do me good. I used it, and within a much shorter time than I would have believed possible I received a permanent cure. I am now perfectly free from Salt Rheum. What a comfort this is, and how it places your wonderful medicine in my opinion, you may guess at, but never know. I keep it now constantly in the house as a family medicine. Yours truly, MRS. DINAH PHAIR.

Mrs. Phair sometime since, when on a visit to Kansas, found a case of Salt Rheum, could not get FAVORITE REMEDY, sent to New York City for it, and cured the case.

For all diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, Bladder and Digestive Organs, Dr. David Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY, Rondout, N. Y.

MALARIA.

As an anti-malarial medicine

DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S

FAVORITE REMEDY

has won golden opinions. No traveler should consider his outfit complete unless it includes a bottle of this medicine. If you are exposed to frequent changes of climate, food and water, Favorite Remedy should always be within your reach. It expels malarial poisons, and is the best preventative of chills and malarial fever in the world. It is especially offered as a trustworthy specific for the cure of Kidney and Liver complaints, Constipation and all disorders arising from an impure state of the blood. To women who suffer from any of the ills peculiar to their sex Favorite Remedy is constantly proving itself an unfailing friend—a real blessing. Address the proprietor, Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y. $1 bottle, 6 for $5, by all druggists.

Book Notices.

The June Atlantic is a pleasant number with which to usher in the summer. One of the most entertaining articles in it is called "Dime Museums: From a Naturalist's Point of View," by the Rev. J. G. Wood, the English naturalist. Kate Gannett Wells gives a picturesque description of Passamaquoddy Island and its hermit; there is an account of six months spent at Astrakhan, by Mr. Edmund Noble, and a paper on "Modern Vandalism," by Elizabeth Robins Pennell. A statement as to government by committee, at Washington, by J. Lawrence Laughlin and "The Forests and the Census," by Francis Parkman, will interest students of politics. The three serials — Mrs. Oliphant's "Country Gentleman," Miss Jewett's "Marsh Island," and Charles Egbert Craddock's "Prophet of the Great Smoky Mountain's," have all their usual interest. Dr. Holme's "New Portfolio" is also as bright as ever, together with the usual departments. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for June brilliantly closes the Nineteenth volume of this well-established favorite. Two authors contribute the opening article, "Estimates of General Grant" the Rev. Edward E. Hale and Richard B. Kimball, LL. D.; they discuss Grant as a General, as a President, and his place in history. "The Beginning of an Old Bank," by Henry W. Domett, describes the career of the Bank of New York. "Fort Marion, at St. Augustine," by M. Seymour, is a very interesting description of the oldest city in the United States. The musical reader will turn at once to "A Half-hour with Bow Kings," "Educating the Indians," by Mary M. Meline, is a very interesting description of the workings of the Indian school at Carlisle, Pa. The price is 25 cents a number, or $3 a year, postpaid. Published by Mrs. Frank Leslie, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

Marion Harland describes a few good and wholesome "nursery desserts" in Babyhood for May, for mothers who are judicious enough to give their littlest ones such instead of rich cakes and puddings. Wm. P. Gerhard C. E., contributes to the same number a practical talk on "Country Houses and their Surroundings," besides various other important topics which are treated in this issue. Among the subjects dealt with in letters and queries are "Nicknames," "A Special Room for the Baby," "The Training of Mothers," "Home-made Baby-tenders," "Crying and Sedatives," "Imaginary Fear," "Jumping in Sleep," "Feeding on a Journey," "Toeing-in," "The Shirt of Nessus," "Oatmeal Gruel," "Early Impressions," etc. $1.50 a year. New York.

Peterson's Magazine for June comes to us, a paragon of beauty, ahead of all others. The "Story of Louisiana Pine-Lands"—one of rare merit—is finished in this number. But all the stories and novelties in "Peterson," as is well known, are exceptionally good. The terms are but two dollars a year, with great deductions to clubs, and costly premiums to those getting up clubs. Now is an especially good time to subscribe; for a new volume begins with the July number, when those who do not wish back numbers can commence. Specimens are sent gratis, if written for, to persons wishing to get up clubs. Address Charles J. Peterson, 306 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

We have just received from the Ogdensburgh & Lake Champlain Railroad Company a neat little pamphlet on "Notes Along the Way." It contains extracts from a series of letters descriptive of a Trip from Maine to the Thousand Islands. Any of our readers wishing to take a pleasure trip this summer, should send to Frank Owen, G. P. A., Ogdensburg, N. Y., for one of these pamphlets.

SWEET THINGS TANGLED.—Miss Parloa, the cooking expert, says she "makes kisses by beating the whites of six eggs with a Dover beater, and adding a cup of mixed sugar, which she stirs very carefully. Well, she makes them sweet enough, certainly, which shows that she understands something about the business, but if you have plenty of time on hand young man, and don't want to go through all that was apparently needless red tape and circumlocution, when you go into the business of manufacturing kisses, Emma Abbott will be a much more satisfactory partner than Miss Parloa. To make good kisses a girl need not be an authority on Bavarian cream and scalloped oysters, but when she stands on the lower cross-piece her face ought to come at least eight inches above the top of the gate, with the moonlight on one cheek and the shadow on the other, then you know just where to aim, my son. And if you have any doubts about it, send for your old father. You needn't ring. Just rattle a stick on the palings and I'll come down.

EDUCATED AND EXPERIENCED.—Hood's Sarsaparilla is prepared by C. I. Hood & Co., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass., who have a thorough knowledge of pharmacy, and many years practical experience in the business. It is prepared with the greatest skill and care, under the direction of the men who originated it. Hence Hood's Sarsaparilla may be depended upon as a thoroughly pure, honest, and reliable medicine. SPARKS.

The Engineers have been testing the hydrants the past week.

Steamer 2 has just received two handsome pictures from a friend of the company, and have hung them on the walls of their room.

Driver, Joseph Duntley, of the Steamers has been on the sick list, but is now on duty again. Janitor Smart acted as relief driver during the few days he was away.

At the meeting of the Board of Engineers held last Wednesday evening, George N. Miller and George A. Voorhees were approbated as members of Steamer 2 in place of John A. P. Sumner and Charles W. Childs, resigned. The by-laws of H. & L. 1 and Hose 2 were read and approved. Steamer company No. 2 was giving leave to withdraw their petition for a gong on the engine. The whole Board were appointed a committee with authority to exchange the horse of Hose 1, and a number of bills were approved.

The Board of Engineers, after giving it a good test, purchased the chestnut mare of Henry N. Batchelder, the ice man, for use on Hose No. 1. The horse is a handsome and a powerful one, weighs 1390 pounds, works well in the harness, and is afraid of nothing and is about the cheapest piece of horse flesh owned by the town. An exchange was made, Mr. Batchelder taking the old horse "Charlie," and it is said that $200 was paid besides $150 being allowed for the old one, making the new one stand $350 and it is a good bargain. Old "Charlie" will probably be put on the ice team.

Hose companies No. 3 and 5 visited Ipswich last evening and took part in the dedication exercises of the new house of Warren engine company No. 1. They were accompanied by the old board of Engineers. After the bountiful supper, which was served, speeches were made by ex-engineers Littlefield, Folsom, Lord and Pierce, and Engineer Reed, foremen Hooper and Curtis, and by firemen and citizens of Ipswich. The boys got home about 3 o'clock this morning. They went down in barges.

The Sunday Times speaks of Chief S. S. Littlefield. "Steve" says that it is the first time he was ever called Chief, or knew that he was on the Board.

About two o'clock Monday morning, one of the inmates of the four-family house of a Mrs. Kelley, on Beaver street, Salem, was awakened by the smell of smoke, and upon investigating found that some scoundrel had built a fire in the only stairway leading from the house. She quickly extinguished the flames, but not before quite a large place had been burned. Had the fire got any headway some lives would have been lost, as the only way of exit from the upper stories would have been cut off. The stairway had been saturated with kerosene oil.

The Boston Sunday Times has entered the field of firemen's publications, and presents a very interesting paper. The fire department column is under the direction of H. H. Easterbrook, of the State Fireman's Association, who will make it a success if any one can.

There will be an entertainment tomorrow (Thursday, 28th inst.) evening in the vestry of the Rockville church. A selection of "War Poems" will be read by several persons, and "War Songs will be sung by a choir of ladies and gentlemen. The organist, Mrs. M. M. Brown, will be assisted by an Orchestra from Lynn.

A young man from Lynn by the name of Michael Carney, was arrested, after a long chase, Monday night, by Peabody and Salem officers, charged with disturbing the peace in Salem. In the district court in Salem, Tuesday, he was fined $3 and costs.

Eight men are required to run the steam shovel in West Peabody, which is in readiness to begin operations as soon as the tracks to the dump in North Salem are laid. It takes a yard and a half of gravel at a scoop and will fill three hundred cars a day.

Last week the Peabody and Salem High School nines played a game of base ball in the High School league, in Salem and by the unfair decision of the umpire, the Peabody boys were defeated by a score of 8 to 7. The nine is contesting a game with the Beverly boys this afternoon in Beverly.

The Telegram says: Probably some one can tell the public why this delay in awarding to Mr. William Hayes, late of Peabody and New Orleans, the sentence which his crime deserves. We do not believe there is any good reason for it. It is only a continuation of the legal jugglery, which we see everywhere now days.

Levi Spaulding & Son have let out the contracts on the school house as follows: Foundation, John Linehan; mason work, Ed Trask & Son; painting, Andrew Gage, Jr.; plumbing. Daniel B. Lord; lumber, A. F. Clark; hardwood finish, N. Gifford; stairs, Henry Conant; furnaces, J. D. & J. W. Eaton. Mr. Linehan has commenced the stonework.

On the Boston and Maine, one of the most important changes to be contemplated, is a re-arrangement of the trains, so that a train will not start at the same time on both divisions between Boston and Portland. The result will be that instead of five trains between the two cities there will in effect be double that number.

Mr. Charles M. Buffum, the well known hardware dealer, on Essex Street, Salem, died after a protracted illness, last Wednesday, from Brights' disease. Mr. Buffum was known to nearly all our readers, and did an extensive business in seeds and farming implements. He was always genial and pleasant, and everybody was his friend. He leaves a widow and one child.

Frank E. Farnham was elected Treasurer of the association recently formed at the Parker House, Boston, in the interests of the service, or $8 a month pension. The President is Col. E. B. Loring. There were 90 members present, and addresses were made by F. E. Farnham and others. It was decided to hold a monster mass meeting at Portland this summer on the occasion of the G. A. R. convention.

An exchange says: "The custom of allowing floral presents to be given to girl graduates of the public high schools is to be abolished in Baltimore. It was found that the children of well-to-do parents were loaded down with bouquets, while many of the best pupils failed to receive flowers because their parents and friends could not afford to give them." There may be food for reflection in the above for our school committee.

The legislative committee on prisons visited the Salem jail, Tuesday, and expressed their pleasure at the appearance of the building and their surprise at its cheapness. The average cost of prisons in this state, is $1000 per cell, and at that rate the Salem jail would have cost $142,000, or $50,000 above the actual bills, when supplied with hot and cold water, steam heated, gas lighted, and furnished from basement to attic. —Valley Visitor.

Last Friday evening, as Nathaniel Symonds of Peabody, and Miss Grace Dalton of Salem, were riding through Swampscott, the forward wheel of the buggy collided with the rear wheel of a bicycle ridden by William Earl and threw him to the ground. The horse shied and threw the occupants of the buggy out and cleared himself from the carriage, and ran towards Marblehead. He was captured without injury. Neither of the parties were seriously injured.

At the semi-annual meeting of the American Hibernian Benevolent Association, the following officers were elected:—President, P. J. Donnelly; Vice President, Thomas H. O'Connor, Patrick Cassidy; Visiting Committee, Patrick Keefe, Timothy O'Brien, Richard Commane, Michael Cunningham; Janitor, John Pease.

Solomon Varney, of Salem, died Sunday afternoon. His age was 70 years, 6 months and 4 days. Mr. Varney had been a partner with his brother in the tanning and currying business under the firm name of W. D. & S. Varney for nearly fifty years. Seven years ago Mr. Varney had a paralytic shock, from which he never recovered. He leaves a son, Henry Varney, and two daughters, Mrs. Norwood and Mrs. Upton. He was for many years a prominent member of the Universalist Church.

In the Superior Court, Thursday, Leah Tripp, alias Emma Hart and Annie Anderson, alias Minnie Hart, were on trial, charged with setting fire to the Forrest River House on the morning of Sept. 3, 1884. The case was continued through the day and was given to the jury Friday morning. After staying out all day it was found that they could not come to an agreement and were discharged. The jury stood nine for conviction three for acquittal. The case will come up again at the October term of the court.

The floor at the Willows rink is being laid and it will be one of the best in the state. The opening will take place on Thursday evening, June 11.

It is rumored that Thomas Kenney, of the Woburn polo team, is coming to Peabody. He is one of the best centre players in the league.

Chas. Morrill, goal tender of the Peabody polo team, is playing with the New Bedfords, of the Southern New England League.

Manager Reed, of the Salem polo club, has had various offers to locate his team for the summer, but as yet has not accepted any of them. They will play the Gloucesters for $200 a side at Buffalo, N. Y., June 2. They will also play the Stars at Buffalo, at Buffalo, N. Y., on the afternoon and evening of Decoration day.

A very interesting game of polo was played at the rink Friday evening, between two teams of female poloists from Chelsea. The game was called at 9 o'clock by referee R. C. Johnson of Chelsea. The costumes were neat, those of the Crescents being a red Sicilian jacket and undervest, and blue skirts with caps to match the jackets. The Niagaras wore black jerseys and yellow skirts. The first rush was captured by Maud Lord, of the Crescents, while the second and third were taken by Carrie Piquot, of the Niagaras. All three of the goals were won by the Niagaras, in 18 m. 16s., 4m. 10s., and 3m. 35s., respectively. An audience of about 200 was present. Some very good plays were made. The poloists came from Chelsea in a special car on the Lynn and Boston road, arriving about 8.30 o'clock.

John Dempsey won the second prize in the roller skating race at Lynn Monday night.

SOUTH PEABODY.

Hose 5 went to Ipswich last evening to visit an engine company at that place. They were conveyed down and back by Mr. F. E. Newhall.

Some much needed improvements have been made at the family burying ground of the late John Needham, in the rear of County street.

Rev. W. G. Sperry, Chas. A. Haskell and S. E. Cassino arrived home this morning from Moosehead lakes. They report a splendid time. Rev. Mr. Sperry was the champion fisherman. The others of the party will arrive probably Thursday.

The total products of this county are $44.276,514, namely: Farm products, $3,255,114; fish, $644,138; manufactures, $38,377,262. This represents the value of the labor of the population. In 1883 there were more than $32,000,000 deposited in the savings banks of Essex county—a sum equivalent to an average of about $131 to every person.

The Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, through their agent, J. Frank Dalton of Salem, last Friday paid to Miss Hattie Hardy the sum of $9,958, that being the value of a $5,000 policy issued in August, 1857, on the life of the late Isaac Hardy. Mr. Hardy had paid in less than $4,000 in the twenty-eight years he was insured.

J. B. Thomas has a kitten at his stable on Oak street, which is given to getting into tight places, and last Saturday it crawled into the coving of the building and then up to the extreme point of the building, and Monday several shingles were removed, and a hole cut in the roof through which the feline was taken out in a very weak condition.

A shooting match took place at the new range on Forrest street, Memorial Day in the afternoon between George Walton of Peabody and Joseph Lowd of Salem, in which Walton broke 28 glass balls out of 30 and Lowd broke 26. Several other matches were shot and for the afternoon's sport, Walton's score was 54 out of 60. About thirty spectators were present.

A meeting of the young people of the Baptist Church was held in the vestry of that church Thursday evening, and steps taken for the formation of a literary society. Charles A. Sanger was elected President, Emory Myers, Vice President, A. P. Chute, Secretary, and Ira Vaughn, Treasurer. A committee of three was appointed to draw up a constitution and by-laws and select a name for the society, to report at a future meeting.

Hawthorne Council R. A. have paid to Charles S. Goldthwait the sum of $1500, being a half rate benefit on the life of his father. Mr. Goldthwait became a member Sept. 4, 1879, and had paid $74.25 into the Council.

The report of Chief Police Peasley for the month of May is as follows: Whole number of arrests, 28; drunkenness, 16; gaming on the Lord's Day, 4; assaults, 2; keeping liquor, 2; overdriving a horse, 2; indecent assault, 1; vagrancy, 1; number of lodgers, 56.

The report of the engineer of the pumping station for the month of May shows that 17,384,970 gallons of water was pumped, an average of 560,805 gallons per day. It required 43,541 pounds of coal, an average of 1404 pounds a day; 399 gallons was pumped for each pound of coal burned. The running time was 7 hours 8 minutes per day.

The case of Bushby et al the town of Peabody was on the docket of the Superior Civil Court for to-day. It was an action to recover for land taken from the stand pipe on Buxton's Hill. The case was, however, settled Tuesday, by the payment, by the town, of $1000, with interest at two and one-half per cent. for four years, dating from the time the land was taken.

Dr. Preston Sweet, the distinguished medical expert of Boston, pays Salem a professional visit, stopping only one week. Suitable apartments have been prepared at the Essex House, where he will receive, register a limited number of invalids desiring to place themselves under his treatment. Dr. Sweet is the most successful physician in New England, his unparalleled successes in the cure of the worst forms of difficult chronic diseases (those that have defied all other physicians) are a marvel. Remember for one week only, beginning Monday, June 8th.

Poet's Corner.

The Printer's Hiawatha.

[Respectfully dedicated to delinquent subscribers.—Ed Mess.]

Should you ask us why this dunning?
Why all these complaints and murmurs?
Murmurs loud about delinquents,
Who have read the paper weekly,
Read what they have never paid for,
Read with pleasure and with profit,
Read the church affairs and prospects,
Read the news both home and foreign,
Full of wisdom and instruction,
Read the table of the markets,
Carefully corrected weekly—
Should you ask why all this dunning?

From the printer, from the mailer,
From the kind old paper-maker,
From the landlord, from the devil,
From the man who taxes letters
With the stamp of Uncle Samuel—
Uncle Sam the rowdies call him;
From them all there comes a message,
Message kind but firmly spoken:
"Please to pay the bill you owe me."

Sad it is to hear the message,
When our funds are all exhausted,
When the last greenback has left us,
When the nickels all have vanished;
Gone to pay the toiling printer,
Gone to pay the paper-maker,
Gone to pay the landlord's tribute,
Gone to pay the clerk and devil,
Gone to pay the faithful mailer,
Gone to pay Uncle Samuel—
Uncle Sam the rowdies call him—
Gone to pay for beef and Bridget,
Gone to pay the faithful parson.

Sad it is to turn our ledger,
Turn the leaves of this old ledger,
Turn and see what sums are due us,
Due for volumes long since ended,
Due for years of pleasant readings,
Due for years of anxious labor,
Due despite of patient waiting,
Due despite of constant dunning,
One in sums from two to twenty.

Would you lift a burden from us?
Would you drive a spectre from you?
Would you take a pleasant slumber?
Would you have a quiet conscience?
Would you read a paper paid for?
Send us money! Send us money!
Send us money! Send us money!
Send the money that you owe us.

Love, Drink and Debt.

Son of mine! the world before you
Spreads a thousand secret snares
Round the feet of every mortal
Who through life's long highway fares.
Three especial, let me warn you,
Are by every traveller met;
Three to try your might of virtue—
They are love, and drink, and debt.

Love, my boy, there's no escaping;
'Tis the common fate of man;
Father had it; I have had it;
But for love you had not been.
Take your chances, but be cautious;
Know a squab is not a dove;
Be the upright man of honor,
All deceit doth murder love.

As for drink, avoid it wholly;
Like the adder it will sting;
Crush the earliest temptation,
Handle not the dangerous thing.
See the wrecks of men around us—
Once as fair and pure as you—
Mark the warning! Shun the pathway
And the hell they're trotting through.

Yes, though love be pure and gentle,
And from drink you may be free,
With a yearning heart I warn you
'Gainst the worst of all the three.
Many a demon in his journey,
Bunyan's Christian Pilgrim met.
They were lambs, e'en old Apollyon
To the awful demon debt!

With quaking heart and face abashed,
The wretched debtor goes;
He starts at shadows, lest they be
The shades of men he owes.
Down silent streets he furtive steals,
The race of men to shun;
He shivers at the postman's ring,
And fears the dreadful dun.

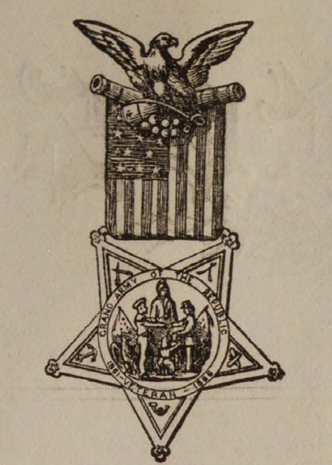
Beware of debt! Once in, you'll be
A slave forevermore;
If credit tempt you, thunder "No!"
And show it to the door.
Cold water and a crust of bread
May be the best you'll get;
Accept them like a man, and swear—
"I'll never run in debt."

So Sweet a Story.

I cannot tell you when, dear,
Or where it may have been,
That love first chanced to wander
Your life and mine between.
But as your gaze once held me,
But as our fingers met,
I dream'd so sweet a story
My heart shall ne'er forget.

I wist not were you noble,
To me 'twas all the same.
I cared not for your lineage,
And ask'd not for your fame,
Your eyes with tears were tender,
Your lips with truth did part,
That day I knew you faithful
And gave you all my heart.

When tears have chased our laughter,
When love has wept, farewell,
Some day we'll meet hereafter,
Somewhere, we cannot tell,
Then let our life's sweet story
Be writ in words of gold,
The truest tale, my darling,
The world was ever told.



MEMORIAL ADDRESS.

Address by Past Commander Geo. H. Patch.

TOWN HALL, MEMORIAL DAY, MAY 30th, 1885

Mr. Commander, Comrades and Friends of the Grand Army:—This day with its hallowed remembrances nulls the deeds that mark the dividing line that separates us from the dark and gloomy days of the late rebellion. This is Memorial day, fitly named; for it combines the memories of all that is great, grand and ennobling in our national life and makes the enjoyment of our institutions more secure. To-day the heart beats with emotion at the recollections of those events that have placed our nation beyond the influence of malign treason; and in the observance of this day our affections find new objects of sympathy as we breathe in new inspirations of truth and loyalty. We see more and more the need of steadfast endeavor to keep alive the fire of patriotism that filled the breasts of those whose memories we cherish, and may we hope by new and faithful devotion, to instill into the minds of the people the necessity of the Grand Army and the perpetuation of these memories which this day awakens, so that on the return of each succeeding Memorial day, they may visit the graves of the honored dead and there drink in the inspirations of loyalty and patriotism. In looking around this audience I see a great many children; boys and girls, many of whom have been born since the existing days of the rebellion, and to whom its trials, its objects and its consequences are matters of tradition, and I am constrained to instill into their minds the pressing necessity of the Grand Army and the due observance of our Memorial day, and in doing so I will relate a few facts concerning the origin of the day. It may not be known even by some of the older ones here, how Memorial day originated. It has been said, it originated among the people of the South. It is true the decoration of Soldiers' graves was first done at the South, but it was upon the graves of Union soldiers. James Redpath, whose name was associated with those who were first to champion the colored man's cause, was the first to enter the city of Charlestown, South Carolina, in behalf of the freedmen and founded schools for freedmen and their children. He heard of overtures that had been made by the South to a number of Union soldiers who were prisoners in Charlestown, to take the oath of allegiance, to the Confederacy with the promise of high positions, civil and military, far removed from the front, but to their credit they indignantly turned with scorn from their proposals. Three came to Redpath an idea to strike terror to the slaveholder, and accordingly, he organized a band of colored men, women, and children and marched through the city of Charlestown, Singing, "John Brown's body lies moulding in the grave, his soul goes marching on." What a scene it must have been to the whites of that city. They had never before taken part in any public demonstration in that city; they had been made free men; and they marched through the streets like free men; grateful for the blessing that had been bestowed upon them.

Redpath was the first to found a National cemetery in the South. After obtaining permission he fenced in a piece of ground, within which were enclosed the graves of several Union soldiers that were strewn with flowers, and thus commenced our Memorial Day.

When General John A. Logan issued his first Memorial day order, he said: "If other eyes grow dull, other hands slack and other hearts cold in the solemn trust, ours shall keep it as long as the light and warmth of life remains to us." Let us, then, at the time appointed, gather around their sacred remains and garland the passionless mounds above them, with the choicest flowers of spring time, let us raise above them the dear old flag they saved from dishonor, let us in this solemn presence renew our pledges to aid and assist those whom they have left among us as a sacred charge upon a nation's gratitude. The return came in 1868 when in twenty-seven states and one hundred and eighty-three localities the surviving heroes had rendered homage to the beloved dead. In 1869 from thirty-one states came the report of Memorial day, and it had grown in its grandeur and increased in its strength, and it has continued, and it is for that purpose that we are assembled here to-day. This day stands out like a mile stone, and while it withstands the cold blasts of winter and the withering sun of summer it has become a land mark marking the line between loyalty and disloyalty.

This day has become a necessity as an accessory of our organization; it demonstrates to the state and to the individual the necessity of the Grand Army of the Republic. Not many months ago, when the perfumes of the Magnolia would be borne on the pinions of a southerly breeze to the chilly climate of the North, was wafted on account of an occurrence of more than passing import. The legislature was in session in Mississippi, and Jefferson Davis was called upon to address them on the results of the late struggle between the Union and the South. After alluding to the events of the past two decades, he made the statement, "It has been said I should apply to the United States Government for a pardon; but repentance is necessary to procure a pardon, and I have not repented." Twenty years after the scenes of domestic turmoil, he has said, I delight in the course I pursued; at the secession of the south, I would do now, as I did in 1861.

Resolved at any time, for tranquility, it was in his power to reconcile the minds of the Southern people and furnish and incentive of good; but it was proof of the sullenness of his nature, that he never spoke a word for such a purpose. No wonder he declared himself ready to do over again, what he did in 1861; it mattered little to him what suffering and misery he had heaped upon others; he had come though unscathed, and is enjoying the profit, if any profit it was. But when a superior of the South rejoices, we may as well ask ourselves on this Memorial day, Is disloyalty a crime? Is loyalty a virtue? While no true soldier of the Grand Army will ever sneer at those who rivaled them, it is fitting to give to such a man, more than a passing thought, lest it be said that treason merits reward. There is a necessity for the Grand Army to-day and there will be for years to come. The Grand Army will speak with no uncertain sound when the institutions of our government are threatened, for it stands to-day just where it did at the outbreak of the Rebellion.

We cannot afford to sit listlessly by and listen to the utterances which glorify the wrong and set aside the right. The rising generation is but imperfectly informed on the dreadful causes that induced our late war; and so we need the Grand Army to teach the younger element, the awful inducement, the monstrous treason that imperiled our nation twenty-three years ago while our army was divided and our navy scattered far and wide upon distant seas. It would seem that treason must prevail at the outset of the contest, but when the keen bugle blast that called for 75,000 volunteers was heard reverberating through the land, and despite the dark fact that a cloud hung over the future of our glorious nation, that sound, wafted from the forest clad hills of Maine to the rocky summit of the Pacific coast, was everywhere caught up, and then went forth the cry—"The Union! it must, and shall be preserved," and from that time there was no uncertainty about the result of the contest, although a long and bitter struggle followed. The nation cannot afford to have the memory of those dark and bloody events blotted out. We should strive to impress upon the minds of the young, the suffering that our heroes endured to save their nation's honor. They left the mansions of the rich, the quiet pursuits of the counting room and the prosperous workshops of the mechanic, for the scanty protection of the tent; to be exposed to the burning heat of summer and the malarial swamps of the South. They left all the pleasures of domestic life, for the rude toils of the camp, sacrificing every selfish motive and personal comfort, and frequently commanded by men not their equal in anything but military rank, and all of this was done, not for themselves, but for the salvation of the Union.

Those men suffered without murmuring and many still live to tell the story, among whom are the members of the Grand Army, and we need the Grand Army to tell the story that may become a living picture to the coming generations. We can remember men in the dark days of the struggle, when re-enforcements were continually going forth, grumbling about the taxes that were levied to carry on the war. Did those men ever stop to think of the sufferings of the soldier lying with mangled limbs, and their wounded bodies festering in the heat of day, beneath the burning rays of a Southern sun and the chills of a Southern night, barely protected by the shoddy blankets made by these same grumbling tax payers? Did those soldiers think of complaining of the privations they endured to save their nation from treason? How nobly their acts stand out against the grumbling tax payer. These men were loyal to the flag, and we need the Grand Army to perpetuate the memory of that loyalty. We remember how we have followed the dear old flag; how gladly we hailed it in victory and how we rallied to its support in defeat, and we thank God that we had a country worth fighting for. [Applause.] Our soldiers were not like those of other lands, trained to the art of war, they were natural fighters. Our soldiers were trained among the peaceful communities of the cities and towns they left when they went forth to the great contest. Never did anyone fight better than those brave soldiers at Antietam, Spotsylvania and Cold Harbor. Let the young man of to-day think of the Cumberland, crushed by the deadly stroke of the rebel ram, and the gallant tars firing that broadside as they sank beneath the waves of the old ocean; think of that general of whom it was said, "He wrote our history with the point of his sword upon the sands of Georgia and put in great victories for punctuation points." Think of Sheridan as he made that memorable ride arriving at the very moment of despair, and changing the tide to victory from inevitable defeat. Think of the "grand silent man of destiny" who to-day is struggling with an enemy he cannot conquer.

Friends and fellow citizens, I have endeavored to point out the necessity of the continuance of the Grand Army, trusting my words may not have fallen by the wayside but have found a fertile soil where they may take root and flourish in years to come. I beg of you to support your local Post. They were members of that great army that responded to freedom's call and put down an unnatural rebellion. Let your voices and your hands, therefore, encourage their work, and you shall join with them in their reward.

Comrades, what is our reward? We have peace and prosperity on every hand, loyalty has triumphed over disloyalty, and we have demonstrated to our foreign neighbors that we can put down treason and rebellion. We hold out to subjects of all nations the invitation to all who desire to embrace the doctrines of our institutions, the freedom and protection of our government, and none other need apply. Even our dead are not forgotten. Every year adds some fresh mounds to swell the number of those we decorate. We now have 16,952 graves in the state while 17,636 men represent the strength of our order, and thus it is plain in a very few years we shall decorate more graves than we have men in our organization. But while we last they shall not be forgotten. Therefore, we see our country safe and prosperous, and our dear old flag respected by every nation, and on every sea our dead soldiers venerated. This is our reward. We gather in our Grand Army halls to fight the battles over again, and tell the deeds of heroism of those who have passed away, but we shall soon be all mustered out. Some must remain, however, and hold the outposts till the last has passed beyond the trials of life. But we shall be kindly remembered by those who look back upon the past, and think that in the days of great peril there were men who dared put down the rebellion at the risk of their lives and the sacrifice of the comforts of home. Let us gather around the low green mounds, entrances to the eternal life beyond, and with gratitude chant that benediction in the words of the poet's song.

The Raymond Expeditions to the Yellowstone National Park.—Messrs. Raymond & Whitcomb's pioneer excursions to the Yellowstone National Park, announced for July 23 and August 27, are attracting much attention. They offer the best opportunities possible for seeing the marvels of that enchanted land, where there are thousands of hot springs and geysers, together with the grandest canon scenery in the world. Some of the geysers throw immense columns of water 200 and 300 feet high. The excursionists are to devote twice the usual length of time to make the round of the park that they may not be hurried. Other picturesque points are to be visited en route through the Northwest. For nearly 1100 miles the route lies over the Northern Pacific Railroad through Minnesota, Dakota, and Montana. The parties are limited to the accommodations of two Pullman cars. Send for descriptive circulars (also for "Twelve Summer Trips") to W. Raymond, 240 Washington street, Boston.

Ducks are said to have colder feet than any other animal. We little thought when we were courting our present wife and slinging such taffy as "ducksy darling" at her that our figure of speech would prove such a stern, cold reality.

A gifted Bridgeport liar writes that a bluebird was recently picked up on Golden hill, dead and stiff, with his mouth wide open. An examination of his vocal organs disclosed the first bar of "Spring, spring, beautiful spring" frozen cross-wise in his throat.—Hartford Conn.

DOES IT PAY?

I made a little arithmetical calculation, to-day, which possibly may interest the young people of Peabody if not their parents and guardians.

Some one suggested the computation by expressing regret that the classes graduating from our High Schools now-a-days feel impelled to spend so much money on non-essentials. I made inquiries as to what was meant, then to see whether a few dollars here, and a few dollars there would really make any considerable sum. I ascertained the number of pupils in the class of '85, in this town, and their chief incidental expenses.

First, an entertainment at the skating-rink the night after the graduating exercises which may cost three dollars per head. There being nineteen members in the class, we here have nineteen times three, or fifty-seven dollars. Since from various causes (many of them unnecessary but which there is scarcely leisure here to enumerate) the pupils, especially the girls, whose dress is so much more of a care than that of their boy class-mates, are pretty well demoralized. Might this rink party with refreshments, late hours, etc., etc., not sensibly be replaced by a simple reception of an hour or two at some private house or at the Peabody Institute, with some very light, inexpensive lunch, contributed by the patrons of the school?

Second. Photographs, I learn, will cost three dollars and fifty cents per pupil. Nineteen times three dollars and fifty cents is sixty-six dollars and fifty cents. Now is this a wise expenditure? To be sure it is a pleasure to have pictures of our very dear friends. But however much interested pupils may be in one another, it is scarcely possible that there can be any such life-long attachments between one and all, as at all to warrant this expense unless each pupil chance to have the purse of Fortunatus. I doubt somewhat if this be true, and I think few members of this class of '85 afford to take a periodical that would cost even two dollars and a half per year. Suppose this class should decide to eliminate photographs and further, that they could manage to persuade the teachers of the High School to do likewise there would be a clear saving of seventy-seven dollars.

Boys fortunately do not have to don white kids in order to legally take the diploma from our public schools. But granting that the ten girls spend one dollar and twenty-five cents each for said appendages, here we have twelve dollars and a quarter spent needlessly. For why would one care to hide the human hand in uncomfortable coverings on a hot summer's day?

Here and there in each class leaving school is a boy or girl whose parents have a large income and can easily spare from five to twenty-five dollars for a spread dress. But this is not the general rule. In many families an overworked mother must strain every nerve to contrive to meet the extra expense of the graduation dress. Is this right or even in good taste? Let all be "done decently and in order." But would it be unfair to allow five dollars per pupil for expenses for dress that might rightly be called extravagance? Now let us foot up our items.

Rink party,	$57.00
Photographs of pupils,	66.50
Photographs of teachers,	10.50
Extra dress,	95.00
Gloves,	12.50
Total	$241.50

Two hundred and forty dollars would give one hundred and twenty city children a week's vacation in the country with plain healthful board, at two dollars a week. Or it would board a child nearly four years at an orphan's home at one dollar and twenty-five cents a week. Or it would buy a very valuable set of reference books for the High School, to be kept in the main school room under charge of the Principal. Or it would buy several valuable pieces of apparatus for the physical laboratory of the school. Or, if the class would prefer to spend the money in some way upon themselves only, it would take the whole class, under some chaperon, to the White Mountains for a few days, by reducing expenses as far as possible. Of course there are dozens of other trips that could be substituted.

Dividing this sum equally among the nineteen members, each would have over twelve dollars, which would buy a good but small microscope, or a fine outfit of pencils, brushes, paints, etc., for either water-colors or oil-painting, or would pay the subscription for either a paper or a good magazine for four years.

Again, the class might choose some one of their number of intellectual ambition and talent and vote this sum to him or her to defray the expense of one year of study in a college.

All this is said with reference to the sum that could be easily saved by this one class. But if this class should establish a precedent, a philanthropist might grow giddy in estimating the fine schemes that future classes might accomplish.

Rheumatism

It is an established fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla has proven an invaluable remedy in many severe cases of rheumatism, effecting remarkable cures by its powerful action in correcting the acidity of the blood, which is the cause of the disease, and purifying and enriching the vital fluid.

It is certainly fair to assume that what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for others it will do for you. Therefore, if you suffer the pains and aches of rheumatism, give this potent remedy a fair trial.

A Positive Cure.

"I was troubled very much with rheumatism in my hips, ankles, and wrists. I could hardly walk, and was confined to my bed a good deal of the time. Being recommended to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, I took four bottles and am perfectly well. I cheerfully recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla as one of the best blood purifiers in the world." W. F. Wood, Bloomington, Ill.

For Twenty Years

I have been afflicted with rheumatism. Before 1883 I found no relief, but grew worse. I then began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, and it did me more good than all the other medicine I ever had." H. T. Balcom, Shirley, Mass.

"I suffered from what the doctors called muscular rheumatism. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and am entirely cured." J. V. A. Proudfoot, letter carrier, Chicago, Ill.

A FAMOUS POKER GAME.

The Story of How William M. Scott Won $150,000 Recalled by His Death.

The name of William M. Scott, who died at Toronto recently, was heralded from one end of the continent to the other about two years ago, when he won the sum of $150,000 in a single game of poker. Scott was a native of Newburg, New York, where he lived when he played his famous game. The players in the game were three well-known citizens of that town, one of whom, the victim, had just become heir to half a million. This was a man named Weed. Scott also had money, and was surrounded by wealthy friends. The third member of the party was a former Sunday school teacher, a dentist named Dr. Montreville M. Hedges. It was shown afterward that the poker pot was adroitly run up to $150,000 on bets of at least $5,000 each. The dealer was Dr. Hedges, the shrewdest player of the three. As he deftly dropped the last card on the little round table he called out to know what the other players wanted. Scott said he only wanted one card. Of course the question arose, Was he drawing to fill a straight or a flush? Weed applied to the dealer for two cards, and the question to be decided in his case by the others was whether he was drawing to get four of a kind or to fill a full hand, a straight, or a flush. Hedges rested on his oars. He had enough, which was of course interpreted to mean that it was anything from a straight or a full hand up to a straight flush. The drawing over, the faces of the three brightened up, and it is safe to say that never before had three lonely men in a little game held three such hands of cards. When the betting got up to $6,000 or $8,000,

WEED WANTED TO STOP,

"because," as he said, 'there is not one of us that will pay if we lose such an amount." It was not stopped, however. After a little Hedges, who had stood pat with his hand and engaged in the betting as it went around until the pot was pushed up to $150,000, called Scott. Then came the lay down, and afterward Hedges' memorable words to Weed. "This is dreadful, ain't it?" Of course, the simple-minded Weed was taken in. He had received a fine hand that would have nerved even the most timid gambler up to a strong betting point. It was four of a kind, and they were aces at that. In any ordinary game a bold better would have done as Weed did, go to the bitter end. Scott's one draw card was the corn breaker. Did it fill a full hand or a straight? was the question that ran through Weed's mind continuously, while the chips, representing thousands of dollars, were being thrown into the pot. "Of course, if it's either, my four aces will beat him," he argued, "while it isn't possible that Hedges drew better than four aces in the deal."

When the end came Weed was struck almost dumb. His four aces were worthless; Scott had drawn in the one card he took the right color and the proper number of spots to make his hand a straight flush, the only thing that would down four aces. Weed attempted to compromise by paying $2,600. He then thought the game had been honestly conducted. But Scott was obdurate and would not settle. He not only wanted the whole amount, but he wanted it then and there, or at least something in settlement that would to the payment of the debt. If he didn't get it he said he would publish Weed all over the town, where his family stood high in society. This was more than Weed could stand, and at the same time, it is said, there were other strings that were pulled to bring him to terms. Hedges told Scott to retire a minute, and he went out. Then Hedges approached Weed with smiles and offered his assistance. Of course, Hedges was also a loser of $150,000 to Scott, which made the latter's winnings on the game $300,000, but as it could not be paid, probably no notice was taken of such a trifling thing.

"This is dreadful, ain't it?" said Hedges and added: "There is only one way we can get that money back." Then he proposed to Weed to mark the cards and go at it again and clean Scott out. He took his knife and marked a card with it. "Now," said he, "we can tell in this way which are aces and which are kings, and we'll get square with him that way."

"No," said Weed, who still innocently believed he had been treated fairly and honestly; "no, if I can't play a square game, I won't play at all." The Doctor was now at his wits' end, and the victim of the plot walked out. At the bottom of the steps which led to the street he met Scott, who was still stubborn. His pleading with Scott was unavailing. Weed said to him that he'd always been his friend, and he didn't think it square to exact all of the $150,000 from him. They parted that night with no understanding about the payment of the money.

The next morning Weed met Hedges and Scott in the Hedges laboratory, where the game had been played. Scott still demanded payment of the full amount owed. Weed did not know what to do.

HE DARED NOT SEEK ADVICE

for fear of publicity, and the only way he could see out of the matter was to foot the bill and to let it be the last. Hedges stood ready to give his note in payment of his $150,000 loss. "And why shouldn't I?" mused Weed. "Probably Hedges will never pay his note, but that is no reason why I shouldn't act the part of an honorable player. Yes, that is best, and I'll do it." So Weed and Hedges both paid their debt of honor with notes.

In a few days a compromise was effected, and Scott let up on each to the amount of $30,000, he agreeing to accept $120,000 from each in payment of the debt. This Weed assented to, as did Dr. Hedges, who gave Scott his note for the full amount, and perhaps it is now among the dead man's effects. Weed paid $20,000 in cash and gave notes for the balance, which was paid with the exception of $15,000, which he refused to pay by the advice of a friend named Moore. The case finally got into the courts and Weed got some of the money.

But the poker game was a small one in comparison with the game that followed. It was a game of faro. Weed was again the loser to the enormous amount of $450,000. The game was played between Scott and Weed for the purpose of giving the latter a chance to win back his $150,000. If Weed won, it was to offset the claim against him and the two were to call it square. Weed jumped at the opportunity. The game was played in the dental laboratory, and the betting ran up very fast, until it stood $450,000 in favor of Scott. Of course, the money was never paid, but it was after this that the trouble over the poker debt got into the courts.

Scott died here at the house of his sister, and his remains were taken to Newburg for interment. He was only 32 or 33 years old.—N. Y. Sun.

She had saffron hair and wore a Jersey. She wore other articles too numerous to mention, also. Her face had a bilio-poetic expression.

"Half of it is at your disposal," said the editor, as he felt a blush stealing around behind his ears and a cold wave coming up his back to meet it.

"Then I guess I'll set down." And she set without any guess work about it.

The sun was sinking in the west. (The sun rarely sinks in the east.) The western sky was 18k. gold with rose-leaf alloy. The earth appeared as if the heavenly hosts had melted all their harps of gold and poured the liquid on wood, meadow and stubble-field.

"How beautiful is nature!" exclaimed the editor, wondering how much of her was artificial. "How beautiful is the setting sun! See how the earth is made an open gold mine, and the houses, mean and grand, given cathedral windows!"

Her lips parted, but no words came forth; however, she nested closer to him and punched him in the ribs. "Ah," thought the editor, "here is a rare soul that appreciates all the beauties about us and loves nature as the dame deserves."

The train had just reached an apple orchard. The trees were loaded with fruit, red and gold. More than this, the editor was hungry. "O my soul," exclaimed the hungry scribe, feeling that the expression was charmingly ambiguous just then, "drink in the beauties nature spreads over hill and vale with such lavish hands! See, fair maiden, those apples, hanging like spheres of gold, dyed with stolen sunset blushes; what more beautiful sight can man see when he is not gazing upon thee? No wonder it is a popular fancy that the forbidden fruit was an apple! Who could resist it! Tell me, sweet one, dost thou not love the apple and prize it above all other fruits?"

"Y-a-a-s, but they'll make you mighty sick if you eat 'em when they're green."

The editor subsided.—South and West

Six-Fingered People.

One of the finest looking negroes of Leesburg, Ga., is Andrew Reed. On each of his hands there is an extra finger about an inch long and of full size. These fingers have nails, but are entirely boneless. Andrew's father also had the extra fingers, and had three other children born in wedlock, and, to use his own words, a whole "cowpen full of outside children." These children all had the extra fingers, and a majority of them had two extra toes. Andrew has two children born out of wedlock, both of whom have the extra fingers and toes. He has six uncles, all with the same peculiarity, their families being likewise marked. When they were slaves they belonged to General Bailey, of Florida. One of them was stolen and carried to Texas, where General Bailey followed and identified him by his fingers and toes. Another negro, who was known as "African Jack," died in Webster County recently. He claimed to have been a prince in his native land, and was always very jealous of his associations. He was stolen when a well-grown boy, and sold into slavery. For the last thirty-years his home has been in Webster County, where he was always looked upon as an oracle by his race.

Henry Lamb, aged 97, who died in Fairfax County, Virginia, recently, long resided near Mount Vernon. To his dying day he asserted that the vault containing the remains of Washington had been violated and the skull carried to France, where it was sold to a firm of phrenologists. He said that the desecration was committed by the sailors of a French ship anchored in the Potomac near Mount Vernon, and that the skull which was taken away was replaced by that of a negro servant of Col. Fairfax.

A French Deputy, very careless of his attire, paid a vacation visit lately to his constituency, and at the station was seized by a traveler, who put a valise into his hands to carry for him. The Deputy took it to its destination, but declined the 5 cents tendered him, saying. "Thanks, no. I don't need that; I have the honor of being your member.'

Better than she Expected.—"Your letter received. In reply I am happy to say that Parker's Hair Balsam did much more for me than you said it would, or than I expected. My hair has not only stopped falling out, but the bald spots are all covered, and all my hair has grown thicker, softer and more lively than it was before my sickness a year ago. Thank you again and again." Extract from letters of Mr. R. W. T., West Fifty-third street, New York.

It was, no doubt, a bachelor compositor who, in setting up the toast, "Woman; without her, man would be a savage," made it read, "Woman, without her man, would be a savage."

JOHN P FERNALD, ALBERT VITTUM,
Editors and Publishers.

THE NEW York Sun has taken a herculean task upon itself, that of regulating the Cleveland Administration. It insists that instead of further yielding to the behests of the Mugwumpocrats the appointing power must utterly ignore them, and if possible drive them out of the Democratic camp. Here what they say:

Here is a specimen utterance: "Last November the Democratic party of the United States elected their candidate for the Presidency, and on the 4th day of March last he was inaugurated. He has been in office for two months, and to-day a very large portion of those who elected him do not know whether he is a Democratic President or a Mugwump. It is possible that a man may be greater than his party, but it is very certain that in this country the attempt to prove it has generally ended in disastrous failure, especially if, in order to prove it, the man goes outside of his party to distribute the precious fruits of victory (so dear to the heart of the faithful patriot) among the very enemies from whom they have been wrested. Even under the most favorable conditions, when parties rapidly alternated in the control of the Government such eccentric conduct would have produced serious discontent and insubordination; but to be guilty of it immediately after the first victory in a quarter of a century is to recklessly and contemptuously ignore one of the first principles of party organization, and to invite disaster and ruin upon him who undertakes it. It is safe, therefore, to say that if the President proceeds at his present gait he is likely to find next winter an unusually warm season, notwithstanding the time of year, and the Democratic party may find the Tuesday after the first Monday in November, A. D. 1888, a phenomenally cold day. Such contingencies are too sad to contemplate, however, and we will not dwell on them."

It may be that the President has taken a course that will in time benefit the Democratic party more than if he had followed the advice of the Sun, and the grumblers who are making the din about his ears. Most certainly he has appointed Democrats to offices about as fast as it could be done judiciously, and in some instances his selections have been very unfortunate. President Cleveland has not been making haste slowly. There were 1643 appointments during the first two months of his service and out of this large number, an average of more than 27 a day, only two Mugwumps were appointed. And yet these Mugwumps or political eunuchs, as they are mostly emasculated Republicans are delighted, and are always telling us what a glorious career there is in store for President Cleveland. On the other hand the Democrats are despondent and disgusted, and in not a few instances openly denunciatory. The average Republican is looking on and putting in a shot whenever he can find a sensitive partisan of the other side. People, like the New York Sun folks, want to see the offices filled at once and without regard to the civil service reform or the many promises made before election to the Mugwumps. And the confidential letter of Postmaster General Villas shows the Democratic heads of departments are anxious to dispell the Mugwump dream of a non-partisan civil service.

MEMORIAL DAY.

OBSERVANCE OF THE DAY IN PEABODY.

Memorial Day—long may it sacred be,
Throughout the fair domain they died to save,
Long may the patriot-rescued nation see
Her grateful sons revere our fallen brave.

Saturday, Memorial Day, a day set apart as sacred to the memory of the soldier dead all over the Union, opened in this town pleasant and warm, but with the promise of rain before the day was done. Business was as a general thing suspended, only a few establishments starting up, during the day, but in the evening the provision and other stores opened again for the evening's trade.

Early in the day the members of the Post gathered at headquarters and soon the stirring sounds of martial music announced that the services of the day had begun. The streets were lined with people who wished to give one day in the year to living as well as the dead heroes. The Post, 65 men in all, under command of Captain Geo. F. Barnes, Commander, headed by the Salem Brass Band, left the headquarters at 8.30 o'clock and marched to the Soldiers' Monument on the Square, where the usual ceremonies of decoration were gone through with, and then to the Lexington monument where the ceremony was repeated. The cars of the Lynn & Boston road were then taken for South Peabody and the graves in Cedar Grove and the Emerson Cemeteries were decorated, the impressive G. A. R. ritual services being performed. The Post then returned to the Square, the line of march being taken up down Washington, Main to the Square, down Mill and up Wallis to Main to headquarters and dismiss. The comrades in passing the residence of Comrade B. F. Woodbury on Wallis street paid him a marching salute which he returned. Dinner was served to the band in the headquarters. At 1.30 o'clock the line was reformed, with 80 comrades in line, and marched to the Town Hall, which was soon comfortably well filled and the exercises opened with a selection by the band, the reading of the Department Orders by Post Adjutant W. M. Ward. Singing by a quartette, consisting of Mrs. S. P. Chase, Miss Belle Bill, Messrs. Wilson and Taggard with Miss Nellie Bartlett as accompanist. Scripture reading by Rev. J. W. Hudson. Invocation by Rev. J. N. Shipman. Quartette, "Under the flowers our brave soldiers sleep,' Mrs. S. P. Chase as soloist. After singing by the Quartette, Commander Geo. F. Barnes arose and introduced the orator, Past Dept. Commander George H. Patch, the address be found on the inside pages. Prayer was offered by Rev. C. N. Smith. The National Hymn was read by Rev. F. W. Sprague, the audience joining in the singing. Benediction was pronounced by Rev. George Walker and the Post proceeded to the Old Friends' and Monumental cemeteries where the graves were decorated.
